MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz. —Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and there for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India viz Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails viz Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency. Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched viz Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched viz Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of intelligence from Calcutta to the 3rd of June, from Bombay to the 12th of that month, and from Hong Kong to the 16th of May, or one day later than the date of the last mail from China. The only news of importance from the Central Flowery Land is the contradiction of the report that Hankow had been taken by the rebels.

It is gratifying to learn that copious showers of rain have fallen in the Upper Provinces, particularly in the districts suffering from last year's drought. There is, therefore, good reason to hope that there will be no further failure of the crops, and that peace and plenty will once The Rev. J. Long, a missionary more dismore fall to the lot of the unfortunate dwellers in those parts. The munificent charity of the British people will now suffice to meet every demand, and to relieve to the fullest extent the wants of the starving population.

Mr. Laing, we regret to learn, will be compelled to return to Europe, for the recovery of his health. He was expected very shortly in Calcutta, and was to take his departure for home in the first steamer in June. It is also rumoured that Sir William Denison has resigned the Governorship of Madras, but we cannot vouch for the accuracy of this state-

A very characteristic affray appears to have taken place in the little independent state of Bhawulpore. The Nawab being displeased with his minister, the latter fled from the coming storm and took refuge in a fortified house. Guns, however, were brought to bear upon his asylum, which was soon rendered untenable. Summoning courage from despair Ahmed Khan, with his two brothers and a friend, sallied forth sword in hand, but were cut down and slain fighting to the last. Some slight disturbances, too, are spoken of as occurring in Ulwar, which will probably call for the interference of the Supreme Government. A more serious matter is the rupture between the Nizam and his sagacious minister Salar Jung. There is no doubt that it was mainly owing to the wise counsels and vigorous administration of this minister that the Nizam was kept faithful to his allegiance to his suzerain. It is consequently very improbable that Lord Canning will sanction any change of policy that may imperil the cordiality of the mutual relations of his own Government and the Nizam. Pending the receipt of instructions from the Viceroy, Colonel Davidson, the Resident, has declined to hold any intercourse with the durbar.

The volunteering of the late Company's Europeans has been in the highest degree satisfactory. Not above five hundred men and officers of the whole force have declined to accept general service, and even of this small number not a few afterwards joined the main body of their comrades. Had the same conciliatory mode been pursued in transferring the European regiments from the Company to the Crown, we should never have heard of that so-called mutiny. However, it is pleasant to observe that the Government has benefited by its late painful and costly experience.

Lord 'Cauning, it is said, proposes to pay a farewell visit to the North Western Provinces tinguished for his virulent hatred of the European planters than for his Christian charity, has translated into English a Hindoo drama, entitled Nil Durpun, or the Mirror of Indigo Planting, which revives all the old stories of extortion, violence, and oppres-sion formerly attributed to the planters. This wretched performance has been taken up by the local Government, and copies of it forwarded by the Secretariat to various persons both in India and in this country. So completely are the exaggerations of this insolent pletely are the exaggerations of this insolent and libellous production accepted by the authorities that it has actually been circulated free of postage, as "on her Majesty's service only." Assuming that the facts of the case are as here stated, it is clear that the Bengal Government must have renounced all idea of holding the balance even between planters and ryots, and of administering equal justice to all. The matter, however, will certainly not be allowed to rest where it is now; and we trust that searching and persevering questions on the subject will be put to the Secretary of State for India, in his place in Parliament.

Colonel Durand, we observe, has left London for Marseilles, en route to take up his new ap-pointment as Foreign Secretary to the Supreme Government.

The terms of the new Indian Loan are given in our advertising columns. The amount required is £4,000,000 in a 5 per cent. stock, not redeemable until the year 1870. Tenders, which must not be for sums of less than £500. are to be sent in before twelve o'clock on the of the public, they will be received at the Bank of England instead of the India Office in Victoria-street. A deposit of 2 per cent. will have to be made, and it is arranged that tenders at a price including fractions of Is ether ders at a price including fractions of 1s. other than 6d. will not be accepted.

THE DRAWING-ROOM.

Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Countess Canning, on the 24th of May, held the first Drawing room of the Empire of India in honour of her Majesty's birth-day. At nine o'clock their Excellencies, attended by the personal staff of the Viceroy, received those ladies and gentlemen having the right of private entrée.

The following address was presented from the bishop, archdeacon, and clergy of the diocese of Calcutta, on the occasion of the birth-day of her Majesty Queen Victoria:-

To his Excellency the Earl Canning, c.c.b., Viceroy and Governor-general of India. 24th May, 1861.

"My LORD,-We, her Majesty's faithful subjects, the bishop, archdeacon, and clergy of the diocese of Calcutta, beg permission to approach your Excellency with the assurance of our loyalty and devotion to her Majesty, and our heartfelt congratulations on this auspicious return of her birth-day.

"We are aware that on this occasion her Majesty's enjoyment of the great and unusual share of domestic prosperity with which she is so largely blessed by God is clouded by the recent loss of her who so carefully watched over her Majesty's childhood and youth, and has been permitted to see all her best wishes for her daughter's happiness, and for the glory of her reign, so amply fulfilled.

"But under this bereavement it must be a consolation to her Majesty to know that the feelings of respectful loyalty and genuine affection with which all true Englishmen regard herself were extended to her illustrious mother, and that in our gratitude for the benefits which English society has derived from her Majesty's influence and example we do not forget by whom she was trained and fitted for the great office to which she has been called.

"Her Majesty will learn with gratification from your Excellency of the tranquillity which prevails in her vast Indian empire, and will rejoice that the successful measures adopted by your Excellency's Government to extinguish the late unhappy rebellion have been followed by measures which bid fair to be no less successful for bringing to an end the financial difficulties and embarrassments which were its necessary consequence. We earnestly hope that, by God's blessing, your Excellency may now be able to complete those various schemes of improvement for which, in spite of many difficulties, your administration has been distinguished, and which we believe to be most important, not only on general grounds, but as having a direct bearing on the spiritual work to which we ourselves are especially called.
"We believe that English commerce, English railways, English literature, English law, and much more, English truth and benevolence, are the pioneers and forerunners of the Gospel, bearing witness of the light, and preparing the way of the Lord; while, on the other hand, we believe no less firmly, that without the true light and the spirit of God to quicken and inform, material and intellectual civilisation must ever be imperfect and productive of evil as well as of good.

"To the picture of prosperity and hope for India, on which we believe that we are mainly justified in dwelling, there is one most painful exception-the famine which has visited our fellow-subjects in the Upper Provinces. Yet even this grievous visitation is not without its brighter features. It has called forth both in India and in England a truly Christian spirit of active and selfdenying benevolence. We rejoice in this on every ground, not only for the actual mitigation of suffering which follows from it, but because it displays so impressively the power and influence of Christian principle. There can be no more striking example of the spirit which pervades the New Testament, and of the actual letter of some of its precepts, than that the inhabitants of those provinces, which four years ago were the scenes of

of the slain.

" It is our earnest prayer that in this the true spirit of brotherly love, so remarkably called forth by this great calamity, all animosities may pass away, and that thus another hinderance may be removed in the accomplishment of that great mission of civilization and improvement by which alone the present position of England in India can be justified."

HIS EXCELLENCY'S REPLY.

"My Lord Bishop, Mr. Archdeacon, and Reverend Gentlemen,-It will be my agreeable duty to transmit to the Queen's Government for submission to her Majesty the address which you have presented to me.

"I venture to assure you confidently that her Majesty will graciously accept this expression of your respectful duty and sympathy.

"I thank you for the congratulations and hopeful wishes which the address conveys in regard to the present aspect of affairs in her Majesty's Indian Empire.

"I heartily concur in the sentiment to which your lordship has given utterance, that in the administration of that empire truth on the part of the Civil Government to its engagements and obligations, and benevolence towards the people committed to its charge will, even more than measures of material advancement, avail for the ultimate benefit of India.

"Your Lordship has spoken of the famine by which a large part of Upper India has been and still is sorely afflicted; I trust that, by the mercy of Providence, this visitation will soon have reached its term, and that the sufferings which have been caused by it, and which must follow it, will be found to admit of large alleviation through the active liberality of the community in India, and through the magnificent generosity of England.

" Let me add that in this, as in other trials to which during the last four years British India has been subjected, the earnestness, patience, wise judgment, and Christian charity of the Ministers of the Church of England have been a substantial strength to the Government, and an example to all men.

CHUNAR AND ITS INVALIDS.

Few places in India so well repay a visit by the stranger as Chunar. Built upon an old grey rock which juts out into the Ganges some sixteen miles above Benares, its fort has not unfrequently been compared by the imaginative traveller to Stirling Castle, with the winding Forth at its base, and to the Castle of Edinburgh, which towers up over the city, and is seen at sunset in bold relief against the sky. Few strongholds in India have so many associations, or can present to the visitor so many "lions." It is emphatically the State prison, the Bastille of the British Government, There Trimbukii Dainglia, the head of the Mahratta confederacy in 1818, was imprisoned. From its heavilybolted apartments escaped in the disguise of the meanest of her own menials the Ranee Chunda of Lahore, who, after her lengthened exile in Nepaul, has just sailed for England with her son, the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, and will probably end her strange career in the arms of the Christian Church. Moghuls and Pathans, Humaion and Shere Khan. the Nawabs of Oude and English generals have fought for the possession of the Fort, till in 1760 it surrendered to Carnac, and eight years after became our chief arsenal and artillery depot for the North-Western Provinces. As a fortified place it has long ceased to have any importance, and is now known as the station for the invalid soldiers of the European army in Northern India. Not the least attractive sight to the visitor is the families of these invalids. Although the station is one of the hottest in India, it is not unhealthy, and in the cold season the European settlement outside of the Fort resembles more an English village than any other part of India not in the Hills. English cottages are everywhere visible. and the breeze that blows up the Ganges or from the neighbouring hills, the outcrop of the Vindoutrage and murder, should now be rescued from hyas, gives to the many children that are ever India.

famine and death by the countrymen and kinsfolk | playing about the hue of health. In the good old days before the Company's army became extinct, Chunar was known as the great place for wives for European soldiers.

But now that the amalgamation of the armies has been effected, Chunar must cease to have a history. It seems strange that, with so many sanitaria in the hills, the fort should have been so long the head-quarters of the invalid establishment, consisting of two companies of artillery and two of infantry. Now the fate of the invalid soldiers must be decided, and they are speculating whether the amalgamation scheme, when its details have been settled, will offer them any of the advantages which their comrades in the effective branches of the service have certainly secured. Their position is peculiar. Many are, or will shortly be, entitled to their pension, and, if they desire it, a passage to England. But the majority do not care to return home. One has left it under circumstances which render his return inconvenient or unpleasant. Another has been so many years in India that all his friends are gone. A third has formed relation-ships in India which render it desirable or necessary for him to remain. Those who have married native, Eurasian, or even English wives born in the country, would find them perfectly helpless in England. As the rule at present stands all who are ready for their pension may elect to remain in India or to go to England, and in the latter case they are supplied with a free passage. But if they wish to remove to any part of India they must do so at their own expense.

We would recommend the complete transfer of the men who constitute the Invalid Estalishment to Landour, Murree, Darjeeling, or one of the Himalayan sanitaria, and the offer to all whose pension is due of the £18 or £20 which would be paid for their passage to England. The rest should be supplied with small grants of land as equivalents to the bounty which has been given to the men on the effective list. Most of them have been invalided on account of wounds or injuries received in the service of their country. The measure would be economical, for the expense of the Invalid Establishment would be extinguished, so far as the men are concerned; and as the number of invalids is small, the amount of land required would be trifling. The experiment could thus be made of establishing a small semi-military colony in the Hills. Two years ago, Colonel Cox, in command of the Murree Depot, applied to the Punjab Government, on behalf of two time-expired soldiers, for a grant of two acres of land to each within the Sanitarium. It was found impossible to give one of the men the land he wanted, but the other is described as having built a house and established a piggery, so as to become the supplier of the whole community with pork and poultry. This application at once led Sir Robert Montgomery to make inquiries "as to This application at once led Sir the feasibility of the scheme for establishing colonies of a class of independent, well-conducted, and industrious Europeans, which his Honour regarded as far from antagonistic to native interests, whilst to the British Government it would plainly constitute an element of [strength." The result proved that the extent of land available was very limited, owing to the rights which the early settlement officers allowed the peasantry to claim over waste land. After receiving the opinions of all the Hill officials, Sir Robert Montgomery expressed his willingness to render all the aid practicable to parties desicous of obtaining land for the purpose of settlement. The invalid soldiers would exactly meet the requisites which he considers essential to successa little capital and sufficient acquentance with the language and people. The sowing importance of tea-planting offers a new field for the employment of steady and intelligent Europeans.

The Government of India, we submit, have at present an admirable opportunity for testing, without expense, the feasibility of semi-military colonies in the Hills of India. The permanent establishment of 70,000 English soldiers in the country gives the question a new importance.-Friend of

THE LATE MR. GEORGE BARNES.

In our last issue we briefly chronicled the untimely demise of Mr. George Barnes, the Commissioner of the Cis Sutlei States and the Foreign Secretary to the Government of India, an officer of rising merit, from whom great things were expected, and who would, had he been spared, have more than fulfilled those expectations. India is indeed the land where the lessons of mortality are most vividly presented to every re-flecting mind. In social life, the young, the beautiful and the accomplished are torn by death from the friends they had cherished, from the society they had adorned. In political life, the brave, the learned, and the eloquent are snatched away by the same dread hand, in the very midst of their usefulness, in the very zenith their fame. In this land also, interests of so diverse and communities so scatare tered, that meritorious individuals may pass before their merits had been fully appreciated by the mass of their countrymen; so that in this vast body politic the right hand hardly knows when the left hand has been lopped off. It is, however, the special duty of public journalists not only to mark the progress of rising talent, but also to vivify the remembrance of departed worth: to record the example of the dead for the instruction of the living. With this view we shall sketch the main features in the character and career of the late Mr. Barnes.

Passing over the earlier years of Mr. Barnes services, which commenced in 1840, we find him employed as a settlement officer in the Delhi ter-There he grounded himself in that knowledge of agricultural affairs and of landed tenures which afterwards afforded him the means of conferring benefits upon the people. He was in 1846-47 offered the post of Secretary to the Revenue Board at Agra. But being by nature attached to active work in a bracing climate, he preferred to obtain charge of the Hill district of Kangra, in the territory newly ceded to the British Government after the Sutlej campaign. The affairs of that district he continued to administer for years, with a success that has never been surpassed even in the annals of Punjab administration. With a practical eye that saw through and through the mists and mazes of unreasonable technicality. with a sense of justice that would be satisfied with nothing short of substantial equity in every case, he performed his judicial work on that patriarchal principle which is so acceptable to the natives of India. With a local knowledge that penetrated to every hamlet and valley in those remote tracts; with a sympathy that reached all the feelings, customs, and traditions of the rustic population; with linguistic acquirements that placed at his command all the facts concerning the resources of the district, he effected a thirty years' settlement of the land revenue in a manner that lightened the burdens of the people, strengthened their tenures, augmented the value of their lands, and supplied an incentive to their industry and enterprise. Indeed, the popularity of the Kangra settlement is celebrated in the Punjab; and bearded chiefs have been heard to say that its author will be remembered by the people for several generations. His published report of the settlement is a remarkable document. It is not only a repository of official statistics and of practical details; but it also abounds in graphic historical narration, in elaborate delineation of character, and in picturesque topographical description. The word-painting of the matchless scenery of the Kangra valley—the smiling fertility of the lowlands on the one hand, the towering grandeur of the snow capped Himalaya on the other-as given in that report, may take its place with the best passages in Anglo-Indian literature but the entire report evinced that mastery of language for which he was so well known among his contemporaries. He was indeed an adept at a variety of diction, ranging from the rude dialects familiar with mountain tribes, to the sonorous stately periods of the British Essayists.

During these years Mr. Barnes formed an abiding friendship with John Lawrence; and became a leading member of that school of also recognised by Lord Dalhousie, and he was made Commissioner first of the Lahore Division, and then of the Cis-Sutlej States in succession to Mr. Edmonstone-these being the two most laborious and onerous divisions in the Punjab. To the duties of the Cis-Sutlej States is annexed the political charge of the protected Sikh Chiefs, among whom the principal are the Maharajah of Puttiala and the Rajahs of Jheend and Nabha; and also the charge of the Simla Hill chiefs. In the management of these chiefs Mr. Barnes had full scope for the exercise of his rare knowledge and appreciation of native character and customs. They had been for half a century the faithful allies and adherents of the British Government. Throughout this period they had been fortunate in possessing the guidance and advice of many eminent British officers, such as Ochterlony, Wade, Clerk, Broadfoot, Henry Lawrence, Mackeson, Edmonstone and Campbell. The names of these officers are fresh in the remembrances of the chiefs. To that list of grateful recollections there will be now assuredly added the name of Barnes.

When the mutiny of 1857 burst over Upper India, Mr. Barnes was at his post in the Cis-Sutlei States. He at once offered to proceed as political officer with the force that was marching for the capture of Delhi. But Sir John Lawrence wisely detained him at Umballa for more important work. Umballa was the centre of those districts which then stood as a breakwater between the Punjab proper and that flood of rebellion that was sweeping over Hindostan and the Delhi territory. On that breakwater Mr. Barnes and his officers took their stand, to stem the advance of the enemy in the front, to maintain order throughout the territory in the rear. The raging tide came surging up, and dashed against the barriers of British energy and fortitude. In many places indeed those barriers were overtopped, and the waters of strife spread over portions of the districts behind. Yet on the whole, external order, if not tranquillity, was preserved throughout the Cis-Sutlej States during that perilous time.

But besides the preservation of order within British jurisdiction, there were other arduous duties then devolving on the commissioner. The chiefs of all grades were to be held firm to their allegiance. The contingents of Puttiala, Jheend, and Nabha were to be called out, organised, and despatched on service, some to guard the lines of military communication, others to join the forces battling on the ridge before Delhi. Those gal lant forces were no more than adequate for the siege itself. The country in the rear had to be kept open by the Cis-Sutlej authorities. By them was arranged the transit of the convoys, of the stores, materiel, and munitions despatched by Sir J. Lawrence from the Punjab. By them was furnished a large part of the escort of those siege trains which ultimately decided the fate of the rebellious city. After the capture of Delhi, Sir A. Wilson publicly acknowledged in the warmest terms the services rendered to the army by Mr. Barnes and his officers. On the restoration of peace, when the chiefs received the rewards of their loyalty, they openly declared that the success of their exertions was mainly owing to the energetic persuasion and the encouraging counsels of Mr. Barnes. When honours were distributed by the Crown among the civil servants who distinguished themselves in the Indian mutinies, Mr. Barnes received the Companionship of the Bath.

Recently Lord Canning most wisely selected Mr. Barnes for the distinguished post of Foreign Secretary to the Government of India. On that occasion the departing Commissioner carried with him the good wishes and high hopes of a large circle of friends, and the publicly expressed regrets of Sir Robert Montgomery. That Mr. Barnes would, had he lived, have fully justified Lord Canning's selection none can doubt. From his antecedents also the public anticipated that he would prove an earnest supporter to the cause of financial economy. But after a few days' residence in Calcutta he was stricken by the dysentery so prevalent in Bengal, and was forced to make the Punjab what it is. His merits were | disease increased in strength and virulence; and after one week of mortal sickness he died at Hazareebagh. His bones are laid on the southwest frontier of Bengal. His memory and his fame belong to the land of the five rivers .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE N.W. FRONTIER.-The most readable articles in the successive numbers of Chesson and Woodhall's Miscellany, a monthly magazine published in Bombay, are those on the Punjab. In the May number the writer, discussing our military position in the province, estimates the fighting tribes on the frontier as able to send into the field 135,000 men, consisting of those on the Huzara frontier, and near the Indus north of Peshawur, Swat and its independencies, Momunds, Afreedees, Orukzyes, and tribes on Kohat frontier, Wuzeerees, Sheoranees, tribes in Dehra Ismael Khan district, and Belooch tribes on Dehra Ismael Khan border. The warlike tribes within our territories he estimates as able to raise 80,000 men. They are Turnoulies, other tribes of Huzara, Eusufzyes, Khutuks, Bungashes, and those of Derajat, in British territory. These are the neighbours who have cost us so many expeditions. For the first time since Peshawur was ours the commissioner has been able to report that all was quiet in that division. The writer, who seems to be a soldier, advocates the withdrawal of the irregular force from the civil authorities and its subordination to the Commander-in-Chief. is impossible, and would prove ruinous. Political considerations alone must direct military arrangements on the frontier. But there is wisdom in Sir Bartle Frere's suggestion that Sind and the Punjab should form one military command. The whole frontier, from Peshawur to the Point of Kamara, should be protected by one force directed by one political authority.-Friend of India.

THE LATE M. SCHLAGENTWEIT,-The Calcutta Gazette publishes the final result of an investigation by Mr. T. H. Thornton, the Personal Assistant to the Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab, into all the circumstances attending the death of the late Adolphe Schlagentweit. In a word, it is this :- The deceased, attended by his Jew servant Murad and two others, arrived at Yarkund, within the confines of Chinese Tartary, on his way to Kokand. He found Yarkund held by Dil Khan, one of a race of Syud chieftans, who, under the guise of religion, make periodical raids into the Chinese territory. This chief received him well. A successful attack of the Chinese on Dil Khan's camp led Schlagentweit to leave for Kashgar, which was then held by Wali Khan, a still more powerful Syud chieftain, who had wrested the town from the Chinese. There he was stripped of his property and arms, and on remonstrating with the chief was summarily beheaded. Of the three servants one was sold as a slave, but escaped to Peshawur; another was released and went to Kokand, where he is now, and Murad, after turning Mussulman, to save himself from death, was released by the Chinese when they recaptured The statements of the three servants Kashgar. agree, and it is certain they did not behave treacherously to their master. Murad received a Promissory Note for Rs. 3,600 from his master, dated 3rd July, 1857. He assigns as a reason for his not presenting the note for payment at once -the current report in Central Asia that the British rule in India had been overthrown. Murad has received from the Punjab authorities the sum of Rs. 3,600 and a reward of Rs. 200. Colonel Irby is thanked for the spirit with which he penetrated beyond Leh in pursuit of information. INDUS FLOTILLA .- The Lahore Chronicle mentions that the traffic of the Indus Flotilla is very limited. During the six months from the 1st of November to the 31st of April, 1861, the Chenaub, Indus, and Jhelum each made three trips, and the administrators which has largely contributed to retrace his steps northwards. ... 28,26,000 31,60,000 THE CALCUTTA TRADES' ASSOCIATION have petitioned the Lieutenant-governor to appoint a commission to organise an efficient municipal administration for Calcutta. They point to the fact that the city has greatly increased in population and wealth during the last few years, and that two of the present municipal commissioners have onerous duties to perform in their own immediate official capacities. The Bengal Government has promptly consented to appoint a commission in which the Trades' Association and the Chamber of Commerce will be represented. The state of Calcutta has never been so filthy, nor the amount of disease in the undrained native town so great as now. Rivers of mud meander between the great houses of rich baboos, and half the native population sleep near and over them. Now is the time to press for the creation of a regular mayoralty, or town council, elected by the ratepayers, in all the large European cities of India. Still no honorary magistrates have been appointed in the regulation districts of Bengal.

PENSION TO THE RANGE CHUNDRA.-The Government of India has sanctioned a pension of Rs. 2.500 a month or Rs. 30,000 per annum to Rance Chundra, the mother of Maharajah Dulleep Sing—the amount to be paid every month to her agents in Calcutta during her absence from India.

ULWAR.-The territory is now in great confusion, owing to the Neemrana declaring himself independent. A large force has been sent by the Durbar to punish him, and bring him to his senses. The young Rajah's ambition is detrimental to his moral and mental improvement. The agent to the Governor-general has brought to the notice of the Supreme Government the necessity of a well educated and responsible native to take charge of the young Rajah's edu-

VOLUNTEERING FOR GENERAL SERVICE.—The following statement, exhibiting the number of officers and men of the different branches of the service in the Bengal army who have made their election for local service, general service, or for the staff corps, is prepared from official records up to the 18th May, and is published in the Mo-fussilite of the 28th. Of the artillery 172 officers and 3,000 men have elected for general service; 8 officers and 276 men for local service; and 304 men have taken their discharge. had volunteered from the Royal Artillery in 1859. Of the Engineers, only 1 officer has elected for local service; 79 Sappers have volunteered for general service, and 7 for local service. Of the cavalry, 62 officers and 1,324 men have volunteered for general service, 17 officers and 23 men for local service; and 92 men have taken their discharge. Of the infantry 92 officers and 2,618 men have volunteered for general service; 102 officers and 88 men for local service; 47 officers have elected for the staff corps, and 3 men have taken their discharge, making a grand total as follows: - General service, 326 officers, 7,721 men; local service, 128 officers, 394 men; staff, 47 officers, 394 men; discharge, 47 officers, 399 men.

" NIL DURPAN."—At present the indigo planters and the Calcutta press, chiefly the Englishman and Hurkaru, are very wroth about a publication entitled "Nil Durpan, or Indigo Looking-glass," circulated through means of the Post-office under the official seal and frank of the Bengal Secretariat. The committee of the Landholders and Commercial Association of British India have addressed an official letter to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, requesting to be informed whether it was with the sanction and authority of Government that the said pamphlet has been published and circulated. The brochure is said to contain a most foul and malicious libel on indigo planters, calculated to excite sedition and breaches of the peace. Mr. Seton Karr is alleged to have avowed that it was by his order the pamphlet was circulated. The "Nil Durpan" was originally published in Bengallee in the form of a drama, probably by a native, if not by a mis-It was subsequently translated into English. Several copies of the pamphlet were sent up to the Government of Bengal, who transmitted a few of them to England for circulation amongst the members of the India Council, and the rest was distributed amongst the officers in the indigo districts, and some of the Mofussil newspapers.

NUSSEEREE BATTALION.—The right wing of the Nusseeree battalion is being disbanded at Jutog; a large proportion have taken their discharge and are about to return peaceably to their homes. The left wing will be disbanded at Umballa, where it is at present encamped. It is understood that Jutog will be converted into a sanatarium for the more sickly men of the regiments stationed at Umballa and in the hills. No definite orders. however, have been received from the Commander-in-chief. But, in the meanwhile, a small party of men, under command of an officer of the 2nd battalion of Rifles, will occupy the station.

FUTTYGHUR, May 22.—Last Sunday the body of a soldier belonging, I believe, to the rifle bri gade battalion, and who was travelling by bullock train, was brought in, and as it was within the military jurisdiction, a Court of Inquest was held, and the doctor of H.M.'s 42nd highlanders gave his evidence that the man was murdered on the road. The corpse was interred in a proper manner, and the case has been made over to the civil authorities. There is one thing peculiar in the evidence, viz., that out of the several witnesses examined before the Court of Inquest some deposed they saw the man's death at six P.M. and others at four P.M. These men were with the train all along. It will be rather surprising to learn that a body of some fifty men from the Oude district have suddenly made their appearance on the Grand Trunk road; during the day they disperse themselves, and in the night collect together with the intention of committing robberies; information has been brought that these men locate themselves near dense topes of trees at night, and whenever any waggons containing valuables, in the shape of bales of cloth, &c., come by they throw stones at the men in charge, in order to frighten them away, so that they may rob, but to this time nothing has occurred. To strengthen the post the superinten-dent of police has sent an extra number of men from the reserve police force, with instructions should they show themselves and offer resistance to fire into them. I would warn travellers how they travel during the night, especially ladies going to the hills; let them provide themselves with swords and revolvers, and not indulge in too much sleep whilst they are passing that portion of the road. Rumour has it these are the discharged Fandies; probably they belong to the gang of men who have committed so many murders in Oonao and Oude.

Delhi, May 23 .- The breaking up of the 4th N. I. is going on very quietly; the men appear satisfied with the provision made for them, and the poor officers are the great sufferers. natives have a report to the effect that as all the cut-throats are coming back from the Andamans, they will of course bring with them the King of Delhi from Burmah, and restore him to his ancestral throne; but to invest the ceremony with greater importance, and by way of making up for all the indignities unavoidably forced upon the aged monarch, the "Institute" now in course of erection is in reality a palace preparing for his Majesty! They will be astonished at sunrise tomorrow to hear a royal salute fired from the new battery at the Lahore gate of his Majesty's former residence, in honour of her Majesty's birth day.

DETECTION OF A MURDERER.—The murderer of Major Burton, of Kotah, was curiously discovered a short time ago by one of the civil officers of Lucknow, Mr. Bickers. A man, named Abdool Raheem, was sent in by the police charged with theft. Before Mr. Bickers he confessed the crime, but pleaded in extenuation that he was driven to it by want, and that he was, moreover, a Christian, and had been baptised by Major Burton. This seemed rather odd; and Mr. Bicker's suspicions were further aroused by the affected regrets of the prisoner at the death of Major Burton. Upon this Mr. Bicker's sent the prisoner to Oonao, where Burton's widow and son are living. They instantly recognised him as Salabut Khan, who, at the time of the major's death, was in the employ of the Kotah Vakeel, who was then in constant attendance at the Kotah Residency. Mrs. Burton and her son, from the recollection of her husband, entertain no doubt of his guilt. Thus, one after another, the deluded men who took part in the cold-blooded murders of '57 and '58 are being gradually hunted out and brought to their account.

MAJOR BOILEAU, District Superintendent of Police, has sent in his resignation, and retires from the service altogether. We believe it to be his intention to settle down in Oude, having taken over from Captain John Hearsey the estate which was the other day granted to him by Government, consequent on his retirement from the service. Captain Hearsey also has resigned his Honorary Assistant Commissionership. We believe it is his intention to leave the country and go home.

THE NANA'S JEWELS .- The Sub-Treasurer of Fort William lately inquired of the Government of India as to the future disposal of the jewels belonging to the arch-rebel Nana, which have been lying in his custody for some time past. above-mentioned jewels consist of diamonds, rubies, emeralds and pearls; gold and silver plate and utensils; dress pieces set with precious stones and pearls, and valued at immense sums of money. As the aforesaid articles have been lying in the Treasury godowns for a long time past, and some of them, such as the dress pieces, may probably be spoiled, early orders were required for their disposal.

ARRACAN.—The province of Arracan has been hitherto known to the commercial world as a great rice exporting country. Mr. J. P. Langlois, who was for some time settled in Bombay, points out In the Arracan News the capabilities of the province for growing cotton, and offers to assist any one who will undertake the cultivation. plant is, he says, indigenous in Arracan. Langlois considers that the lower parts are not too wet for cotton, and that the Gossypium Retigiosum, which flourishes in the Mauritius and Seychelles, is best adapted to the soil. When the Dacca muslin trade flourished, the native manufacturers, it appears, derived much of their supply from Burmah.

LIEUTENANT COCKBURN, of the battery of Royal Artillery now at Raneegunge, and recently returned from service in China, is appointed aidede-camp to Brigadier-general St. G. D. Showers, c.B., commanding the Presidency division.

TIMBER AGENCY.-The Government of India has directed the Madras authorities to establish a timber purchasing agency in Rangoon, making the Assistant Commissary General in Pegu the agent. At present a large number of Government officers there are bidding against each other, on behalf of the Commissariat and Ordnance of Madras, the Bombay Dockyard, the Engineer Departments, and the Naval Yard Rangoon, and so run up the prices. A large portion of the Moulmein teak timber is supplied to the Admiralty in England, at rates very much below those paid by the Indian Government, through Messrs. Findlay and Co. there. Henceforth the Pegu Commissariat will receive orders for the supply of timber from the various authorities in all parts of India. The Commissariat will have nothing to do with the felling of the trees which will be left to the Forest Department of European capitalist; nor with the conservancy of the Forests, which will be left to Dr. Brandis, the able superintendent. The officers will purchase in open market and dispose of the timber to the various departments. This is another of the many reforms due to the Military Finance Commission.

A DICTIONARY OF THE TAMIL LANGUAGE is being compiled by Dr. Winslow. A letter in the Madras Times describes the history of this important work. The first collection of materials was made nearly thirty years ago by the Rev. Joseph Knight, an American missionary. In 1838 Mr. Knight left the country. Dr. Winslow took up the work about the year 1843. The Lexicon is in no measure founded on Dr. Rottler's dictionary, though much indebted to that work. It will contain nearly twice as many primitive words and a proportionate number of derivatives. The difficulty lies in raising funds for the expense of printing The estimated cost is Rs. 14,000 which has been divided into seventy shares of Rs. 200 each, entitling the holders to ten copies for each share. About twenty shares have been taken up, in addition to which the Madras Government have subscribed for 100 copies at Rs. 20 each. A sum of Rs. 8,000 is still wanted.

SIR COLLEY HARMAN SCOTLAND, the newly appointed Chief Justice of Madras, arrived at that Presidency in the P. and O. Company's mail steamer Candia, on the evening of the 23rd of May, and landed next morning. The Candia made the run from Galle to Madras in forty-eight hours.

MR. ARTHUR M. RITCHIE, of the Supreme Court Bar of Madras, has been appointed registrar of that court, in succession to the late Mr. Searle.

SIR G. R. CLERK.-His Excellency the Governor intends to travel about the Deccan during the monsoon, for the purpose of personally observing the condition and labours of the agricultural peasantry, or ryots. The monsoon is the busiest season of the year with that important class of the community. It is then that they are to be seen in real life. That season is the very one, however, in which they are not seen by people in power. Officers in civil appointments have the custom of resorting during the monsoon to some one of the great centres of amusement, Bombay or Poona, and of spending the season in peacocking, dancing, singing, scandal, and other fashionable arts. His Excellency wishes to know by personal experience whether it is impossible for public servants to continue at their work in the districts during the rains. His Excellency will, probably, discover that the rainy season, in the Deccan, is the most favourable for moving about and performing public duties: certainly the most favourable for forming an acquaintance with the condition, labours, and wants of the rural population. In the Deccan there is only from twenty to twenty-five inches of rain during the monsoon, and it falls generally at night, leaving the days cool and bright .- Bombay Gazette.

SUICIDE OF LIEUTENANT GOULD. inquisition in the case of the melancholy suicide of Mr. Nathaniel Gould, late a lieutenant in her Majesty's 3rd Dragoon Guards, who shot himself with a fowling piece whilst residing at the British Hotel in the Fort, three days after his arrival here from Mhow, was held on the 29th of May. There is little in this evidence from which the actual state of the deceased gentleman's mind shortly before his committing the fatal act can be gleaned; but a letter to his address from his father, which was found in his desk, was read to the jury, from which it was elicited that he had been for some time past in a desponding state of mind, in consequence of some differences with his commanding officer, that he was desirous of leaving the army, and that he had some intention of emigrating to the colonies, and there turning farmer or merchant. His father earnestly advised his abandoning these intentions, and strongly recommended him on no account to throw up his commission, and instanced the case of one of his (deceased's) uncles, who, in consequence of his having rashly entered upon a course of life for which he was altogether unsuited, had met with serious disappointments and losses, and eventually died insane. The deceased appears to have sold out of the army before receiving this letter, and he had come down to Bombay with the intention of proceeding to England, when he terminated his existence in the manner above stated. A letter to his address from a gentleman in the Bombay Civil Service was also produced and read, stating that he had placed at the deceased's credit in the hands of a mercantile firm at Bombay the by the jury was that "The deceased destroyed himself whilst in a state of temporary insanity." Bombay Gazette.

ZANZIBAR.-Lieut.-colonel C. P. Rigby, her Majesty's consul and British agent at Zanzibar, in a letter dated 14th September, 1860, reported his having sent a present of a scarlet robe and six yards of scarlet cloth to each of the two chiefs on the Lake of Nyassa, in acknowledgment of their friendly and hospitable treatment of the late Dr. Albrecht Roscher. In a letter dated the 17th April last, he further reported, for the information of his Excellency the Hon, the Governor in Council, that the attempt of Colonel the Baron Vander Decken, who kindly took charge of the presents, to reach the Lake of Nyassa, had proved unsuccessful, and he had returned to Zanzibar and delivered back the presents to Colonel Rigby. He was therefore waiting for the first safe opportunity to forward the presents to the two chiefs. The Baron Vander Decken had arrived within fifteen days' journey of the Lake of Nyassa, and had found the inhabitants everywhere friendly, when his head guide, a native of Keelwa, by name Abdalla bin Saeed, suddenly announced his determination to proceed no further, and as all the porters with the Baron were the slaves of this man, he ordered them also not to remain with the Baron, who was in consequence obliged to return to Keelwa, with the loss of nearly all his baggage, which was plundered by the guide and his slaves. Colonel Rigby then goes on to say that "the River Rovooma, which falls into the sea in about 10.25 degrees south latitude, is now being explored by Dr. Livingstone, in the new steamer Pioneer, recently constructed for the use of his Expedition. Dr. Livingstone is accompanied by Bishop Mackenzie and some of the members of the Oxford and Cambridge Mission to Central Africa. It is Dr. Livingstone's intention, after proceoding up the river in the steamer as far as is practicable, to endeavour to reach the Lake of Nyassa by land. He is taking up presents for the two chiefs who, treated Dr. Roscher so kindly. Commander Oldfield, R.N., commanding H.M. Ship Lyra, accompanied the Pioneer about forty miles up the river Rovooma; he states that the inhabitants are very friendly, and the country through which the river flows extremely rich and populous.

THE BHATTIA MAHARAJAS .- The Rast Goftar contains an account of the rites performed in the temple of the Bhattia Maharajas. The temple is divided into six parts, one for the residence of the Maharaj, and the others for the worship of the idols. There are at present six or seven Maharajas in Bombay, each with a separate temple. Some of the ceremonies are of the most disgusting character. The poor devotees drink the water which drips from the Maharaj after he emerges from the bath, and eat the remnants of his meals. When a man is dying the Maharaja puts his foot on his breast to free him from his sins, and receives for his blessing from ten to one thousand rupees. The native writer is horrified at such practices, and asks, "In what Puran are such practices recommended or sanctioned? No Shastre does so, and the world therefore sees plainly now the Maharajas practise deceit."

MR. W. A. RITCHIE.-We regret to have to announce the sudden death, at the Presidency, of Mr. Walter Adolphus Ritchie, of the Bombay Civil Service, deputy commissioner of customs, salt, and opium, northern division, which melancholy event occurred on the morning of the 28th of May, at his residence at Breach Candy, to which he had only removed the evening before.

MR. JAMES TAYLOR .- It is with regret we have to announce the death, after a lingering illness, of one of the oldest residents of Bombay, Mr. James Taylor, late of the Accountant-general's office, and for many years a pensioner of Government, at the advanced age of seventy-seven years. This melancholy event took place on the afternoon of Saturday, the 8th of June, in the railway train between Bombay and Narel, while en route to Poona, which place he was recomsum of two thousand rupees. The verdict returned mended by his medical attendant for a change,

MILITARY COMMANDS .- It is rumoured that | Colonel A. T. Heyland, C.B., of her Majesty's 56th Regiment of Foot, is to be appointed to the command of the 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers, as the authorities are desirous of posting to each of the new corps a Queen's officer of standing and experience, who is thoroughly acquainted with the Horse Guards' system, to engraft it in those regiments. Among other rumours bearing on the subject of the officering of the new regiments, it is said that none of the field officers of the lat Fusiliers will go to the 103rd Regiment. It is presumed, therefore, that Captains Trower and Furneaux, both experienced old officers, the former having been for a considerable time in command of the regiment, will be promoted as the two majors of the regiment, Colonel Heyland being the Lieutenant-colonel. It is not yet known who are to get the command of the 106th and 109th regiments of Bombay European Infantry, but it is rumoured that Colonel Guerin has elected to remain with the former, so it may be expected that some major from the line will be put in to help him in the reorganisation of that corps on the Horse Guards system; and that a Lieutenantcolonel-very probably Col. Donovan, of H.M.'s 83rd Foot, an officer of distinction and long service—will be appointed to the command of the 109th regiment.

Exports (Bombay, June 12).—Owing to the reduction of stocks, and the cessation of further supplies from the cotton districts, it is not likely that a further decline will be established in the prices. The clearances to Great Britain for the list month amount to 1,26,090 bales, making a total since January last of 5,24,392 bales, against 2,69,805 in 1860, and 213,448 in 1859. Oilseeds, a large demand exists for both Linsced and Rapesced, and high rates are asked for, in consequence of the favourable accounts from home; but owing to the scarcity of stocks, no extensive transactions have taken place. Sesame is out of stock, and quoted nominally. There is nothing doing in other seeds. Hemp, the prices have further risen, owing to the lightness of stock, and steadiness of demand. Pepper, dull, and lower. Saltpetre can be had at slightly easier rates. Madder Root.—Muscat may be had at from Rs. 3½ to 3½.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, May 16 .- Some most unpleasant rumours are current in the colony, for which we earnestly trust there is no foundation,-that Mr. Bruce, on applying at Pekin for an instalment of the indemnity, had been insulted, and had ordered up the spare troops from Tien tsin; and that directions had been transmitted to the commisseriat here for further supplies of provisions and service stores. As far as we can learn, the report is false, but we give it merely as it has been told to us.

Hankow has not fallen, as wasbelieved. Hwangchow is held by the rebels. At Hankow trade seemed ready to start upon the slightest encouragement. Our consul, Mr. Gingell, has taken up his residence in the middle of the town. The foreign concession is at the eastern end of the city. with a good share of water frontage, having eight fathoms close to the bank. There is plenty of room for turning and good anchorage. The Atalante, from Hankow to Woosung, was only sixty hours under steam: she passed the Fire Dart sixty miles below Hankow on the 29th April. Nganking still holds out. At Kiu-Kiang the foreign allotment was being measured out.

The rebels are occupying Chapoo again, after having taken and evacuated it .- China Mail.

CENTRAL ASIA.

April 20 .- Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan was ordered to go to Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan and to ask him on the Ameer's part if his wife was getting better, and if he finds that she was getting well to tell him to come over to the Ameer sometime at night as he had something to say to him. Some natives of Serai Khoja in Kohistan, near Cabool, waited on the Ameer, and said that last night, about twelve, as they were going from Cabool to their village, their property, valued about three hundred rupees, which they had purchased in Cabool for a marriage, had been plundered near Kotul, and on their following the thieves, their two men had been wounded, and subsequently had died. Three of the thieves had been seen going into the fort of Khoja Mohamed Khan of Teera Khyle. Shah Ghazee Sheredil Khan was directed to summon Shere Mohamed Khan, the son of Khoja Mohamed Khan.—April 30 -Shah Ghazes Sheredil Khan attended the durbar, and informed the Ameer that Shere Mohamed Khan was waiting outside; he was ordered to be called in, and was told to procure the property and the thieves. Shere Mohamed Khan replied, that he did not know anything about the thieves or the property, but he knew this much, that it was very dark when three men came into his fort to smoke, God only knew if they were thieves or not. On this the Ameer got into a rage, and said, "You are responsible for the two murders committed near Kotal, and for the plundering of the property: either procure the thieves or make yourself ready to pay a heavy fine." Shah Ghazee was ordered not to let Shere Mohamed Khan go until he agreed to bring the thieves. Meeran Hajee Sahib paid his visit to the Ameer, and invited him (the Ameer) to dinner at night. In the evening the Ameer, with Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, went to Meer Hajee Sahib, remained there till nine o'clock, and then returned to the palace. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan was busy all day in drawing orders to pay the troops.-Delhi Gazette.

Supernumeraries will be absorbed by vacancies; but to prevent stagnation in promotion, one step will be given for every two vacancies in each of the grades of commissioned and non-commissioned officers, pending the absorption of supernumeraries

17. The military finance department are charged with the duty of issuing such subsidiary orders as the above arrangements in their financial effect may call for.

18. The same rules will be applicable to all corps under the government of India, the Gov. gen.'s agent, resident or other political officer under whose immediate control the regiment is now placed being vested with the same powers for the purpose of carrying out the orders as are given in the above rules to the C.-in-C., and being charged with the duty of seeing that the orders are carried into effect with the least practicable delay.

The Amalgamation-Subsidiary Instructions.

Head Ors., Calcutta, May 8.—With advertence to G.O. by the Gov. gen. No. 400, dated May 8, remodelling the native armies of the three presidencies, the C. in C. is pleased to issue the following subsidiary instructions.

2. Officers commanding divisions, in which the regts. ordered to be broken up are serving, will assemble committees composed of one field officer, and two medical officers of experience, for the purpose of selecting such men of those corps as may be physi-selecting such men of those corps as may be physically unfit for the service, from age, or other causes.

8. Bolls of the men recommended for transfer to the Pension Establishment will be forwarded to the Deputy Adjutant General of the Army at Calcutta for submission to Government. No men are to be included in these rolls who are not eligible for the Invalid Establishment by length of service.

4. The C. in C. observed during his late tour of inspection, that there were in the ranks of several native regts. numerous officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers who were so old and infirm as to be unable to march. H.E. enjoins on commanding officers to take ancedel care to transfer these ing officers to take special care to transfer these truly inefficient men to the Pension Establishment, for which the relaxation of the rules for invaliding gives them a favourable opportunity.

gives them a favourable opportunity.

5. Men of short service pronounced physically unfit are to be paid up and discharged at once with the gratuity sanctioned by the G.O. above quoted.

6. Officers commanding stations will cause all men under 4 years' service, who have no special claims to consideration on the grounds of field service, as well as men who may ask for their discharge, to be paid up and dismissed in like manner.

7. Committees will also be appointed at stations to award the gratuity sanctioned as travelling allowance, according to the distance of the discharged men from their homes.

8. The foregoing rules will be made applicable likewise to regts, having supernumeraries to dispose of, in excess to the new organisation.

9. Separate orders will be issued with regard to the men of the 73rd N.I., and the 10th and 14th Punjab inf.

10. Rolls of men considered to have special claims to be retained in the army on account of their services in the field, or other causes, will be forwarded to army head qrs. for the final orders of the C. in C. Transmitting officers will be very careful that these rolls contain the necessary details and dates of the conductivities constituting claims to appeal conductivities of the conductivities of good services constituting claims to special considerstion

11. Numerical statements, showing how many commissioned officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the disbanded regts are to be retained in service after the above arrangements shall have been carried out, are to be forwarded without delay to the Adjt. gen. of the army, in view to their distribution of regts. on the new estab. of regts. on the new estab.

"Your letter of 12th August last, No. 202, reports that, as passage money has hitherto been calculated according to rank, it appears to your govt. that the med. officers, whose relative rank has been raised med. officers, whose relative rank has been raised under the provisions of the late royal warrants, are entitled to receive passage money according to their increased rank, and that you have issued instructions to that effect. You further state that the rates of passage-allowance fixed by the late Court of Directors might now be revised with advantage, as suggested by the offic mily auditor gen.; and you request the instructions of H.M.'s Govt. on the subject.

"2. The decision at which you have arrived with respect to the rates of passage-allowance of H. M.'s British and Indian medical officers, appears to be in British and Indian medical officers, appears to be in conformity with the intention of the royal warrants applicable to them. Under this decision, a staff or regimental assistant surgeon, after six years full-pay service, when entitled by the regulations to passage-money will receive the rate fixed for a captain, and so on in the higher grades of relative rank.

"3. With respect to your observation regarding the expediency of revising the present rates of passage-money, I have to inform you that I have been for some time in correspondence with the Secretary of State for War, with the view of assimilating the rates of passage-allowance applicable to India, and the rules under which they are drawn, with those authorised by the War-office regulations. The result will be hereafter reported to you.

Court Martial.

LIEUT, R. D. ANSTRUTHER, 10TH N.I. Mahableshwur, May 25.—At a European General Court Martial assembled at Belgaum on Thursday, May 16, 1861; Lieut. Robert Durham Anstruther, 10th N.L. was arraigned on the following charge,

Charge.—For conduct highly insubordinate and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in having at Kolapoor, on or about the 2nd day of April, 1861, addressed a note to his commanding officer containing the following highly insubordinate language, viz.:—"I write to you to inform you that I have received an official letter from you in answer to mine through the adjustant and intend forward. to mine through the adjutant, and intend forward-ing the whole circumstance, along with several former ones, to the C. in C., I need hardly say that the revelations cannot hurt me, and may be any-thing but advantageous to you; the letter I wrote mas written by my being prompted to do so by telegraph from some of the highest officers in office. I write this private letter to let you know that if I don't have an apology, the whole goes on, either before a military or civil court, as my solicitor directs. I wish this to be a letter between two gentlemen, and intended for no insult to you as commanding officer, but marsh to inform you of my intention see officer, but merely to inform you of my intention, so that you may be prepared in case I prosecute for defamation of character.'

The above being in breach of the Articles of War

Finding.—Guilty.
Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded in such manner as H.E. the C. in C. may be pleased to direct. Confirmed

W. R. Mansfield (Signed) Lieut gen., C. in C. Hd. Qrs. Mahableshwur, May 24.

REMARKS BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

The prisoner has been found guilty of highly insubordinate conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.—The proceedings of the trial do not show one single extenuating circumstance for the said conduct, but on the contrary, that the prisoner was deaf to the advice tendered by the adjutant of the regiment not to persevere in a course of misconduct and defiance towards his commanding officer.

I am therefore obliged to say, that in awarding a sentence of "severe reprimand" only, the court has taken far too lenient a view of the high military crime of which it has found Lieut. Anstruther

It is necessary that the prisoner should know that many officers have been dismissed the service for less grave instances of insubordination than that forming the substance of the charge of which he has been convicted

The proceedings of the trial are meagre and unsa-The proceedings of the trial are meagre and unsatisfactory. The prosecutor should have been desired to give his evidence at first. Because that was omitted, was no valid reason for declining to admit his evidence at an after stage of the proceedings.

The defence also required a rejoinder supported by evidence; new matter connected with the conduct of the prisoner and of the prosecutor having been alleged in the defence by Lieut. Anstruther.

The prisoner is hereby severely reprimanded, and warned that a perseverance in such conduct as that of which he stands convicted will infallibly ruin his further career.

BREAKERS A-HEAD! In our last number we commented on the very serious phase assumed by the quarrel between planters and ryots in Lower Bengal, and insisted upon the necessity of immediate action being taken in the matter. The refusal of the ryots to pay their rents is, indeed, a remarkable and altogether unexpected movement. It is one, moreover, which if permitted to make any further progress must inevitably produce the most disastrous consequences. Not only will the European Putnecdars in Bengal be despoiled of their lawful property and utterly ruined, but a secret will have been imparted to the natives which may one day prove fatal to British supremacy in India. Like Jonah's gourd, the paramount power has sprung up as by magic, and beneath its shade the peoples of Hindostan repose in tranquillity. But it may be that even at this moment the worm is prepared which is to smite that goodly plant, and cause it to wither up,-its rapid growth being a fitting prelude to its yet more rapid destruction. There is probably little danger to be apprehended from a direct appeal to arms. The reduction of the native army, the disarmament of the general population, and, above all, the want of artillery, must deprive even the most daring and adventurous of the slightest hope of coping with the British forces. Were it possible that the native princes, laying aside for a brief space their mutual jealousies, could be brought to coalesce for the subversion of the English rule, the chance of ultimate success would still rest with the latter. The consciousness of moral superiority, backed by discipline, valour, and the most perfect firearms, would soon counterbalance the advantage of numbers, and the only result of such a struggle would be the complete subjugation and abasement of the confederates and conspirators. There are some persons who regard the Sikhs with suspicion, and perhaps with a yet stronger feeling of apprehension, and when led by British officers, and supported by British artillery, they are unquestionably a brave and formidable soldiery. But as enemies they have already been encountered under more favourable circumstances on their side than will ever again fall to their lot, and the result was their overthrow and complete discomfiture. Trained by French and Italian officers - themselves taught in the wars of the Great Napoleonpossessed of a splendid artillery, and inspired with a belief in their own invincibility, they were nevertheless driven from their strongest positions and routed by a much inferior force, of whom only a comparatively small portion were Europeans. These advantages they are change that will end almost in a new creation. | English minister or Commander-in-Chief, we not likely to enjoy a second time, and the mere | All this has logically resulted from the events onslaught of infuriated savages, however reckless of wounds and death, would avail no more than did the Highland claymore against the British bayonet at Culloden.

There is, however, a danger that has never et been contemplated, and which now, for the first time, projects its shadow before. What, if on a given day not a single ryot paid his rent? The reader smiles at the absurdity of such an hypothesis. But is it so very absurd? On a small scale the thing is absolutely being tentatively done in Lower Bengal. The ryots refuse to pay the putneedar, in the hope that the latter will thereby be disabled from paying the zemindar, who encourages the rvot in his passive resistance. If the rent of the putnee be not forthcoming by sunset on a certain day in each month the lease lapses de facto, and the zemindar enters into immediate possession. For a time the European capitalist may be able to stem the torrent, but the process of paying from capital is naturally confined within certain limits, and sooner or later he must perforce succumb to a combination so insidious, and yet so powerful. The bankruptcy of a few European putneedars in Jessore and the contiguous districts may not in itself be a matter of vast national importance, but indirectly its consequences may be in the highest degree momentous. No one, we imagine, supposes that the natives of India are enamoured of our rule. What, then, if on some fine morning neither ryot nor zemindar paid his landtax, or, in other words, his rent? By what machinery is it to be collected? The Courts issue decrees against all defaulters, against the whole nation, in fact. Their estates are put up for sale, but no purchasers appear. There is no rioting, no insult offered to any individual. The police can do nothing, the military cannot act, the authorities are paralysed, the Government comes to a deadlock. There is nothing very difficult in such an organised movement. The discovery of its possibility has already been made through the experiment attempted in Lower Bengal, and unless repressive measures be adopted without delay it is hard to say how soon the knowledge thus acquired may be acted upon. The Government will do well to strike hard, and to strike quickly.

"THE DEMISE OF THE INDIAN ARMY."

AT length the last remnant but one of the old East India Company's service has received the finishing stroke to its life of surpassing glory, clouded by much recent shame. The old Indian army is fast going the way of its dethroned master. That unrivalled body of artillery, the echoes of whose guns kept answering each other for more than a century from every corner of India in its turn, is already numbered with the things that were. Those glorious regiments of the Company's Europeans who were first in every fight, whose records-we speak of the regiments formed before the mutiny-were never tarnished by a single story of unsoldierlike conduct either in quarters or in the field, will ere long cease under their new names and numbers to suggest more than a dim remembrance of their former selves. What remains of the old Native infantry is gradually undergoing a change, perhaps wholly for the better, but certainly a given away to the untried favourites of some of 1857, which hastened the doom of a Company whose lifeblood had long been ebbing under the silent workings of a vampire Board of Control. It is sad, however, to think that the treachery of a large part of the old sepoy army justified the transfer of India to the Crown, and that the last hope of retaining a local force for Indian service was overthrown by the misconduct of a small section of the old European troops. In the former case, however, it is well to remember that no mutiny could easily have prospered, if the arsenal of Delhi had been manned by English soldiers, or Meerut commanded by a fit officer : while in the latter the misconduct wantonly provoked was almost wholly confined to the youngest soldiers, and to regiments only raised after the mutiny had been some time raging. For instance, neither in the 1st nor the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers was a whisper of insubordination heard during the anxious months that preceded an offer of discharge which so many among them were pining to accept. It was hard indeed that a partial outbreak of not unreasonable discontent should have been made the handle for a sweeping and disgraceful slander against a body of brave men who had just returned faint and bleeding from the task of saving our Indian Empire in the teeth of unparalleled odds.

The old Indian army, then, has virtually ceased to be, and some years hence its memory will be lying entombed in the grave of its last survivors. We could wish that its latter end had been worthier of its great deserts, but let that pass. Its death would be less unfortunate if we were only sure that the new system would be likelier to advance the public good. The probable loss to individual officers would count as nothing, if the change that turned them adrift could only be accepted as a real change for the better. But that is just the question. For instance, there is the new staff corps, which seems to hold out so fair a prospect to the officers of the old army. No officer can belong to it until he has served two years in India, and, if a new comer, passed certain ordained tests. His appointment, too, must be confirmed by the Secretary for India. But how, if some young Horse Guards' nominee should be sent out from England to step into the seat claimed by many a man of louger service and more tried ability? The staff will henceforth include the whole body of officers posted to native regiments; an excellent way, at least in theory, of ensuring the efficiency of those regiments. But any intermeddling from this country with the elective rights of the local authorities, will more than neutralise the expected gain of a system theoretically blameless; for there can be no doubt that a sepoy regiment, officered by half-a-dozen picked proficients, proud of their place, and desiring nothing beyond, will be far better disciplined than the same regiment when it had twice as many officers present, some of whom merely used it as the stepping-stone to staff employ, while the rest wearily shuffled through the drudgery from which they despaired of getting away. And how, too, about those higher posts which have been so frequently adorned by the Munros, and Pottingers, and Lawrences, of the old Indian army? If these should ever be should indeed despair of seeing India prosperons under our rule.

In demanding the reduction of the native army, Mr. Laing rightly saw one certain way of filling up the gap in the Indian revenues, as well as of abating the chances of another great mutiny. So large a saving of men and officers would save the disbursement of several millions a year from an exchequer too long supplied by yearly loans. An army of about a hundred thousand natives for all India would not need more than half their number of Englishmen to keep them in proper check. But all his efforts in this direction will fail of the end desired if the English Government is to take its own way about the despatch of troops to the East. Mr. Laing would have us believe that the day is past when England could look on India as a sort of milch-cow, useful for rounding an English budget or easing an English estimate. Yet to our thinking the old tendency is not quite dead. There is rather ground to fear lest the unclean spirit should return to his old dwelling more strong for mischief than before. By refusing to guarantee the Indian debt for which England is mainly answerable, we have added largely to the public burdens of India, and cut off one sure means of interesting the British public in her affairs. In a spirit utterly opposed to Mr. Laing's speech we insist, it seems, on making India pay for the support of military depôts in this country, and for the whole passage of troops between India and Europe. To name such things is to show their injustice, yet what hope is there of seeing that injustice remedied for the future? What reason other than a cowardly wish to shift part of our own burdens on other people, can be shown why England should not pay her share towards the expense of establishments useful, in the first instance, to herself alone? The passage of come thousand troops yearly between the two countries, and the charge for depôts kept up by the war authorities on a scale too large for Indian needs, must add two heavy items to the Calcutta estimates. If these things are done already, what surety have we that India will not be milked to a yet larger tune, that in times of peace she will not be saddled with the support of many more regiments than she herself requires, or that in times of pressure at home she will not be drained of many more regiments than she might safely spare?

It is useless for Indian rulers to economise on the spot, if statesmen in this country persist in burdening them with charges incurred chiefly for England's benefit. Unless some definite rule is at once laid down for regulating the future strength of our garrisons in India, we much fear that English ministers will be tempted to lighten the budgets of their own chancellors and the hearts of their countrymen at home' by keeping up our Indian army on a scale regardless of expense-to the Indian Treasury. Some day, perhaps, if our Indian empire last but long enough, the public opinion of this country might be check sufficient to a policy not more unjust to others than ruinous to ourselves - a policy that would absorb in military charges the money needed to open out the true wealth of India. Meanwhile it is so pleasant to enforce on our friends one-half of the old apostolic precept about the duty of bearing one another's burdens.

Much more might be written on "the demise | put an end to slavery in America. of the Indian army," but after all it would be a work of supererogation, seeing how ably and sympathetically that subject has been treated in the current number of "Blackwood." It is a funeral oration delivered with taste and feeling, commending the good deeds of the past, and at the same time looking hopefully to the future. The officers of the late Indian army have reason to rejoice that their case has been stated in such a just, temperate, and discriminating manner.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.-JULY 1.

EAST INDIA (HIGH COURTS OF JUDICATURE) BILL. On the consideration of the amendments to this Bill.

Mr. Butt proposed two clauses, one providing that the chief justice shall hold his office during good behaviour, and be removable only by an address from both Houses of Parliament; the other, that when any judge is removed the Minister shall lay the ground of his removal before Parliament.

Sir C. Woop said the Bill made no change in what had been the practice for the last half century, and he therefore objected to both clauses.

Both the clauses were negatived without a division.

On Clause 27,

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE moved the addition of words providing that when any covenanted servant is removed from any High Court of Judica. ture, he shall be entitled to the same advantages in respect to pension and allowances as the judge.

The Speaker observed that, inasmuch as the proposal of the hon, member would, if carried into effect, place a charge on revenue, it could be assented to only in committee of the whole House.

The Bill was then ordered to stand for the third reading.

HOUSE OF LORDS .- JULY 5.

IRRIGATION AND INLAND NAVIGATION IN INDIA.

Lord Shaffesbury moved that a humble address be presented to her Majesty to assure her Majesty that this House had regarded with great satisfaction the progress of public works in various parts of India, and to beseech her Majesty that, with a view to confer further benefit on that country, she will be pleased to take into her immediate and serious consideration the means of extending throughout it as widely as possible the best system of irrigation and internal navigation. He prefaced his motion by dwelling upon the importance of an adequate supply of cotton to this country, and the expediency of encouraging the growth of cotton in The principal requisites India and Australia. for promoting the growth of cotton in India were an extensive system of irrigation to fertilize the soil, and a system of inland navigation for carrying the produce to the coast. India, from its conformation, presented great facilities both for the purposes of irrigation and the construction of canals, labour being plentiful and cheap. In addition to these advantages these works were extremely profitable. they protected the districts they traversed from famines and floods, and at the same time that they promoted the general welfare of the country they increased the revenues of the Government by rendering salt cheaper, and thereby increasing the demand for it. Having shown that by the opening up of the Godavery all these benefits would be gained, Lord Shaftesbury proceeded to show the capabilities of India for supplying England with cotton and flax, if only it could be made sufficiently remunerative by providing roads and canals to bring it down for shipping from the interior. At the same time that the promotion of cotton cultivation would benefit India it would do more than anything else to with.

If it were once proved to the natives that cotton-growing would return a profit, and that a steady demand for it would be kept up, they were sufficiently alive to their own interests not only to grow cotton, but to use the best inventions for cleansing and preparing it. In conclusion, he showed by statistics the enormous increase in the value of property in districts properly irrigated. In those districts the revenue had increased, famine disappeared, and a profit of 118 per cent. for many ears had been yielded on the original outlay. By developing these works the Government, he was convinced, would increase their revenue, augment the comfort of the natives, and obtain a better market for our own manufactures.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON acknowledged the importance of extending public works in India, and said that much more would have been done in that respect had it not been for the late mutiny. He showed from a recent speech of Mr. Laing at Calcutta that £3,300,000 had been taken up for works for 1860-61, an increase of £230,000 on the previous year, which would give an increased net expenditure on roads and canals of about half a million, as less would be required for repairs than in the previous year. Every effort had been made to reduce the military expenditure in India. and to lay out an increased amount on works of irrigation and on the improvement of communication. He then stated to the House the measures taken by the Government of India to distribute the waters of the great canal of the Ganges to the North-West Provinces, and the steps pursued to open up the navigation of the Godavery, for which purpose a large sum of money had been taken in the Budget for the present year. Under these circumstances, he thought the Government of India had allotted as large a sum as they were justified in the present state of the finances. If Lord Shaftesbury meant to imply that the Government ought to borrow money to carry out these works, he doubted whether the money-market could raise a much greater amount than was absolutely required for the purposes of Indian railroads. He hoped, as the Government was acting in the spirit of the motion, that Lord Shaftesbury would not press it, as if carried it might give rise in India to delusive hopes.

Lord LYVEDEN was of opinion that the public works were not being pressed forward as quickly as before the mutiny.

Lord OVERSTONE thought that it would be far better to leave such works to private enterprise, especially as he had heard that they had proved highly remunerative. He therefore moved the previous question.

Lord CLANRICARDE censured the Government for the dilatory manner in which they had set about these works. Although these works had been proved to be highly profitable, the Government had hesitated to borrow money for their completion, although no such hesitation had prevented their borrowing money for the unremunerative fortifications at home.

The Duke of ARGYLL said that the revenues of India were already greatly burdened by the expenses of the mutiny, that they were already pledged to the amount of £57,000,000 on account of public works, and that they were still further pledged for the present year. Under such circumstances the Government did not feel itself justified in entertaining any proposition for a further advance.

Lord HARRIS having made a few remarks, the previous question was carried, Lord Shaftesbury having recognised the impossibility of carrying the motion which he had brought forward.

> HOUSE OF COMMONS .- JULY 4. EAST INDIA CIVIL SERVICE BILL.

On the order for considering the Report on the East India (Civil Service) Bill,

Sir C. Wood intimated that he had consented to make certain alterations in the Bill to meet objections, and, on his motion, the Bill was recommitted, in order to undergo the proposed amendments, and the report was received forth-

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONSECRATION OF THE BISHOP OF MADRAS The consecration of the Rev. Frederick Gell, D.D. (late Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, and Domestic Chaplain to the Bishop of London), to this see, vacant by the death of the Right Rev. Thomas Dealtry, D.D., the last bishop there, took place in the Chapel of Lambeth-palace, on Saturday morning, June 29, being St. Peter's-day, the service commencing at eleven o'clock. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury was assisted in the ceremony by the Bishops of London, Durham, Chester, Carlisle, and Labuan. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Y. Nicholson, B.D., Rector of Aller, Somersetshire, and formerly Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge-a short and able discourse, occupying some twenty-five minutes. The chapel was crowded in all parts, a large number of clergy and of the new bishop's other friends being present.

THE SIAMESE AMBASSADORS AT PARIS .- The official reception of the Siamese Ambassadors by the Emperor took place on the 28th June, at Fontainebleau. The presents which the Ambassadors are charged to present to his Majesty were sent off at eleven o'clock in the morning. Independently of the Order of the White Elephant, studded with diamonds, these presents consist of a crown of massive gold, covered with diamonds; a gold waist-belt, with a plate ornamented with diamonds; gold dishes, richly enamelled, of enormous weight; and a number of palanquins, thrones, arms, &c. The crown, which is of a conical form, is covered with a band of very thin caoutchouc, on which the diamonds are placed, so that at a little distance it resembles a pile of precious stones. At half-past two a Master of the Ceremonies went to conduct the Ambassadors from their residence in the Rue Lord Byron, and they left in carriages, with postillions, for the Lyons Railway Station. At Fontainebleau five open caleches were in waiting for them at the station. The cortège, after passing through the town, entered the Palace by the Cour d'Honneur. A battalion of the guard was drawn up in the court, and paid the usual military honours, and a detachment of Cuirassiers was stationed on either side on the grand staircase and in the gallery. The Ambassadors were received at the foot of the staircase by the Grand-master and the Firstmaster of the Ceremonies. Their Majesties, having near them the Prince Imperial, were seated on a throne erected for the purpose in the gallery Henri II., and were surrounded by the great officers of the Crown, and the great officers and ladies of their households. The Minister of Foreign Affairs was also present. The Ambassadors and their suite, on entering the gallery Henri II., went on their knees and advanced in that way to the foot of the throne of their Majesties, as they do in approaching their own Sovereigns. The First Ambassador handed to the Emperor an address from the First King of Siam, which the Rev. Father Renaudie, missionary and interpreter to the Embassy, read in French to their Majesties. The First Ambassador afterwards presented to the Emperor and the Empress the various articles sent by the Kings of Siam, which had been laid out beforehand on tables in the gallery. After the audience a collation was served for them in the large diningroom on the ground floor. The Ambassadors were afterwards conveyed back to the station, and, on arriving in Paris, taken in Court carriages to their residence.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—A Special General Court of Proprietors was held on Wednesday, the 3rd the Postmaster-general should be communicated street, for the purpose of taking into consideration the following resolution, of which notice, in accordance with the bye-laws of the Company, had been previously given:—" That the interest accruing from the unclaimed dividends be appropriated by the Directors, in addition to the Government allowance, towards defraying the necessary expenses of the Company." Colonel Sykes took the chair. Dr. Finch rose to move the above resolution. He considered the sum of £1,200 now allowed by the Government quite insufficient to meet the ordinary expenses of the Company, and the Government having deprived them of the East India-house, it also became necessary to provide suitable premises for the Company. Between £300 and £400 interest accrued yearly from the sum of £15,000 unclaimed dividends invested. and he thought this sum, added to the Government allowance, might enable the Directors to meet their necessary expenses. The motion having the sanction of the Directors, he begged to move its adoption. Colonel Everest seconded the resolution, which was unanimously adopted. The Chairman then announced that he had received a letter from the Governor of the Bank of England informing him that the Bank would allow the Directors of this Company to invest in Exchequer-bills any cash balance they might have at the Bank at the end of each year. A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the business.

Public Debt of India .- According to a statement issued by Mr. James Low, the portion of the public debt of India registered on the London books on the 30th ult. was £8,136,950, being an increase of only £133,720 during the half-year. The amount of specie shipped from Great Britain to the East in the six months was £4,839,531, of which £530,367 was gold. The amount from Mediterranean ports was £1,356,010, making an aggregate of £6,195,550.

APPOINTMENTS .- ( Downing-street, June 25). The Queen has been pleased to appoint H. N. D. Beyts, Esq., to be Protector of Immigrants for the Island of Mauritius .- July 1 .- The Queen has also been pleased to appoint C. Lablache, Esq., to be a Stipendiary Magistrate for the Island of Mauritius; and T. Maguire, Esq., to be a Police Magistrate for the Island of Mauritius.

The SEMI-MONTHLY CHINA MAIL .- On Friday, the 5th, an influential deputation waited upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer, to represent to him the importance of continuing the semi-monthly mail to China. Among those present were Messrs. W. Buchanan, M.P., W. Nicol, M.P., Harvey Lewis, M.P., James Youl, J. Makinnon, Andrew Henderson, T. Jones Gibb, Walter Gledstanes, T. Griffith Frith, G. G. Macpher-son, James Matthews, Robert Smith, C. G. Mansell, and F. J. Angier. Mr. Samuel Gregson. who introduced the commission, referred to the memorial which had previously been presented. He thought the Government should not hesitate about the payment of even £12,000 a year for the mail service, should even this be required. Now that the Tae-pings had approached Pekin, and the Emperor was dying, it might be most injurious to trade to cut off the usual communication with China. Mr. Buchanan then presented a memorial from the Chamber of Commerce in Glasgow, enforcing the views of the com-mission. The Chancellor of the Exchequer said they must consider that their application was virtually one for a new subsidy. Neither he nor the Post-office authorities were aware that there was any increase of communication with China in consequence of the fortnightly mail, and it was a very delicate thing to grant subsidies on grounds not strictly postal. It had been said, no doubt, that an increase of postage might obviate the difficulty; but he was not prepared to give an opinion on the point, and he would rather they should consider the question and communicate with him again through Mr. Gregson. The Government had no knowledge of the approach of the Taepings, of the anticipated death of the Emperor of China, or of an alleged surrender of Tien-tsin. After a long conversation it was arranged that inst., at the Offices of the Company, Moorgate with, and that Mr. Gregson should write to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the subject, as the representative of those interested in the trade with China and Australia.

WARLEY .- It has been decided to form an artillery depot at Warley, at the barracks formerly occupied by the troops of the East India Company. The following officers have been appointed to act in connection with the depot:—Brevet-col. J. T. Leslie, c.B., Lieut.-col. E. F. Hay, retired from the Indian service; Adjutant, Major F. Tower, retired from the Indian service; Paymaster, Lieut.-col. S. J. Stevens, c.B., retired from the Indian service; Assist.-surg. Nayler, Indian Medical Department. A surgeon and quartermaster have still to be nominated. The officers of the Indian service have been granted local rank while employed at the depot and attached to the Royal Artillery.

WASTE LANDS .- The Englishman gives official returns of the waste lands available for settlers in Bengal. They are: -Garrow Hills, very large area; Cachar, thousands of miles of mountain and plain covered with forest; 24-Pergunnalis, 2 Mehals; Barraset, 5,289 acres; Chittagong, space enough to accommodate any number of European settlers; Tipperah, 2,500 acres; Ramree, 3,152,000 acres; Sandoway, 1,200,000 acres; Chota Nagpore, 8,000 acres; Nowgong, 179,560 acres; Sibsagur, 1,205,609 acres; Luckimpore, 1,612,636; Goalparah, 1,471,728; Bancoorah, 680 acres; Hooghly, 139 acres; Dinagepore, 25,861 acres; Moorshedabab, 1,189 acres; Rungpore, chur lands. In some instances, such as the Soonderbuns, Mymensing, Kamroop, &c., the area is not yet ascertained. This shows the quantity of waste land in Bengal alone. In Madras it is proportionally much more extensive, but both there and in the Punjab there are traditionary native rights which bar sale while they keep the land idle.

PRICHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of dandelion acts particularly on the liver thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well-known stomachic efficacy of camonile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these Pils the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy for occasional adments they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Drectors of the East India Company. On six sheets - Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished. £3. 3a. nished, £3.3s.

The thject kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the manes of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, in lieu of the gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features:—

this application may be briefly noted in a low of their morprominent features:—
All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural clasticy, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most uncerting accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the guins. The aeds of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

Teeth filled with gold, and Mr. Mosely's White Enamel, the only stopping that will not become discoloured; particularly recommended for front teeth.

With Extracts from her Journals and Anecdote Books.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic discloures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties-a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed with the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."-Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted-and, as it would seem, systematically tortured-Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 30, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE only news of general interest received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th of June relates to the continued ill health of Mr. Laing, who has been compelled to return to Europe from the effects of a severe attack of dysentery. The measures of reduction and retrenchment proposed by him were, however, so perfected in every detail that no very material inconvenience was anticipated from his absence, however much it might be regretted on personal grounds.

Abundance of rain appears to have fallen in the districts which were visited last year by drought, and all anxiety as to the continuance of the famine may now be laid aside. There will still, of course, be much suffering and distress for many months to come, and in not a few cases life-long debility may be expected

The dispute between the Bengal Government and the indigo planters has lost nothing of its bitterness. Indeed, it would be more correct to say that it has risen to an almost intolerable degree of acrimony owing to the extraordinary and wholly unjustifiable conduct of the Bengal Secretariat in circulating, "on her Majesty's service," a vile and abominable series of libels on the European settlers, set forth under the guise of a Bengalee drama. In our next issue we shall give an outline of this wretched production, which would be simply contemptible were it not for its adoption by the local authorities. The Lieutenant-Governor, indeed, denies that there is anything libellous in the play, but a Calcutta Grand Jury has brought in a verdict that it is so, and ulterior proceedings were about to be instituted by the proprietors of the Englishman and Hurkaru, who are especially maligned. Mr. Grant also refuses to believe that there can be anything to fear from the circulation of an English version of a Bengalee drama, but he cannot be ignorant that the motive for translating the Nil Darpan was to create a prejudice against unofficial European residents. Why, otherwise, were so many copies sent to this country? Was it not to convey the impression that the state of Mofussil society is therein fairly described, and that the planters are really the most unmitigated ruffians on the face of the earth? Mr. Grant regrets that the translation should have been transmitted under the official stamp of the Secretariat, and pleads in excuse "some inadvertence or mistake." It is an inadvertence that calls for a severe reprimand as public as the offence, and a mistake that demands an ample apology on the part of the Bengal Government towards the community which it has been instrumental in insulting.

It is again rumoured that Sir William Denison has sent in his resignation. Few men of independent spirit would care, we imagine, to hold the appointment under existing circumstances.

manner, and occasionally a member would write a minute detailing the reasons why he differed from the Secretary of State, but no such minutes had been written on the subject of any of the Bills submitted to Parliament in the course of the present session.

After a lengthened discussion the East India Council Bill passed through committee in the Upper House, Earl Grey having in vain moved an amendment - heartily supported by Lord Ellenborough-to the effect that, in addition to the Governor-General in Council, there shall be appointed also a Council of State, to assist in the preparation and consideration of laws and regulations, the members of which Council-to consist of different races and professions-shall be appointed and removable at the will of the Governor-General, but such appointments and removals to be provisional until confirmed by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

We regret to announce that Frederick Sandoz, Esq., has been compelled to resign his office as head of the Indian Audit Department on account of long-continued ill health. It is reported that Col. Jameson, the late Military Auditor-General at Bombay, is likely to succeed to the vacant appointment.

THE BENGAL CAVALRY.

Mr. Laing had devoted his energies so heartily to the task of diminishing expenditure, and in his financial statement so fully committed the Government and all departments to a definite policy of economy, that, whatever other measures may be delayed by his departure from India, the work of reduction will go on. The reconstitution of the Sepoy army of India is finally completed, so far as its numbers and cost are concerned, by the resolution which limits the strength of the Native Cavalry Corps of the Bengal Army. Last August the Cavalry mustered 46 regiments, of which 17 were under the orders of the Government of India in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and Hyderabad; and 29 were directly subject to the Commander-in Chief. These 46 corps are now reduced in number to 32, and the strength of each has been fixed at 6 troops and 499 natives of all ranks, with the exception of the well-known "Guides" Cavalry, which will continue at a strength of 4 troops and 280 sowars. Of the 17 corps under the Government of India, the Nagpore Cavalry and Meade's Horse had previously been struck off the list, and the Deolee and Erinpoorah corps will follow. Of the 29 regiments under the Commander-in-Chief the following 10 will be disbanded-the 3rd, 9th, 12th, and 16th Irregular Cavalry; the 3rd Sikh and the Ramghur Cavalry; Alexander's, the Benares and the 1st Mahratta Horse and Lind's Pathan Cavalry. As in disbanding the unnecessary corps of Native Infantry, those bodies have been sacrificed whose conduct was either doubtful or more than suspicious during 1857-58. The remaining corps are regularly enrolled from the 1st to the 19th Bengal Cavalry. The result in Bengal will be :-- giving a total native strength of almost 16,000 men. If we fix the Madras Cavalry at 4 and the Bombay Cavalry at 9 corps, of a uniform native strength of 500 men, we shall have a total force of sepoy Cavalry in India of 43 regiments, and 22,500 men. So far as the native army has been definitely fixed, the following is a close approximation to its future minimum strength:

Regiments. 155 . 45 . Natives. 110,400 ••• Cavalry ... 45 Artillery (1st May, 1860, on the Punjab frontier) ... 22,500 ... 652 133,552 or in round numbers 135,000 men.

In the two years since August, 1859, 77 native regiments—44 of Infantry and 33 of Cavalry—have been melted down into the general population. Had this been suddenly effected, and in ordinary times, it must have been attended with no little political risk. But the danger has been lessened by several circumstances. banded men belong chiefly to levies hastily raised, and have not had time to become sepoyised, if we may use the expression. If we contrast the present strength with the old army of 1856, and make allowance for those who were disposed of in the mutiny, during the campaign and on the Nepaulese frontier, we shall find that the numbers of both forces are almost equal. The extra soldiers withdrawn from the agricultural class and rendered, in the light of political economy, unproductive, have been restored to it, to the great advantage of Madras, at least in the opinion of Sir Charles Trevelyan. Most of the disbanded men have not only seen service but return to their villages with considerable "loot" and savings, besides the liberal gratuities allowed them. It is wonderful how much the prosperity of the Punjab has been increased, and the fidelity of its population for the time secured by the wealth which the Punjabee soldiers have poured in from their military British territories .- - Englishman, service in our ranks, and from the plunder of Delhi, Lucknow, and Pekin. The exhaustion of the old stores of grain by the famine, the death and emigration of so many peasants, and the general rise of prices for the past few years, will give immediate and profitable employment to the quondam soldiers whom the necessities of the State have forced to lay down the musket for the plough. The reduction of the native army, great as a financial and military reform, will thus prove no less beneficial as a measure of social improvement and political economy.—Friend of India.

INTERNAL TRADE.

The Bombay Government have been in correspondence with the Government of India respecting the abolition of fiscal restrictions upon the trade between British territory and the Native States of India. The Government of India forwarded Bombay a copy of a communication from the Madras Government, strongly recommending the admission of the States of Travancore and Cochin to the benefits of the free inter-port trade. and pointing out the injury inflicted on those States by the present system.

The Governor-General, in his Minutes, has no doubt of the general sound policy of removing all restrictions on trade with Native States in India. This was freely admitted by the late Court of Directors when this question was raised by the Bombay Government in the year 1850, and the adoption of the measure was prevented in 1859 by financial considerations alone. These considerations, he holds, it is still necessary to regard, and it may be doubted whether the benefits of the measure will be sufficiently great and immediate to justify the abandonment of a considerable amount of revenue during the ensuing twelve months. Whatever is done for Travancore and Cochin must of course be done for the States under Bombay.

But in connection with the representation now received from the Madras Government, it has been suggested that the exclusion of the Native States of India from the benefits of the coasting trade, while it inflicts a very serious in jury upon those States, does not in reality obtain any corresponding advantages for the British Government, but that, on the contrary, the policy became actually injurious to the customs revenue when once the port to port trade was made free, and customs revenue made mainly to depend on an over-sea trade, which trade, it is certain, would greatly benefit by untaxed coasting trade with Native States. It had, indeed, been doubted whether even any temporary loss of revenue would ensue from the adoption of a more liberal policy, for it is supposed that the impulse given to the general coasting trade and to the long sea trade from the great ports might more than compensate for any loss of revenue which is now derived from the Government trade with Native States,

The Governor-general requested the opinion of the Governor of Bombay as to the above view, and whether he thought that the indirect gain to the revenue which might be expected to follow on the abolition of the existing restrictions on the freedom of trade between British India and Native Indian States would be likely to cover the actual loss of revenue which is now derived from the duties imposed upon that trade, or at all events a considerable portion of it. And he desired that the reply of the Bombay Government should be accompanied by fresh returns showing what revenue is realised under the present tariff of duties upon the trade by land and by sea with foreign States in India, both native and European. The Governor-general also observed that salt and opium, which are excluded from the Inter-port Act of 1848, would also, of course, be excluded from any arrangement of the kind made with a Native State. It has been proposed, likewise, to exclude wine and spirits, but the Governor-general thought this would not be necessary if the same import and export duties were levied on these articles as in British India, and as regards spirits. if excise duties were imposed on the manufacture in the Native State equal to those in force in the

MOFUSSIL COURTS.

The Supreme Government, we are informed, requested the opinion of the Government of the North-Western Provinces on the establishment of Courts of Small Causes beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Mr. Edmonstone was informed that it was expected to offer an opportunity of reducing the number of judgeships in the North-Western Provinces, and it was suggested that the judgeship of Mirzapore, and perhaps of other places, might be abolished, Small Cause Courts being established there instead, and the heavier cases being tried by judges of neighbouring districts. He was also asked what salary he would propose to assign to the judge of the Small Cause Court in a town such as Mirzapore.

With reference to the suggestion for reducing the number of judgeships, the Lieutenant-governor deprecated the abolition of the Mirzapore judgeship, but recommended that the Banda judgeship should be abolished, and the district placed under the jurisdiction of the judge of Futtehpore. It was also proposed to abolish the subordinate judicial officers of the Humeerpore district, that district itself being de-regulationised. The Lieutenant-governor then discussed the question of establishing small cause courts in the Mofussil, and proposed that a trial should be given to them in certain localities at first; and Benares, Allahabad and Agra are mentioned as the places where the trial should be made. He would assign Rs. 800 as the minimum salary of a judge of a small cause court, and would have two grades of judges, the one on the minimum salary, and the other on Rs. 1,200, and would grant an allowance of Rs. 250 per mensem for the establishment of each court. Mr. Edmonstone, in conclusion, stated that the possibility of uniting the judgeships of Jounpore and Azimghur, or some similar measure, would not be overlooked.

The Governor-general considered that the Lieutenant-governor had shown good grounds for the retention of the judgeship of Mirzapore and for the abolition of that of Banda, and both those proposals were accordingly sanctioned. But in acquiescing in the retention of the judgeship of Mirzapore, his Excellency trusted that the Lieutenant-governor would be able to effect a reduction in some other part of his judicial establishment, and requested that, if possible, such reduction might be made. His Excellency also sanctioned the establishment of small Cause Courts at Benares, Allahabad, and Agra, the salaries of the judges being fixed at Rs. 800 and Rs. 1,000 per mensem, in the proportion of two judges on the lower grade, and one on the higher. These salaries, however, must be regarded as open to revision hereafter, should experience show that the Small Cause Courts are less freely resorted to than is now anticipated, and that they do not, consequently, meet at least a reasonable proportion of their cost from the stamps on suits. The Governorfrom the stamps on suits. The Governor-general, therefore, requested of Mr. Edmonstone that, after a trial of one year, he should submit a report as to the working of the Small Cause Courts, showing how far their cost is covered by increase in the number of suits filed, and consequent augmentation of the stamp revenue.

The allowance of Rs. 250 per mensem for an establishment for each of the courts was also sanctioned. The Lieutenant-governor has been requested to submit a statement, as soon as possible, in the usual form, showing in detail the increased expense which will in the first instance be incurred by the courts, the establishment of which has now been sanctioned, and another statement showing the saving effected by the abolition of the Banda judgeship and the other reductions proposed.—Englishman.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. A. MAYHEW, Adjutantgeneral of the army, left the presidency on the 4th June for Simlah, compelled by ill-health to relinquish the duties of his office at head-quarters, and try the effect of relaxation and the hill climate, which, we trust, will reinstate this hard-working officer. We (Englishman) have not heard what official arrangements have been made consequent on Colonel Mayhew's departure; but we believe that Major Becher will act for him till the departure of army head-quarters from the presidency for the hills. The office of Deputy Adjutantgeneral of the Army ought to have been filled up from the department, from the date of Colonel Norman's accepting staff employment in England and vacating it here.

Examination for Staff Appointments. The rule that all officers holding staff or other advantageous appointments must have passed in the native languages, or, not having passed, must vacate, is being carried out with stringent severity; an officer who actually commanded one of the Punjab regiments in the late China campaign having been, a few days ago, removed from even the post of second-in-command, because he had not gone through the linguistic ordeal with success. This is sharp work, but not unjust, as all officers who will not take the trouble to get through the easy qualification required know the consequences, and we cannot sympathise with them when they suffer from them. There is, we think, more than one officer at the Presidency whose duty brings him into close and constant contact with the natives, and who has not passed in their language. The rule should sweep all equally and justly.

GWALIOR .- The revenue survey within the Durbar territory is to commence after the Dusharah festival: the son of the late Captain Fenwick is to be appointed the superintendent of the survey. An encounter lately took place between the rebel Zorowur Singh and the Durbar troops, in which the nephew of the rebel was captured, and Zorowur fled to the jungles .- His Highness the Maharajah has enlisted a number of approvers to trace the dacoits who had been committing constant dacoities in his territory.-Orders have reached the Durbar for the removal of Scindiah's guns from Dohud and other places to Jhansee .-The Maharajah, in consequence of his recovery from illness, has distributed a large sum amongst the poor, and has handsomely rewarded the native doctor for his labour.

DELHI .- May 28 .- The Khelat-i-Ghilzies, or 13th Regiment of native infantry, marched into Delhi this morning. The breaking up, or "distribution," as it is more properly termed, is going on in the 4th native infantry in a highly satis-The royal salute fired from the factory manner. Lahore gate of the fort (palace) of Delhi on the 24th, in honour of her Majesty's birthday, astonished the citizens. It is the first salute fired from that bastion. We have had fearfully hot weather for the last four or five days and sickness was increasing amongst the native population to a great extent. I am glad to report the occurrence of a good thunder storm, during which a most refreshing and copious shower has fallen, washing the face of nature and refreshing man and beast to an extent only appreciated by those who are suffering from the long drought. The thermometer, which was steady at 98 in a room with tatties and thermantidote (inside the city), has fallen six degrees at once, and will go still lower. A little girl about five years of age, of purely European extraction, has been found in the poor house under the superintendence of the Rev. Mr. Broadway. The child speaks only Hindostanee, and cannot at present account for herself. The supposition is that she is one of the survivors of the mutiny and murders of 1857, and has been kept in some village by natives until they found themselves unable to support her longer. An inquiry into the matter is going on. Meanwhile the little thing is being well cared for. It is not supposed that she is one of the Delhi refugees, but that she has been brought from some distance and lodged in the poor-house.—May 30.—The weather has, I India, to be detained in custody as a State prigoway into his hands. had a good fall of rain, and although none fell wan gaol. He was kept in confinement in the last night in Delhi, still the moisture in the atmosphere, and the marshy smell brought by the easterly breeze, proves that in the district the fall has been considerable. It is too early to look for the regular rains, but I am led to hope that this is the commencement of the chota bursat. Improvements of various kinds are going on in the city. The centre pathway up the Chandnee Choke is progressing towards completion, and will, no doubt, be a favourite resort of the native inhabitants, especially if they think it is not intended for them. The boundary pillars and lamp posts, the latter formed from old Mahomedan masonry, will look very well when they are finished; just now it is difficult to describe what order of architecture they belong to. The clearances in Deriowgunge are numerous and various; the space in front of the brigadier's house is to be railed in and formed into a garden. It will be ploughed after the first fall of rain, and then, I suppose, the cultivation will commence. It is to be hoped that no scarlet runners will be sown, as such things ought not to be known in a military cantonment. The ground outside the Ajmere gate of the city is being levelled and filled up to form a parade ground for cavalry. The 4th N.I., in course of distribution, is now encamped outside the Cashmere gate. The Khelat-i-Ghilzies have taken their place in the cantonment at Deriowgunge.—Englishman.

RAJPOOTANA.—Certain cases of cremation and inhumation in this part of the country lately attracted the attention of his Excellency the Governor-general, and his lordship requested the Agent Governor-general to suggest what he considered to be the best means for the suppression of the barbarous rites. A case of self-immolation occurred in the Mallaunee district, which also attracted his attention, and the agent was called on to furnish an account of the yearly expenses incurred in the management of the district, as also whether any portion of the expense is charged to the Jodhpore State. Our agent, in compliance with the above requisition, has submitted the account of the annual expenditure, and stated that one-half of the expense is paid by the Jodhpore durbar, and one half by the chief of the Mallaunee. He has applied for an increase to his establishment and police to maintain order in the district. He added that it was his intention to propose that the Mallaunee district should be made over entirely to the Jodhpore durbar, but the chiefs concerned are so strenuously opposed to the measure, that he did not think fit to propose it, especially as such a proceeding would disturb the tranquillity of the Scinde frontier: that at present our hold over Mallaunce, which is about 7,000 square miles in extent, is entirely one of influence, but that the political agent's position would be much improved if he had a small police force and an establishment.

HAZAREEBAUGH, May 29 .- The Sonthals are again misbehaving themselves, and carrying on conspiracy, prejudicial to the interests of Government. The authorities have adopted measures to prevent the same. The zemindars of that wild and strong country are still disaffected to the State, and excite the Sonthals to disturb the peace of the country. The Zemindar of Pachete was charged, during the late mutiny, with having himself attempted, and conspired with and instigated others, to rebel and wage war against the Government of the East India Company, with refusing to afford any assistance or to attend to the requisition of the officers of Government, and with having gathered together munitions of war in his house. The charges, however, broke down for want of sufficient evidence. The Commissioner, in submitting a report of the trial, recorded it as his opinion that there were good grounds for suspecting the Zemindar of being disaffected to the State; and the late Lieutenant-governor, considering that, under such circumstances, it would be imprudent and unsafe to set him at large at a juncture when a portion of Singbhoom was still in open rebellion, ordered him, with the sanction of the Government of Burdwan gaol till December, 1858, after which he remained under surveillance for some time at Santipore. In March, 1859, the country having become tranquil, he was finally released from all control, and permitted to return to his Zemindaree. A few days after his arrival at his Zemindaree, he submitted a petition to the local Government, praying for the restoration of his title of Rajah Bahadoor. The Government refused to comply with it, observing that the whole of his conduct had put all claims on his part to any sort of favour from Government entirely out of the question, and that after all that had occurred, instead of asking for honours and rewards, which are due only to persons of good conduct, he should consider it an instance of the lenity of Government that he had been freed from surveillance. Against this ruling the Zemindar appealed to the Supreme Government, and the Commissioner of Chota Nagpore was called upon for a report, who, with reference to the Zemindar's statement, remarked that the orders of the local government, directing that he should not be permitted to use his father's titles, were issued shortly after an inquiry made into an allegation of his having permitted a suttee to take place in his family. The Commissioner observed that the orders referred to were issued owing to his having declined to apply to Government for a confirmation of his titles. With reference to the confirmation of his titles. With reference to the Zemindar's statement that he was unable to attend on the Commissioner of Burdwan to be invested with the title of rajah when it was granted by Government, because he then expected to be attacked by the mutineers at Poorbhea, the Commissioner stated that the mutineers alluded to could never have threatened his house, as marched off directly to join their thev comrades at Ranchee, and that disaffec-tion alone had evidently caused his absence from the Durbar. Regarding the Zemindar's complaint that, after he had been acquitted of the charge of rebellion he was still kent in durance and subsequently under surveillance. Capt. Dalton observed that a near connection of the Zemindar informed him that it was a most fortunate circumstance for Nilmony Singh and his family that he was at that time kept out of mischief by being incarcerated. The Pachete Zemindar, since his release, has never once appeared to pay his respects to any of the local authorities, whom he still affects to disregard, and whom he even now threatens with prosecution in the Calcutta Supreme Court for acts done by them in the execution of their duty. Under these circumstances the authorities ought to keep a watchful eye over the proceedings of the hill zemindars .- Englishman.

PROVISONAL BATTALIONS. - Government has determined against forming the provisional battalions which it was proposed to assemble from the Company's European regiments which have gone over to the line; the objection to these battalions being the expense that would be incurred in maintaining them till the men can be dispersed to their new corps in the cold season. It is a very good reason, too, as the said expense would not be compensated by any equivalent advantage, that we can see. As the Company's regiments were in excellent order and discipline when the men went over to the Crown, and as this is the season when they cannot move to join their new corps, nothing can be cheaper or better than to leave the officers and men together till the commencement of the cold weather, when all the officers will have chosen the service for which they are desirous of electing, and the soldiers can be sent to their several destinations.

Sikkim.—The Dewan Namgoway is still at large; he is trying hard to drag the Sikkim Rajah into a scrape; he is very wary, and never passes a second night in the same place, for fear of being arrested. Cheeboo Lama, the new Dewan, has placed a number of guards on the route from Bhootan to Thibet, to watch his movements. The Soobah has returned a defiant reply to the demand of the new Rajah for the delivery of Nam-

SHERGHOTTY, May 30.—Since I left Raneegunge there has been very heavy rain daily, and I observed the little fields, which the poor inhabitants of the poor, stony, arid country have brought into cultivation, and surrounded with little mud dykes, flooded with water. I observed this the whole way to the Parisnauth-hill, and even as far as the Dunwah-pass. Through the pass the country was dry, and comparatively little rain had fallen; but here, again, at Sherghotty, the rain has been abundant, and while I write it is still falling. I hope all this indicates early and abundant rains in the famine-stricken provinces of the north-west. I remember the terrible drought and famine of 1837 were followed by very heavy rains in 1838-so heavy, that the inundation of the Ganges swept away the great bund of Allahabad, and inundated half the station, rendering it uninhabitable for many months. May the same thing happen this year, always excepting, of course, the drowning of the capital that is to be. The traffic on this road and the appearance of the country are exactly the same as I remember them before the great mutiny. Scarcely a sign remains to show that that great tempest swept over the land, or that that "sea of rebellion" ever had existence. The garees run along with their trumpeting drivers; the heavy waggons roll on laden with British calicoes and British beer; the Anglo-Saxons and the natives pass each other as in days of yore without a suspicion of hostility; and if a Layard or a Russell could traverse the country now, and it suited the politics of the one, or the purse of the other, to deny that such an event as the mutiny ever occurred, they might plausibly do so, as far as appearances are concerned. I found but one real reminiscence of that great event. On opening the Travellers' Book at one of the Dak Bungalows, I hit upon the month of May, 1857. Up to the 8th the names of the travellers were pretty regular, but from that date to the 22nd there was not one name. On the 22nd appeared that of Captain Hazlewood, commanding detachment of H.M.'s 84th foot, followed by that of T. Magrath on the 23rd, commanding detachment of H.M.'s 84th, and T. Birch ditto. On the 26th, 28th, and 29th May follow the names of five officers commanding detachments of the 1st Madras fusiliers, written so illegibly that I could not make them out; and then in a fine bold hand, on the 30th May, the name of Colonel Neill and those of two other officers of the 1st Madras fusiliers. Here was a record that told the tale more eloquently and more surely than words could describe it. Colonel Neill's name is entered as having arrived at 1 P.M., and left at 4 P.M., on the 30th May, probably the hottest day in the hottest season of the year.—Englishman.

A CURIOUS RELIC.—At a recent meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal a letter from Lieut. Colonel Yule was read, enclosing a paper written by his father, Major Yule, of the Bengal Army giving an account of a printing press discovered in the fortress of Agra when it surrendered to the British Army under Lord Lake in 1803. Colonel Yule says of his father:—" He was all his life a devoted student of Persian and Arabic literature, and left a large collection of Eastern MSS. which are now in the British Museum. At the date referred to (1803) he was assistant to Col. Scott, the resident at Lucknow. The sheet of the Koran to which the note refers is, I regret to say, no longer attached to it, nor if it existed could it now probably be identified." The following is the note referred to:—"The accompanying sheet, containing six pages of the Koran, has a little history attached to it which seems to me worthy of preserving. On the surrender of the Fortress of Agra to the British army under the command of Lord Lake in the year 1803, a good deal of treasure and much valuable property, or rather what seemed at one time to have been such, was found. This fortress had long been the residence of the Sovereign of Hindoostan, or Great Mogul, as he is usually called, but which it ceased to be at the death of Shah Jehan, who had long been kept in restraint in it by his son Aurungzebe, who assumed the govern-it was understood, undisturbed in it until the British army sat down before the place in October, 1803. On possession being obtained, the magazines and vaults which were supposed to contain the royal property were pointed out by some of the old residents of the place, and the massive and iron-bound doors were soon made to give way to the efforts of the soldiery, who very soon emptied them of every thing which was portable. In the evening of the day which saw this scene of con-fusion, my friend Lieutenant Arnold Nisbett Matthews, of the Bengal Artillery, went to view the interior of the fortress. Passing one of the vaults which had shortly before been plundered, he entered, and the first object which attracted his eye was a machine which to him appeared to be a European mangle. On closer inspection, however, he discovered it to be (what he never previously had an opportunity of seeing) a printing press and, what is more, having the types ready set for some oriental production. My friend happening to write to me in the evening mentioned the circumstance in a passing way. I was, however, anxious to learn what the work had been which had thus been most probably the very first that had ever been attempted to be printed in Hindostan, and that, too, under the auspices of the head of the Empire. Instantly, therefore, despatching a letter by express to my friend, (acting as postmaster at Lucknow, where I then was) I entreated him to ascertain what the work might be, and to give me, if possible, a proof-sheet of it. This was attempted under manifold disadvantages, which I need not enumerate, and the sheet to which this is attached is the result. The type is an excellent one, and none, as far as I can judge, now exists in Europe or elsewhere equal to it. The press was pulled to pieces, and the types scattered in an hour or two after this sheet had left the press."

PRIZE MONEY.—We (Englishman) believe that we are near the mark, if not on it, in saying that a share of the Delhi prize-money is estimated at one hundred and fifty rupees-fifteen pounds sterling. This is the amount which a British private soldier will receive: a native soldier will receive half this amount, and officers can calculate, from the sum abovenamed, what will be their portion of the prize-money, according to the number of shares assignable to each rank, which has already been published. The amount of the shares of the Lucknow prize-money has not as yet been estimated; but as the main sum to be divided is comparatively small, and the number to share is very large, those entitled to it must not be sanguine in their expectations. Last of all comes the Burmah, or Pegu prize-money, which, we believe, will be scarcely worth receiving and signing acquittals for, as it is estimated that a captain's share will be about thirty-five rupees!

LIEUT.-Col. W. C. Mollan, C.B., now of H.M.'s 75th regiment, in Fort William, and who is to command the provisional battalion at Dum Dum until it shall be broken up by the dispersion of the men to join their new regiments in October next, will then assume the command of H. M.'s 101st regiment, (late 1st Bengal fusiliers) now at Mooltan.

THE FAMINE .- The Delhi Gazette gives the following numbers of those relieved by the Famine Committee during the month of April:-Muttra (nineteen stations), 1,77,861; Agra, 1,61,010; Moradabad, 99,810. This is an average of about 15,000 fed every day in these three districts. It is estimated that that number of lives was saved in the month.

ULWAR.-Letters received from Ulwar mention that the young Maha Rao Raja has commenced his studies under his new tutor, Lalla Sheodial Singh, and that the Council of Regency and other departments are working satisfactorily in cooperation with the Governor-general's agent in carrying out measures for the good of the country.

NAWAB OF FURRUCKABAD. — The Englishman states that the rebel Nawab of Furruckabad, whom we banished across the Aden frontier, has estab-lished himself close to the principal mosque at ment. Whatever property had been left in the Mecca. There he harangues the pilgrims from place at the death of Shan Jehan had remained, all parts of the world, and in return for their offerings prophesies that within five years the Mussulmans will establish the reign of the "faithful" in India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE COFFEE PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION of South India held its annual meeting in the beginning of It already musters forty-three members. June. During the past year the great difficulty of scarcity of labour was not so much felt as before, owing to the plentiful harvest in Mysore and a consequent influx of coolies from that province into Wynaad. The association believe that "the supply and price of food at reasonable and equal rates" the great safeguard against fluctuations in the supply and price of labour. The relation of the planters to the Government seems to be much more pleasant than it is unfortunately in Bengal. "To facilitate the collection of the land-tax the planters made a voluntary return of their taxable acreage, and the tax is thus in process of a collection which would otherwise have been delayed another year or two pending a survey." Having another year or two pending a survey." cheerfully acceded to this impost the planters insist on their right to expect from the Government the equivalent distinctly held out by Sir C. Trevelyan—namely, ghats, roads, a second deputy magistrate to be stationed at Nelialom, and telegraphic communication between Mannantoddy and Calicut. The rapid progress of European settlement in the Wynaad is most striking. As Sir Charles Trevelyan said, all that is wanted is roads and a secure title of land.

THE LATE RAJAH OF TRAVANCORE .- A Travancore native official furnishes the Madras Athenaum with a letter sketching the life and character of the late Rajah of Travancore, who died in August last. He was born in 1814, and succeeded to the Musnud in 1847, when he freed some forty prisoners who were sentenced for life. He abolished slavery. He was a man of varied attainments and elevated tastes. He acquired a considerable knowledge of electricity, chemistry, and medicine. He sent valuable contributions to the London and Paris Exhibitions, as well as to that at Madras. He sent a present to the Queen, consisting of an ivory throne, and received in re the simplification of the revenue accounts, and the reform of the revenue establishments. Two Bourdillon scholarships or prizes to be granted throughout all future generations, the one to the best Tamil scholar and the other to the best Telegu scholar, in the first class of the Presidency High School, are to be established by the natives.

> HYDERABAD, May 25 .- A difference of opinion now exists between the Nizam and his minister; the cause is stated to be that a strong party of courtiers are constantly representing to the Nizam that Salar Jung is a favourite with, and a partizan of, the Indian Government. His Highness has been so far wrought upon that he has publicly expressed his dissatisfaction with the minister. The Nizam has all the fickleness of the native character, and this dissension has before arisen from like representations, by which he is easily led. A grand nuzzur is soon expected from the Presidency for the Nizam, including the valuable Amaree brought by the Governorgeneral from Indore. The authorities here propose to prohibit the carrying of arms without a license throughout the assigned territory. There are insuperable objections to the disarming of the province, until our police arrangements shall have been matured. Lieut. Cadell has reached Woon to ascertain, as correctly as possible, the name of each pergunnah, comprising the terri tory on the north side of the Payne Gungah. The Native Government has been requested to give the desired information to that officer. There is a rumour abroad that a new minister is to be appointed, and the old incumbent retires on pension.—Englishman.

> LEGAL APPOINTMENTS .- The Chief Justice, Sir Colly H. Scotland, has appointed Mr. Arthur Macdonald Ritchie, barrister-at-law, to be registrar and prothonotory of the Supreme Court. His lordship has also appointed Mr. John D. Mayne, barrister-at-law, to be chief clerk of the Insolvent Court, vacated by Mr. Ritchie, in consequence of his being appointed registrar and prothonotory.

> LOCAL FUNDS .--The Madras local authorities have been as careless in the expenditure of local funds on roads and other local improvements as those of Bengal. The receipts from sixteen districts in 1859-60 amounted to Rs. 1,80,326, and the expenditure to only Rs. 1,45,763. At present, when the whole country is crying for roads, there is an unexpended balance of Rs. 1,63,362. The funds should be amalgamated as in Bengal, and administered under the direct supervision of Government. It frequently happens that a collector makes a road to the edge of his district when there is not another to meet it. The Government should issue and enforce vigorously a general scheme for the application of the funds.

BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE .- Mr. George Lord has been re-elected chairman, and Mr. J. N. Fleming deputy chairman of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. On the secession from the Chamber of the minority who constituted the Commercial Association, these gentlemen resigned their offices, to allow of the minority again returning. This having been done, they were re-elected by the united Chamber. The Chairman condemned "the sudden and arbitrary interference" of Sir Charles Wood in ordering the Contract Bill to be withdrawn.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, May 29.—The London mail of April 10th arrived here on the 22nd instant; and the homeward mail was to leave yesterday, but from a slight accident to the steamer has been postponed for twenty-four hours.

The past fortnight has not been marked by any event having a political bearing, either in China or Japan. The news from the latter place is to the effect that our consul had made some further progress in coming to a liberal understand ing with the Japanese Government, with regard chiefly to the adoption of a well-defined course in the future treatment of foreigners whom it may be necessary to arrest for any misdemeanour.

fore, tells us that he, as a Hindoo, has observed | speaks well for our future dealings with the Japanese; and as if to cement this return of friendly relations, Admiral Hope will shortly visit some of the ports in the Imperieuse, to which vessel he lately removed his flag. At Pekin, matters, so far as we know, are in the same quiet state as they were a fortnight ago. A rumour, which has evidently been quite base-less, reached us some time ago, to the effect that Mr. Bruce had been insulted. As matters stand at present, the story is improbable, and it is quite unconfirmed. Nothing further has been heard of the alleged rebellion in Mongolia, and it is open to doubt whether it has any existence. There are bands of robbers in various quarters who, having no pretension to the name of rebels, are yet often dignified by that title, thereby misleading many people in their estimate of the present state of the country. From Tien-tsin there is no particular news. The greatest confidence still prevails with regard to the future prosperity both of that port and of Chefoo. At Shanghai, there is at present only one subject of interest, but it is all-absorbing; that subject is, the Yangtaze River. Its capabilities for navigation are now so completely determined, that no hesitation is felt on that score, and all the enterprise in China is gradually being represented in this great highway of commerce. A good many voyages have been made to Hankow, which is the highest port on the river, and all the vessels that have made that voyage have shown every readiness to repeat it. The port of Hankow is very complete in its facilities for loading and unloading cargo, and in many other of those details which give one seaport superiority over another. It is difficult to say what may be the limit to the trade just commenced on this river, but the demand for steamers suitable for its trade has not yet been fully met. Not to speak of vessels at present building in England, or on their way out, there are about a dozen fine steamers already trading on the Yang-tsze, or just about doing so. Among those vessels are the Fire-dart, Governorgeneral, San Theodosius, Ta-yung, Scotland, Rajah, Chusan, Manila, Hellespont, and Willamette. It will seen by the following extract from a letter ad dressed to the North China Herald:— "Below I-Chang the Yang-tsze is navigable for steamers of considerable size, its width above the Tung-ting outlet being usually about half a mile, and the least water when we passed up, at which time it was probably at its lowest, was in midchannel four fathoms in one or two places, but generally much more.

be remembered that, along with Adm. Hope's expedition, there went a party of travellers, who proposed pushing on to Tibet and India overland. A letter has since been received from one of the gentlemen composing this interesting party. We learn from him that the Yang-tsze is navigable up to I-Chang, which is about three hundred and sixty-four miles above Hankow. Above that town

the river entirely changes its character, as will be

Knowing full well how unthankful an office it is to have to undeceive persons on a point of which their previous notions have been agreeable to them, I necessarily feel somewhat disinclined to divulge our discovery-if discovery it can be called-that the Yang-teze above I-Chang, at any rate during this season of the year, is unsuited to steam navigation. At a distance of three miles above the city the river suddenly changes its character altogether, and narrowing to less than one-half its former width, rushes with a strong current through a long gorge, with stupendous cliffs rising on either hand. At fifteen miles above I-Chang the first actual rapid exists at this season; and from thence upwards as far as we now are, about eighty-three miles above I-Chang, its course is through a continuous mountainous country, passing through several more gorges, and obstructed occasionally by rapids. But there is no want of water, for the river is very deep in these narrows.

"I would not give as a decided opinion that these rapids will altogether prevent steamers may be constructed; besides which, the nature of the river may be very different under altered circumstances of high water; for it would appear that the rise during summer is very great, water lines having been observed in the confined parts some sixty or seventy feet above the present level. But then the additional force of water might present another obstacle.

"Coal exists in Hunan on Tung-ting Lake, that being the district whence Hankow is supplied. We have found it at Kwei (not Kweichow), about thirty-two miles above I-Chang, and for some distance above that in the mountainous

"We are all in good case, and have as yet encountered no serious difficulties, finding both mandarins and people remarkably civil. We have travelled thus far entirely by river, and proceed to-morrow onward towards Wan (hien), where circumstances will decide whether we still continue on the river or proceed overland to Chingtu. We hear a report that two missionaries have arrived at that place from Lassa."

The Tung-ting lake, through which the Yangtsze flows, drains a very large basin, and this accession of water nearly doubles the size of the

In reference to the attack by gun-boats on a village near Swatow, which resulted in the place being laid in ashes, the true fact and merits of the case are as follows: The village of Tseau-chew has long been known as a nest of pirates, who were a terror to the native vessels frequenting the Straits of Namoa. In January last a Tien-tain junk bound to Amoy was blown into those waters, and the pirates dwelling in this village robbed it of property to the value of some 30,000 dollars, killing at the same time eight or nine of her men. The junk then came into Swatow, and reported the piracy to her owners at Amoy. By return steamer they replied, appointing Ahok (who is not a mandarin as reported) to proceed to the village and use means to obtain restitution. He demanded 12,000 dollars or twelve of the pirates; the people treated his demand with derision, and robbed him. He then petitioned the magistrate of the district, who, having before received many similar petitions against these pirates, now determined to act in the matter, and with 800 braves and two junks sent by the Admiral at Namoa, he proceeded to the village. Finding preparations for an obstinate defence, he wrote to the English for aid, at Ahok's suggestion. The Chinese Admiral did the same, quoting the new treaty. The gunboat Cockchafer was sent by Admiral Jones, not to assist them, but to find out how matters stood. On receiving the Cockchafer's report, the Admiral sent Captain Borlase in the Pearl with two other gunboats to demand a surrender of the village unconditionally. This not being complied with, the place was bombarded for an hour on the following morning, after which a landing was made of several boats' crews under cover of shells thrown from 68-pounders. Most of the valuables had been removed, but among what was left behind was part of the property taken from the Tien-tsin junk, so that evidence is not wanting of their being the actual pirates.

At Canton the attention of the foreign residents has been turned to proposals for beautifying the Shameen site, and should they be carried into effect the result cannot fail to be pleasing. To show the progress that has been made in this matter, we quote the following from the Hong Kong Register :-

"We understand that, by request of H.B.M.'s Consul, a meeting of the mercantile community was held at Canton, on the 23rd inst., to consider the question of planting trees in the new settlement of Shameen. A plan of the site was then exhibited in public by the Consul for the first time, but as it has not yet received the ratification of Mr. Bruce, it is of course liable to alteration in some respects. It is proposed that there shall be a garden in the front of the settlement, and that a bund fifty feet broad shall encircle its inner border. Extending lengthwise from The Government of the Tycoon has expressed its disapproval of the manner in which Mr. Moss was treated some months ago. So far this power, and adapted to the peculiar navigation dividing two sections of allotments; and cross roads at proper distances are to run from the river to the canal. Along the parapet an inner row and an outer row of trees are to be planted. Between them will be left ample space for a good carriage drive, since the outer row of trees will be twenty feet distant from the sea-wall.

'A garden committee has been appointed to take charge of the grounds. We are told that a surplus fund on account of the late factory garden still remains in hand, the amount of which, when added to the compensation money to be received from the Chinese Government for its destruction. will doubtless suffice to make the Shameen site a desirable residence for foreign merchants.'

Our chief local news ought to consist of a scandal case, where a lady was slandered by three officers of the army, who are all very sorry indeed for what they have done. Apologies and explanations have passed, and a court-martial was held on the wrong man. The mercantile community of Hong Kong will now have the means at hand to make their influence felt in China, seeing that a chamber of commerce has been formed. This has been wanted for some time, and it cannot fail to operate for good upon the government of the colony.

We believe that by the present mail a letter has been sent to the Foreign Secretary, in which his lordship's attention is called to a matter that has been allowed to slumber in a manner beyond precedent, even in the records of official dilatoriness. The claims for losses sustained by English merchants in Canton in 1856 is peculiarly a matter where delay in settlement, or in fixing a time for settlement, shows a most unbecoming want of consideration for interests which are entitled to the most serious respect. It is now seven months since the convention of Pekin was signed. By that convention, two millions of taels were expressly stipulated for, to cover the losses alluded to. Considerable sums of indemnity money have been paid to all the ports. H.M.S. Scout brought down nearly a million taels the other day, but there are no signs of any payments being made, nor can the smallest information be had from Government upon the matter. The sum withheld amounts in all to about £700,000. Of this sum the merchants concerned have been deprived for four years. The French and American claims have been fully liquidated as regards the principal, and nearly so as regards the interest, the latter being rated at 12 per cent. per annum. Mr. Bruce has given no reply to inquiries made to him on this subject, and we cannot be surprised to learn that the merchants have thought proper to appeal home for information .- Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, June 17 .- We have had some squally monsoon weather during the fortnight. Still the operations of preparing and shipping coffee have not slackened; and the addition to our export of the staple article has reached the high figure of 56,896 cwts. Up to 8th June we sent away more plantation coffee by 18,000 cwts. than in the corresponding period of last season, and very much more than in any previous season at the same date. We are now, in the case of plantation coffee, short only by 90,000 cwts. of the total figure for last season, which was 468,000 cwt. We confess we shall not now be surprised if season 1860-61 shows a total export of plantation equal to half a million cwts. This is an unexpected result, considering the general apprehension of a short out-turn entertained and expressed at the com-mencement of the season. The yield from young coffee and from the estates in the higher and wetter districts has more than made up the deficiency on the lower and hotter plantations. Even native is creeping up to a respectable figure, being now only 38,000 below last season's figure up to 8th June. The total native out-turn will probably reach 135,000. In that case the total export of the two seasons will be identical—the great difference being an increase of 32,000 cwts.

In view of this now probable result, we really feel a reluctance to speak of the prospects of the crop now forming, and which will give the expert of 1861-62. But all testimony concurs in anticipating a very short crop, both of plantation and native. We trust the result as in this season may be so much better than our fears.

The shortness of the native crop this seasonwith short crops of rice and other grain—accounts for the dulness of trade and the embarrassed position of many native traders. Very respectable chetties, with goods to the value of thousands of pounds in their stores, have been compelled to ask for indulgence at the hands of their creditors, on the ground that they cannot sell to those who have not the means of buying. We have seldom known commerce in Colombo so stagnant. The only parties over whose prosperity no doubt can hang, are the owners of cocoanut gardens, whose produce, whether as cocoanuts for food, or copra for oil making, commands a ready sale at high prices.

From the monthly Customs Returns we gather that in May 92 vessels entered inwards at Colombo, of which only one was from Britain, and one from what we suppose we must still call the United States. Of 79 vessels which cleared outwards, no fewer than 13 were bound for the United Kingdom; so much for the effect of the coffee enterprise. Thirty years ago fewer than 13 large vessels would have sufficed for the whole annual exportable produce of Ceylon. In May the export of coffee was no less than 82,000 cwts. In the same month we imported 170,000 bushels of rice; and cotton goods to the value of £42,000. The value of the trade at Colombo for the month

Duty £10.898 Value. £4,604 Total .....£413.975

Of general intelligence there is little to chronicle. In the political world, as in the commercial there is stagnation. The middle of next month will "see another sight," as far as politics are concerned. Amongst the Bills to be introduced will be one regulating the volunteer movement, which is making some progress. A pamphlet by Mr. Neitner on the enemies of the coffee plant, and another by Mr. Barter on the labour supply, have received some attention during the fortnight. The public health is on the whole good. -Colombo Overland Observer.

CENTRAL ASIA.

May 1.—No public durbar to-day. Shah Ghazee Sheredil Khan was desired by the Ameer to watch at the gate of the palace, and not to let any one come in. There were only Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, Shere Allee Khan, and Wully Mohamed Khan in the council. It is ascertained from the Paishkhidmut of the Ameer that they were consulting about writing to the King of Bookhara regarding his journey to Toorkistan, and that the following answer had been written for the king :- "As we two are friends I have no objection to comply with any request the king would make, but as this visit, which I am sure would cause a disturbance in the country, can be easily avoided by sending some Khan to Shah Murdan Shurreef, and to distribute as much money or food in charity as the king likes, I hope the king will not take the matter any other way.' May 2,-The following news from Heerat was received through an urzee from Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan from Kandahar. Some chiefs of Beeloochistan in Seestan had a dispute with their Hakim about some Jageer. The Hakim, to show his authority, had put two men of the tribe into prison. On this the Beloochees, well-known for their love of fighting, had collected a number of people, and surprised the Hakim in the fort. A skirmish had taken place, and a number of men on both sides had been killed and wounded. the Hakim's reporting the matter to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, at Heerat, and requesting him to not let the matter go further; as for the troops none could be spared just now." The whole troops now in Heerat have been ordered by his Majesty the King of Persia to be sent to Kandahar and to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan had Toorkistan. also written to the Belooch chiefs to remain quiet, or else they would be punished. It is certain, as was written in the news letter from Heerat, that orders have been received from his Majesty to send the Persian troops to the walls of Kandahar. Meer Afzul Khan is said to be busy in collecting the troops and making warlike preparations. On the perusal of the Urzee the Ameer looked at Ghoolam Mohamed, laughed, and said, " If, like the Belooches, two or three other tribes would rise against Sooltan Jan near about Heerat, then Sooltan Ahmed Jan would forget all about Kandahar."-May 3 .- It is ascertained from a merchant, who says he has just arrived from Oorgunge, that three Russians were planning to build a fort on the bank of Hamoon, and some duty on the merchandise was to be levied there by the Russians. The merchants had therefore postponed their business until something had been settled. In Toorkistan, says the merchant, it was given out that the Russians were intending to build a cantonment in Tashkund. The above is not from the Ameer's durbar. In the evening the Ameer returned from Alleeabad .- May 4 .-Ushruf Khan, Kotwal, brought some thieves with the stolen property, and informed the Ameer that they had stolen the things from the Sarai of Zurdad Khan. The thieves were ordered to be made over to Sirdar Wullee Mohamed Khan to be punished, and the Kotwal was directed to give back the property to the owners.—Delhi Gazette.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz. —Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and three for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency. Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton ou the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

Mily. Dept., Fort William, June 4.—No. 497.—The following parsa. of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 172, of April 24, are published for general information:—

1. I have received and considered in Council your Excellency's separate despatches, Nos. 3 and 4, dated

Jan. 21, regarding the application to the Indian medical dept. of certain clauses of the Royal Warrant of Jan. 13. 2. In my Despatch, No. 326, dated Ang. 22, 1860, 2. In my Despatch, No. 326, dated Ang. 22, 1860, with reference to the objections which had been made to the 8th clause of the Warrant under which all med. officers below the rank of dep. inspector gen. will be placed on the retired list when they shall have obtained the age of 55 years, I expressed my willingness to consider any plan that your Govt. might suggest for reconciling the efficiency of the public service (which must be the primary object) with a fair consideration of the claims of the medical department.

8. The plan which appears to your Excellency best suited to protect the public interests and the claims, at the same time, of medical efficers is that of relaxing the rule embodied in the 8th clause of the Warrant, in cases where superior medical authorities certify the perfect competency and fitness of the medical officer, who has completed the age of the medical officer, who has completed the age of fifty-five years without having obtained the rank of deputy inspector-general.

4. I am willing to assent to the adoption of this plan in regard to the medical officers who entered the service prior to the promulgation of the Royal Warrant, provided that the perfect competency and fitness of the medical officers be in all cases certified ntiness of the medical officers be in all cases certified by a board consisting of two medical officers, one of whom must be an inspector-general or deputy inspector-general, and the commanding officer, or senior civil officer, under whom the medical officer may have been serving.

6. A medical officer who may be unable to obtain the certificate of competency above referred to will be placed on the retired list, receiving, as recommended by your Government, the rate of pension next above that to which his period of service in India may entitle him, provided that he be not already entitled to retire on the higher rate, viz., $\frac{2700 \text{ a.vear}}{2700 \text{ a.vear}}$ £700 a-year.

7. A similar course may be pursued with respect to medical officers employed on unprofessional duties on their attaining the age of fifty-five years.

8. Your G.O. of Dec. 26, giving effect to the instruction conveyed in my despatch No. 397, of Oct.

9. With reference to the modification of the per sion rules of the medical service suggested by Dr. Forsyth, I have to inform you that the whole question of the re-organisation of the Indian medical service is now under consideration, and that the determination of H.M.'s Government thereon will be communicated to you hereafter.

Expenditure on Establishments.

Financial Dept.—Extract from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, dated May 21, 1861.

Re-olution.—Since the issue of the orders of this department, No. 96, of the 8th inst., certain applications for expenditure on account of establishments, &c., have been sanctioned on condition that the expenditure is included in the sums sanctioned in the Budget under the heads of service to which the ap-

Estimates have been prepared, it could not be ascertained whether the said expenditure had been provided for or not; and because it was considered desirable, in order to prevent delay, to enable the civil paymasters, in cases in which the excenditure might prove to be included in the Budgets, to pass Bills for it in communication with the local Governments, without waiting for further orders from this depart-ment, to be issued after the pecessary information had been obtained from the local Governments in as all course.

8. It now appears that the object of the abovementioned condition has not been fully understood, and it is considered necessary, therefore, to intimate for the information and guidance of the authorities concerned, and in cases in which the said condition has been imposed, it will be the duty of the civil pay-masters, before passing the expenditure, to inquire from the local Governments or departments of the Government of India whether it is included in the Budget or not. the Budget or not.

4. If, after such inquiry, it shall appear that it is included in any of the Budget grants sanctioned by the Government of India, the civil pay-master will pass it for payment, and report having done so to this department. If, on the other hand, it shall appear that it is not so included, the civil pay-masters will decline to pass it for payment, pending further order from this department.

5. It will further be understood that the fact of

5. It will further be understood that the fact of provision being made in the Budget for any particular item of expenditure does not, per se, justify the pay-masters in passing such expenditure for payment. They will, as directed in paragraph 20 of the Budget and Audit Committee's keport No. 10, of 18th January last, continue to pass charges according to the then "existing practice of the civil auditors;" and every charge must be covered by a specific sanction from competent authority, except in cases otherwise canecially provided for.

-The following Fort St. George, June 11 .- No. 197 .extract of a military despatch from the Rt. Hon the Sec. of State for India, and its enclosures, are published in gen. orders:

Despatch dated May 9.—No. 88.

1. I forward to you copies of a Royal Warrant amending that part of the 16th clause of the Royal Warrant of Oct. 1, 1858, which assigned to staff or regimental surgeons the relative rank of major, according to the date of their commissions. Staff or regimental assistant surgeons who may be promoted to the rank of staff or regimental surgeon on or after the date of the new warrant will rank as majors, but juniors of that rank. Such staff or regimental sur-geons as were commissioned as such before March 28 will, however, continue to rank as majors, according to the dates of their commissions.

2. A similar arrangement must be made as respects the surgeons of H.M.'s Indian forces.

Circular No. 672, Home and Foreign.

VICTORIA R.

VICTORIA K.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

WE think the Indian Civil Service has taken unnecessary alarm at Sir Charles Wood's Bill. For ourselves, we see no further extinction impending over that privileged body, beyond what has already taken place. When Mr. Vansittart appeals to the House of Commons to avert complete ruin from that glorious service, which, nurtured by its Clive, encouraged by its Wellesley, has produced our Lawrences, our Metcalfes, our Elphinstones, our Thomasons, and so forth, he appears to forget that the Service to which he alludes was abolished some years back. If it is really true that the old system of giving away civil appointments produced such superior men, the argument is unanswerable that an obscure party of men, in an obscure region of Eastern London, by nominating the sons of their friends, relations, and creditors, organised a system for the constant supply of what every one admits to be rare articles-really efficient public servants. But we know this is not true. It is, indeed, perfectly correct to say that, under the old nomination system, very distinguished men did arise, but they owed their eminence in no sort of way to the system. They were great in spite of it, rather than because of it. And it must be distinctly remembered and understood that by the side of these very men whose names are so justly honoured did creep in incompetence of a nature scarcely credible. We speak quite advisedly when we state our belief that in no country in the world have persons held high office who have been so utterly unfit for it as in India. Under the old system, men occasionally got appointments who were really only suited for the obscurest walks of public life. Incurable want of intelligence often produced in them moral obliquity, which one only hesitated to call dishonesty, because that term would seem to imply greater distinctive perception of right and wrong than their intellectual condition would warrant our supposing them to possess. And, yet, what could you do with these creatures? When their time came, it was very hard to explain to them that incompetency excluded them from promotion. In addition to the difficulty which always arises when a man has to be told that he is quite a useless person, there was the special obstacle to a proper understanding, in their incapacity to realise ideas of any nature.

Mr. Thomason, one of the most upright of our Indian Governors, made judges of them! rising lawyer would go to India; no sinking He thought that by constant over-ruling of their decisions in appeal, they might be counteracted till it was time for them to retire.

to become "cust-alorum" and "raolorum." was, of course, a melancholy state of things. The patronage of the old Court of Directors was not, on the whole, improperly bestowed. Every now and then a bad case occurred: but, as a general rule, scandal even could not make out much of a charge against them of the downright dishonesty which is euphuised into jobbery. Criminal reports show us that appointments were sometimes sold. The son of a director's saddler or bootmaker occasionally got a judicial appointment in the East, which postponed the presentation of "our little account." But these were exceptions; usually all was straightforward and upright. Only there was that intolerable Scotch cousin, too thickheaded for law and medicine, too unconscious of moral distinctions for divinity. too ungainly for the army and navy, too idle for the counting-house; prompt him through Haileybury, let Monshees do surreptitious exercises for him at Fort William, he was all right -a full-fledged civilian-and an incubus on, and a disgrace to, the Indian administration for life.

Now, though we never had any romantic belief in competition, never expected it to produce great men, because only a very limited number of them exist contemporaneously on the earth, as far as our observations go; yet we always foresaw, and events prove we were right, that the new system would exclude the very bad. The worst sort of Haileybury man, who could scarcely write, who was idle, and dissipated, and worthless, is now an impossibility. But it must be fairly admitted that no men who have entered under the reformed plan promise, as yet, anything better than the really good Haileybury article. Lawrence and Thomason still tower above modern statures; and, even in present times, such men as Temple, and Cust, and Seton-Karr have little to fear from rising reputations.

The old patronage system, then, having been abolished, what cause for anxiety can the competition men reasonably have in Sir Charles Wood's Bill? The object of the measure is simply to legalise an absolute necessity. You must recruit your civil ranks from outsiders, for the simple reason that more men are wanted than the Civil Service can supply. Why, last year there were some eighty appointments to be given away to some hundred and fifty candidates. This is unfair to the system of competition, and it will be impossible to preserve the standard at the desirable height. The abominable cousin will re-appear, only he will be Irish this time; and Dublin and Belfast will colonise British India.

Two most unreasonable fears appear to possess the civilian mind. One is, that his funds are in danger; the other, that the Temple and Lincoln's-inn are only waiting a given signal to start for the East, and oust him from all the prizes of his profession. The first appears to us to be a ludicrous apprehension, for with the Civil Service becoming yearly numerically stronger, how can the funds possibly dwindle or diminish? The second betrays an ignorance of the condition of the legal profession. No one would be asked to do so. Besides, it is really not dignified in a body of men, who claim administrative capacity and general fit-But that Shallow should have such an ascen- ness for their profession, to be rushing about, dancy as to be able to prosecute a positive claim like the poor gentleman at the Ethnological a century of unbroken internal quiet had given Society, asking "Will no one protect us?" If a second-rate barrister, who has been reading the magazines on circuit for some dreary years, in listless expectation of that brief which never comes; if such a one, we say, really can go out to India and snatch the best situations from local candidates, what are we to say of the capacity of that "glorious service " etc., etc?

The future appears to us clear and hopeful for the Civil Service. The Saturday Review has very ably pointed out the class of man required. If the Universities can supply us with a sufficient number of young men, of fair capacities, good education, and healthy constitution, we need not sing the praises of past Indian celebrities; they will arise again, and the bead-roll which some are fond of repeating, usque ad nauseam, will be extended as the years roll on. Of all the men who have distinguished themselves in the East scarcely one has had a claim to a high order of intellect. There has been sound intelligence, a good heart, a high motive; the opportunity, the arena, have done the rest.

We cannot expect men whose abilities assure them of success in England to voluntarily submit themselves to the splendid obscurity of success in India, to greatness under colonial conditions, and a name in the mouths of men whose opinions are not estimated. But good second-rate men have the same field before them which always opened out in our Eastern dominions; and the Governor of a Province may remember with exultation that his goal in England would probably have been a county court or a living in Yorkshire.

EFFECT OF THE FAMINE UPON COMMERCE.

WHEN Colonel Baird Smith was deputed by Government to report upon the famine-stricken districts of the North-Western Provinces, he was at the same time instructed to inquire into the causes of the serious depression that had prevailed in those parts for some months previously. The result of the investigation instituted by that very intelligent officer has already been communicated to the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce in an exceedingly clear and interesting document. The traffic between Calcutta and the upper provinces had fallen off to the extent of nearly one-half, and as there appeared no indication of an early improvement, notwithstanding the ruinous reduction of prices at which goods were offered, it is not surprising that the mercantile community of that great city began to feel anxiety and alarm as to their future prospects. It must be very satisfactory to them to learn, on such unquestionable authority, that they may lay aside all apprehension, and look forward with confidence to a speedy revival of a brisk and profitable

It appears from Colonel Smith's report that about seven-sixteenths, or not quite one-half, of the Manchester goods imported into Calcutta find their way to the great trade marts of the Upper Provinces, to supply the wants of about thirty millions of people. "Having regard," he says, "to the demands from a population of the above extent, the piece goods trade was probably in its healthiest and best state during the three years immediately preceding 1857-58, the year of the mutiny. Half a perfect sense of security for life and property to the general community. The limitation of the Government demand on the land for about a quarter of a century had materially improved the status of the agricultural class. The vigorous extension of great public works gave a value to labour among the lowest of the classes of the population which such labour had never had before. The growth of new branches of export trade, or the healthy extension of old ones, brought the native merchants within the circle of general prosperity." Between 1850 and 1854 the average annual imports into the North-West Provinces amounted to £1,336,324, and between 1854 and 1857 to £1,646,802; showing a steady progress of about £300,000 per annum. Now, on the 1st of May, 1857, the stocks in hand and the goods in transit are estimated to have been equal to a year's consumption, and are valued at little short of £1,750,000. Shortly afterwards the mutiny broke out, and property of this character was plundered or destroyed to the value of three-quarters of a million, nor was it until the following month of May that fresh supplies could be forwarded up country. The first consequence was, naturally, a great enhancement of price, and at Mirzapoor, for example, Old Company's mark grey shirtings rose from six to ten rupees per piece. On the restoration of order the demand for Manchester goods was, of course, vastly increased, and in the three ensuing years the average annual imports into the Upper Provinces rose to £2,571,214. Had there been no disturbances in 1857 it is probable that the aunual value of this trade would not have exceeded £2,250,000, so that at first sight it really appears as if the mutiny had promoted the prosperity of the people. A very little consideration, however, suffices to demolish this paradox, and to show that "the Manchester trade is now worse on the average than it would have been had these provinces been spared both mutinies and short crops, with ultimate famine, by about £250,000 a-year." Deducting three-quarters of a million, the estimated value of goods destroyed in 1857, Colonel Baird Smith proves from figures that the actual average annual rate of consumption is somewhat less than two millions, whereas had the law of progress which prevailed prior to the mutiny continued undisturbed it would have been two millions and a quarter. The imports have undoubtedly been very large, owing to the enormously high prices that ruled in the beginning of 1858, but the consequence was a sudden fall in price and a glut in the local marts. Upon this state of things supervened the drought of 1860, and the prospect of a famine gradually grew into a certainty. In the threatened districts the prices of grain suddenly went up from 20 to 60 per cent., according to the nearness or remoteness of the markets from more highly-favoured regions. At Agra fine wheat fell from 18 seers per rupee in June to 10 seers in August; at Muttra from 19 to 9-12; at Allahabad from 22-8 to 21-4; at Cawnpoor from 23 to 18; at Allyghur from 18 to 12-4; at Meerut from 20 to 11-8; and at Saharunpoor from 25-12 to 11-12.

"Between May and August," observes Col. Smith, "the rise had been enormous, and so rapid as strongly to indicate some sudden failure of the rein any such proportion as was usual in ordinary times. The necessity of the case was great, however, and the profits to be realised in the grain trade excessive. While wheat was selling in Agra, Muttra, Allyghur, and Meerut at about Rs. 4 per maund, it was selling in the adjoining districts of the Lower Doab at Rs. 2, and in remoter districts, east of the Ganges and west of the Jumma, at from Rs. 0-14 to 1-4 per maund. The remotest points from which I have reliable evidence of supplies having been tranges and west of the Junina, at from Rs. 0-14 to 1-4 per maund. The remotest points from which I have reliable evidence of supplies having been drawn are to the south-eastward, the Benares divi-sion, from whence Agra received considerable quantities, to the south-westward, the Saugor and Jub-bulpoor territories, Gwalior, and Dholepoor, which have helped to feed Muttra and Delhi, and Oude districts bordering on Rohilkund and the valley of the Ganges.

The extent to which this trade in grain developed itself may be partially conceived from the following official return showing the quantity of grain forwarded month by month per railway from Allahabad to Cawnpoor from January, 1860, to January, 1861:-

Up to the end of February it is supposed that quite one million of maunds was brought by railway to Cawnpore.

The whole line of the Ganges, from Allahabad up to Furruckabad, was crossed by scores of streams of food, not large individually, but in the aggregate swelling to a great amount, and pouring the surplus stores of favourably situated tracts in Oude into the Doab. The Oude districts bordering on Rohilkund also threw large supplies into the markets of the bad districts in that province; so large, indeed, in some instances as to create famine prices in districts have been most bountful baryers. So miserable how ing had a most bountiful harvest. So miserable, how ever, are the means of intercommunication in many ever, are the means of intercommunication in many of these districts of supply, that while in one bazar famine prices of Rs. 4 per maund might be ruling, in another not thirty miles off the price would be but about Rs. 1-8 for the same quantity; yet no flow from the full to the exhausted market could take place, because roads were not in existence and means of convictor publication. of carriage unknown.

On the whole it is calculated that the import of grain into the famine districts between September and February could not have been less than three millions of maunds, or half a-million a month, being equal to the sustenance of about one sixth of the entire suffering population. In the purchase and transport of this vast quantity of food, nearly three-quarters of a million sterling are said to have been expended. There was, however, a return traffic, which defrayed the expenses of carriage. Owing to the stoppage of all private manufactures of salt in Oude a great demand has arisen for that article, and the increase in the quantity of salt conveyed across the Customs line in the course of the year is estimated at fully 80 per cent. It is even conjectured that the export of salt from the famine districts and the import of grain will very nearly balance one another in weight and value.

"The demand for capital to carry on these extensive transactions in both branches of trade was excessive. Its position as the terminus of the railway, as the centre on which the Ganges Canal, the Trunk as the centre on which the Ganges Canal, the Frunk Road, the main road from Oude, and the main road from Bundelkund converge, gave to Cawnpoor an important prominence in the operations, and there I obtained much of the information on which my ultimate conclusions were founded. I ascertained on unquestionable authority that the offer of double the usual rate of discount of bills, drawn upon Calcutta. failed altogether in procuring cash of them; that the serve supplies, and to confirm the views of those who doubted whether such reserves existed in the country to the corn merchants, but pervaded every class of minority. There would be no advantage, he society; that European gentlemen had invested largely in it; that every small merchant and every small farmer, who could get a few hundred maunds together by credit or purchase, made his modest speculation in grain. In a word, and comparing small things with great, the excitement was of the same type as that due to South Sea schemes or railway manias, and from some indications since given, I am by no means sure that the parallel will stop at the mere excitement and universality of the spirit. If good rains should remove all dread of continued drought, some of the heaviest speculators are not unlikely to find they have been carried too far. But they have staked largely and boldly on a continuance of existing high prices, and the issue remains to be seen. It is to the state of things thus described, however; to the complete absorption, for the time being, of all available capital, and all available means of transport in the local grain trade; and to the wide area over which the spirit of speculation in grain spread, that I am disposed to attribute that sudden check in the imports of Mauchester goods from Cal-cutta which had arrested attention some months prior to this inquiry being set on foot.

Under all these circumstances it is not surprising that a temporary depression should take place in this particular branch of trade, but there is certainly no reason to apprehend its continuance after the removal of the existing distress. At present all demand has ceased, on the part of six millions of people, and a year or two will probably elapse before they will have quite recovered from the effects of this calamity. But there is no growing dislike to the use of Manchester goods-no preference reviving for native manufactures. So far from this being the case, it is proved that the native looms are rapidly disappearing under the competition of the Manchester merchants. In 1837 none but a few of the wealthiest of the million inhabitants of Azimgurh wore anything but the produce of the district, and the quantity of cloth thus used was altogether inappreciable. "Now, there is not a sub-division of the district into which Manchester goods have not made out their way with greater or less vigour. In the chief sub-division, which contains the capital and other large towns, about 77 per cent, of the population are clothed in them, and even in the stronghold of the native weavers, where upwards of 4,000 looms were at work in 1836, 62 per cent. of the people now wear English cloths."

In the Ghazeepoor district the same results are observable. Out of a population of 1,440,000, Manchester supplies clothing for 808,000, or more than half of the entire number. With returning prosperity the demand for English goods will naturally revive, and a steady increase of the import trade may be confidently expected.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.-July 9. EAST INDIA COUNCIL BILL.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON, on moving the second reading of the East India Council Bill, explained the objects of the Bill, the exchanges it proposed, and the necessity which exsted for its adoption.

Lord Ellenborough, declining to enter into details, confined himself to the principle of the Bill, which he believed to be a great alteration in the mode of passing laws for India. Having pointed out the changes which he deemed necessary in the Legislative Council, he said that, although he approved many provisions in the Bill, he condemned the power which Parliament proposed to give the Governor-general of adding six or twelve members to the Executive Council in order to form a Legislature, for between these two numbers lay the whole difference between the thought, in adding more than six members to the Council, but he himself should prefer leaving the Council as at present, but without the judicial element. A great omis-sion, however, in the Bill was, that it did not give the Governor-General the power of dissolving the Council. The responsibility of the Governor-General for the legislation of the minor presidencies would be no whit diminished by the changes proposed, while his labours would be rather increased by the establishment of local councils in those presidencies. He feared this would lead to a laxity of practice which could not be favourable to the public service, and would be especially attended with an increase of local taxation. The Government, he thought, had gone beyond the necessity of the case, and had provided for matters on which there was no need for legislation.

The Duke of Argyll contended that the fears of Lord Ellenborough were not justified by the changes proposed by the Bill. No change was introduced in respect to the legal relations between the Governor-General and his Council, nor was there any chance that the Governor-General would be in a minority in the new Conneil.

Lord Lyvenen having admitted the necessity of taking steps to improve the working of the Legislative Council, thought it would have been sufficient to pass a declaratory Act defining the powers of the Legislative Council, without altering its constitution.

Lord DERBY doubted the propriety of giving the proposed increase of power to the local Coun-The present Council needed reforming, as a little mock Parliament was wholly unsuited to the requirements of India.

Lord GRANVILLE, in reply to Lord DERBY, stated that it was not intended to give any publicity to the proceedings of the Council in its executive capacity.

The Bill was then read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.-July 12. OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel SYKES wished to put a question to the right hon, gentleman the Secretary of State for India with reference to a subject which had ex cited painful, and, he might add, dangerous feel ing in India. He desired to know whether officers of the Indian army accepting the invitation to volunteer for general service or into the staff corps in India in any way compromised the rights guaranteed to them under the Act 21 and 23 Victoria, cap. 95, sec. 56, of 1858, and the Act 23 and 24 Victoria, cap. 100, sec. 1, of 1860, with respect to pay, pensions, allowances, privileges, promotions, and otherwise; and whether the reported appointment of Colonel Heyland, C.B., of her Majesty's 56th regiment, in supercession of the field officers of that regiment, was made with the sanction of the Secretary of State.

Sir C. Wood believed the general order to which the hon. and gallant member referred had given great satisfaction. As to the volunteering of the Indian Army for general service, as far as the returns that had been received enabled them to judge, it had exceeded the most sanguine expectations. No returns had been received from Bombay and Madras, but those from the Bengal Army showed that the troops had almost volunteered in a body. Of 8,000 men, upwards of 7,000 volunteered for general service; about 300 declared for local service; and of the remainder, most of those who claimed their discharge had afterwards applied to be enrolled. The whole of the officers who had volunteered certainly had not been called at once into general service, for the best of reasonsthere was no possible mode of employing the whole of the officers of the Indian Army in it; most of them would be employed in local duty. Of the artillery of the Bengal Army, 172 had volunteered for general service, 8 for local service, and 1 for the Staff Corps. Of the cavalry, 62 officers had volunteered for general and 17 for local service; of the Engineers, 1 officer had volunteered for local service; the others had not yet declared themselves. Of the infantry, 92 officers had volunteered for general, 102 for local February loan they applied for £1,000,000 at that opinion of the officers of the Bengal Army, and was the best possible proof that the question might be most satisfactorily answered. If these officers had thus volunteered for general service in the staff corps, it proved that they did not consider they compromised any rights by so doing. It a perfectly voluntary transaction on their Was parts. They had a free choice, and they declared either for general service or the staff corps, according as they thought it most to their advantage. In conclusion, he must say it would be a great injustice to the Commander-in-Chief not to state that he had, on every occasion, shown the most anxious desire to promote the wishes of the Indian officers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.—The convention with the Sultan has been laid before Parliament. The Emperor of the Ottomans consents that the cable from Malta may be landed near Alexandria and placed in communication with other telegraphic lines terminating at that city, and also that the cable may be landed at such points of the coast of Africa within the Regency of Tripoli as may be found necessary. The British Government is to be allowed to establish stations at Alexandria and all other points where the cable may be landed, the stations to be watched over and protected by the Ottoman Government, but the persons employed to be under the protection of Great Britain, and proceedings against them governed by the rules established for British subjects in like cases. Any message addressed to a person residing within the Ottoman territory, not being an officer of the line, is, unless intended merely for transmission beyond the Ottoman territory, to be delivered only through an agent of the local Government. All despatches of the Ottoman Government are to have like priority with those of the British Government over private despatches.

GENERAL SIR J. HOPE GRANT .- The magis trates and council of Edinburgh held a special meeting on Thursday, the 11th, for the purpose of conferring the freedom of the city on Sir James Hope Grant, G.C.B. About ten days previously the council had unanimously resolved to take advantage of the presence of this distinguished soldier in Edinburgh to confer on him the highest honour in their disposal. There was a large attendance of the civic body in their official robes, the Lord Provost presiding; and a number of strangers, among whom was Lady Hope Grant, were present at the ceremony. In presenting the burgess ticket, the Lord Provost conveyed to the gallant general the congratulations of the council and of the citizens on the success with which he had conducted an important series of operations in China last year, and also upon his safe return. His lordship alluded to the honours Sir James had received from his Sovereign, and to the esteem and respect which he had won in London and also in this his native country. Sir James Hope Grant, who had been most warmly received on entering the council chamber, was greeted with loud cheering on rising to return thanks. At the conclusion of his address the gallant general shook hands with the members of the council, and retired amid general applause.

India Loan.—The India Five per cent. Loan for £4,000,000 was contracted on Friday last, with great success, many of the biddings being at prices so high as to yield at the current market quotation little immediate profit to the applicants. The minimum price fixed by the Council was, as on the occasion of the £3,000,000 Loan in February last, 981, and the aggregate amount tendered for is over £21,000,000. All subscribers at and above £98. 18s. 6d. will receive the full amounts asked, but those as low as £98. 18s. will get only about a third. Five individual firms tendered for an aggregate of £4,000,000. The highest application was at £99.8s. The bidding of Messrs. Rothschild was for £1,500,000, at 98%, and they will not receive any portion. In the service, and 47 for the staff corps. This showed the price, and obtained the whole. The general applications at that period were for a little more than four times the amount required. In this instance, although the loan is larger, the applications have reached more than five times the sum

> COUNCIL OF INDIA .- The charge for the establishment (in this country) of the Secretary of State for India, in the financial year just expired, amounted to £120,857. Of this sum £28,450 went in payment of the salaries of the Secretary, Under Secretaries, and members of Council: £45.026 for the "correspondence department," in which there are 92 officers and clerks.

SALABAT KHAN .- The Oudh Gazette gives further details regarding Salabat Khan, lately apprehended in Lucknow as one of the four murderers of Major Burton at Kotah. Mr. Burton, the Major's son, has identified him by the mark of a rifle-wound in his thigh made by the Major's youngest son when they were pursued to the top of the residency, and by the marks of a charge of small shot which was fired into the prisoner and his accomplices as they were retreating. Startled at the proofs, the scoundrel confessed—"It is of no use denying it, I am Salabat Khan." He also bears the mark of a wound on his left hand, which he states he received from Major Burton, who had made a cut at him with his sword; after this, he says, he ran a muck, and, in self-defence, cut down Major Burton and every one else who came in his way. When apprehended he was on his way to Nepaul, where he had heard "there were lots of his old comrades, as well as lots of work to be done," another proof of the universal belief of the natives in the existence of Nana Sahib. The murderer will be tried by the Governorgeneral's agent, Rajpootana.

THE INDIAN ARMY AND CIVIL SERVICE LIST.

ISSUED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

*.* The details of the Amalgamation Scheme, by which the Armies of India are incorporated with the Royal Army, are given. The arrangements for the formation of the Staff Corps, and the new Line Regiments, are yet incomplete. It has therefore been judged advisable to issue the present Edition in its old form. The next Edition will contain full and complete information on these points.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic discloures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties-a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

- "Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.
- "Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.
- "The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte; she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted-and, as it would seem, systematically tortured-Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 30, 1861.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—Diseases of the skin—scrofula, scurvy, scorbutic eruptions, and all cutaneous complaints caused by imperfect digestion, deleterious gases, or an impure state of the blood, may be most speedily, safely, and permanently cured by Holloway's well-known remedies. The active principle in both Ointment and Pills is so harmless, yet so powerfully restorative, that the most inexperienced person may use them with the certainty of producing the best results. The Pills quickly remove all eruptions from the circulation and system generally, while the Ointment erudicates the superficial blemish. In the irritations of the skin so annoying in infancy, this Ointment will prove itself the best friend to both patient and nurse, as it cools, soothes, and heals.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skil' as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."-Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential namore substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediat of accessful of importance to the keepers of horse: — Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out o. the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."-Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."— Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success-in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact; but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England." National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed-to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."-Bell's Messenger, June

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most gratifying intelligence brought by the Bombay mail of the 27th of June, is the confirmation of the good news received by the last Calcutta mail, as to the abundant fall of rain in the districts which were last year visited with drought. Seed sowing was going on actively, and the unfortunate peasants were looking forward hopefully to better times.

The state of affairs in the Nizam's domi nions has become so extremely unsatisfactory that the Governor-general has deputed Mr. R. Temple to make a thorough investigation upon the spot into the long-accumulated abuses that at last threaten that native State with ruin. The plot to overthrow Salar Jung has been fortunately unravelled, and the Nizam now expresses his regret that he should have per mitted the slightest suspicion as to his Minister's wisdom and fidelity to enter his mind. Should time permit, Mr. Temple is also instructed to make a searching examination into the administration of Central India generally, where great mismanagement and extravagance notoriously prevail.

The "Nil Darpan" quarrel between the Bengal Government and the unofficial European community has advanced through another stage. The printer of the English version of that silly and impertinent drama has been prosecuted in the Supreme Court, for libel, by the proprietors of the Englishman newspaper. He at once pleaded "guilty," but added that he was authorised to give up the name of his employer, a gentleman occupying a highly respectable position in society. It was then stated that the real offender was the Rev. James Long, who, in no very Christian spirit, had taken such pains to disseminate the vilest calumnies against his fellow-countrymen. Having thus obtained the name of the actual publisher of the libel complained of, the prosecutors consented to a nominal fine of ten rupees being inflicted upon the printer, with an admonition from the Bench to be more careful for the future. Proceedings are now to be instituted against Mr. Long.

Certain vague rumours of a disquieting nature are said to be circulating in the North-West, but which do not appear to rest on any reasonable foundation. Grumblers and prophets of evil there will always be, and indeed it is scarcely necessary to go so far as India to seek for them.

Sir George Clerk was still at Poona, awaiting the first fall of rain in the Deccan, before setting out on his contemplated tour. The Governor of Madras was also about to start for Conanada, in order to judge for himself of the capabilities of the Godavery. In Bombay itself the monsoon is reported to be going on favourably-twenty inches of rain having already fallen.

Colonel P. P. Pears, of the Madras Engineers, has been appointed Military Secretary to the India Council, as successor to Colonel Baker, who has been chosen to occupy the seat in that Council, rendered vacant through Colonel Durand's appointment to the post of Foreign Secretary to the Governor-general of

THE MISSION TO CENTRAL ASIA.

Lord Canning has not been slow to appreciate the advantage of sending a deputation of British officers to Central Asia, with a view to increase our knowledge of the country and the people, and to lay the foundation of an active trade with India. This course we have frequently recommended during the past few months. By adopting it the moment a financial equilibrium was secured and our relations with Sikkim were peacefully reestablished, the Governor-general has shown his desire to signalise the close of his administration by at least one effort for the benefit of science and the promotion of commerce with countries where Russia enjoys a close monopoly. Captain Smyth, of the late 13th B. N. I., has been selected to take command of the expedition. The only other members as yet appointed are Lieutenant Jackson, of the Engineers, and Mr. Medlicott, of the Geological Survey. We trust that a good botanist will be added, and a political officer from some of the hill districts or the Pun jab, to inquire into the facilities for commerce and into the nature and extent of the trade now carried on with Russia and China. The Bengal Asiatic Society has been asked to furnish instructions for the collection of information under the several heads of inquiry-geography, ethnology, hydrography, botany, natural history, geology, and mineralogy. The Bengal, Bombay, and Kurrachee Chambers of Commerce, the leading tea-planters in the Himalayas, and the Punjab authorities, should be requested to give similar advice on commercial subjects. No definite route, nor any strict restrictions as to time or distance, have yet been laid down. The general intention at present is to start from Simla through Konawar to Yarkhand, thence to Lassa, and thence to return by Jigutishur and Phagri through the Chola Pass to Sikkim and Darjeeling. The expedition cannot start for the next three months. It is necessary that they should proceed with all dignity and authority, and for this purpose the Governorgeneral has applied to Mr. Bruce at Pekin to procure the usual "red chop" or official passport under the treaty. We fear the best season of the year will thus be lost, but the expedition will have an opportunity of meeting with Captain Blakiston's party which left Admiral Hope's expedition near the head of the Yang-tse, and intended to penetrate from Western China to Lassa and Ladak so as to emerge from Simla next October.

Captain Smyth is well fitted to be the head of such an expedition. His colleagues will supply the scientific knowledge. What is wanted in the leader is a powerful physique, thorough acquaintance with the customs of the people and the localities, and good temper, combined with firmness and decision. These qualities he has in perfection. He has twice crossed the Himalayas from Almora to the plateau of Thibet by the Nit Pass, going once to the Munsarawur Lake and once across the valley of the Sutlej into the snowy range beyond. His daring courage and extraordinary strength and endurance have made his name a byeword among the Hill men, with whom he ingratiated himself by his kindness. In 1855 Lord Dalhousie asked him to undertake an expedition from the gorge through which the Sutlej rushes into the Punjab, down to the pass through which the great Brahmapootra in the far east finds its way into the plains. He was then obliged to take sick leave from India, but turned up with Captain Speke in the Crimean On the close of the campaign he and Captain Speke planned an excursion, geographical and sporting, through the Caucasus. There was some difficulty in securing Russian passports; however, Captain Speke was appointed to the Nile expedition, on which he is now engaged, and Captain Smyth returned to India.

Colonel Phayre is about to send a small party up to Bamo, with the view of surveying the route to Yunan from Rangoon. What we now want is a survey of the country beyond Suddya, where the Brahmapootra emerges into Assam. Had Colonel should not Captain Smyth's expedition penetrate | 36 lakhs of maunds, and its cost to Government. so far east, instead of taking the well-known Sikkim route ?- Friend of India.

TALOOKDAR MAGISTRATES.

The policy adopted by Lord Canning in investing the talookdars of Oude with magisterial powers having been officially reported as a success, the experiment is, we understand, about to be tried within the Presidency of Bengal; and reports have been, or are about to be, called for from the local officers in Behar touching the character and qualifications of the larger landholders. The principle of the policy we approve. As landholders must possess influence, it is obviously desirable to utilise it by giving them a motive to employ their influence in the right direction. But we must not forget that in utilising their power we give it greater volume; by placing magisterial powers in the hands of large Zemindars, such as those of Behar, we double their capacity for mischief if they are disaffected at heart. And it is, therefore, of the utmost importance that we should proceed with caution and make our selections with wisdom. It is very questionable whether the great landholders of Behar (perhaps with the exception of the young Raja of Hutwa) are fit for the proposed investiture. The Durbhanga estates are at present under the superintendence of the Court of Wards, and the whole family are pained and affronted at the contempt that has been, with no sufficient reason, cast upon the late Rajah's will. The mismanagement of the Belliah Rajah's estates is a matter of public notoriety and official record. The Rajah of Doomraon's conduct during the mutinies, when he suffered the authorities to remain for a week in the garrison without either offering succour or even holding communication with the Commissioner at Patna, has deservedly cast suspicion upon his loyalty, and marks him out as a man unfit for distinction or power. The Tikaree estates are in the hands of women. Rajah Hetnarain may boast of experience in magisterial matters, but not precisely in the way which would qualify him for the Bench, and he would himself probably prefer a butt of good sherry to any empty honours under the sun.

With such materials it behoves the Government to pause before introducing the plan into Behar, lest the measure become a mockery, and the policy itself be brought into contempt. While, however, there are individuals notoriously unqualified, there are, doubtless, other landholders of character and ability who might be selected, and the additional advantage might be thus secured of showing to the landed gentry generally that the proposed distinction is reserved as a reward, not merely for wealth and nobility of descent, but for superior intelligence, probity, and talent, when those qualities are united to property. A stimulus would thus be afforded to all, and a generous rivalry encouraged throughout the country. A young noble, for instance, in the position of the Hutwa Rajah, who has just succeeded to a princely inheritance, and is a lad of intelligence and spirit, would, with such an object of ambition before him, become, in all probability, a useful ally and a worthy coadjutor in the provincial administration, instead of sinking gradually under the demoralising tutelage of native parasites and designing Mookhtears into sloth, debauchery, and vice, while the incapable and disloyal by being passed over would suffer meet recompense for disaffection and incompetency. We trust Lord Canning, in carrying out this important policy, of which the whole merit is his own, will not fail to consult those who know the province and the people.- Englishman.

SALT.

Mr. Gordon Forbes, the collector of Ganjam, lately suggested to the Governor-general that the Lower Provinces of Bengal are supplied with salt manufactured at the cost of Government and sold under a monopoly. The consumption has been stated at sixty lakhs of maunds, but in the last returns of manufacture which he saw (and which Hannay lived, he would have attempted it. Why date five years back) the quantity made was about longer rise from the dunghill to rule a province exclusive of carriage and establishments, was about 12 lacs of rupees, or £120,000. In the not distant province of Ganjam these 36 lakhs of maunds would be produced for less than three lacs of rupees, or £30,000, and he was of opinion that by extending the salt works and collecting, instead of destroying, the spontaneous salt, which might be produced in almost any quantity in this district, or, at all events, this and adjoining districts on the Madras coast could produce, at a still lower rate than above quoted, the whole of the salt required for consumption in the Lower Provinces. If the supply be taken at sixty lakhs of maunds, the cost of production to Government would be twenty lakhs (besides carriage and establishments) at the rates now paid in Bengal. The cost of the same quantity here would be five lakhs, leaving a net saving of fifteen lakhs, or £150,000. Against this gain would have to be set the freight from these ports to those of Lower Bengal. It has been calculated that Madras salt can be put on board ship, after payment of cost price, carriage, and establishments, at Rs. 15 per 100 Indian maunds; but this is too high an estimate for the northern districts, where the cost paid to the manufacturer is, in some places, as low as six and seven rupees per 100 Indian maunds; and it does not apply to spontaneous salt, which is to be had for the labour of collecting and storing it. It must also be remembered that the Madras shipping price above quoted includes establishments, so that the whole annual charge to Government which would be saved by abolishing the establishments of Lower Bengal must be added (in comparing the expenses of Madras salt with those of Bengal) to the sum already quoted as the cost price of salt in the Lower Provinces. Thus Mr. Forbes found the cost price of the 100 maunds in Lower Bengal to be from Rs. 31 to 32: carriage about 3; and for establishments say, 5; and the total cost is Rs. 40 for the same quantity of salt which could be shipped from the northern ports at about Rs. 12. This rough calculation bears out the correctness of the figures in his (Mr. Forbes') estimate of the saving to be effected by this change. What Mr. Forbes now took upon himself to suggest to the Governor-general is no new idea, and was canvassed by the late Court of Directors so long ago as the year 1829. The nature of the opposition likely to be raised against the abolition of the manufacture in Bengal by that portion of the native community which is prejudiced in favour of salt provided by boiling is explained and met by some remarks of Mr. Crawford, to be found in the salt report.

In conclusion Mr. Forbes says:—"I ought, as an officer of the Government, to explain why I have not followed official routine and addressed the Madras Government on this subject. My reason is that this letter is but a suggestion, and that as it turns on the abolition of large establishments in Bengal, it must necessarily be disgussed there-if it is considered deserving of discussion, and will reach the hands of those to whom your lordship may consign it, long before it could do so through the usual official channels."

The Governor-general, we are informed, has thanked Mr. Forbes for his communication, the subject of which will receive his consideration. The Governor-general further stated that the feasibility of superseding the manufacture of salt in Bengal by supplies from other quarters has already attracted the attention of the Civil Finance Commission now sitting in Calcutta.—Englishman.

INDIAN MILLIONNAIRES IN ST. PETERS-BURG.

There is no class among all our subjects in India of whom we know less than of the traders. merchants and bankers, and no subject of which we are more ignorant than of the nature and internal ramifications of the native mercantile system. We have denied a career to the warlike castes and military classes, so that ambitious spirits, like Hyder Ali and Tantia Topee, can no or found a dynasty. We do not provide for the fighting element by means of our native army, with its English discipline, stiff organisation, strict rules as to promotion and contemptible prizes. The genius, which under the old sovereigns of India would have created new principalities, now finds vent in subtle and endless litigation, or in extensive and enriching mercantile speculations. Lalla Jotee Persaud would have been the Great Mogul's vizier or a soubahdar two centuries ago, instead of a commissariat contractor. Tantia Topee would have led armies to victory instead of spending his life as a petty shroff and ending it by a rebel's death. The security and peaceful government enjoyed under British rule, while they are fatal to the fighting, foster the trading class. Mercantile transactions as extensive as many on the London Stock Exchange are common in the marts of Central and Upper India, and in the bazaars of Calcutta and Bombay. Native capitalists periodically pledge half a million sterling with ease at the successive sales of salt under the present system, or become bankrupt to the extent of a million sterling without exciting a remark. Nor are their transactions confined to the interior of India. When money can be made, caste has not the power which is generally believed. "Banians" cross the black sea with the same facility as the Chinese, to sell English piece goods all along the east coast of Africa, and up the Persian Gulf. There are six thousand, of whom one-half are Hindoos, in Zanzibar alone, where without wife or family they reside till they have secured a competence, when they return to their native villages to enjoy it in ease, or to make it the nucleus of a new fortune by lending it at exorbitant interest. It is calculated that one-fourth of the trade of Central Asia with Russia is conducted by Hindoos, chiefly Sikhs. are several hundreds as far north as Astracan, most of whom have come from Mooltan or Lahore. There they have a temple and establishment of priests, and a great bazaar described by travellers as remarkable for a flower bed in front of each shop. They are chiefly money-lenders, and act there, at Novgorod and at Orenburg, as agents for the interchange of Russian and Asiatic goods. They marry Tartar women and have originated a mixed race known as Agriskhan. These and similar facts show us that the old days of the Veds are returning, when "merchants covetous of gain" were to be seen in vessels which "crowded the ocean," and when they "sailed in hundredoared ships," before caste and priest-craft had locked up the energies of the people.

A most remarkable illustration of the distance to which mercantile adventure will take the Hindoo, or at least the Sikh, from India, and of the gigantic character of his transactions, has recently occurred. The story resembles fiction rather than truth, and some of the facts are so suspicious that they would be untrustworthy were they not vouched for by original and official documents. Some thirty years ago a faqueer of the Khutree caste, but known as Roy Brahmin, left his native village in the district of Jhung. His professed object was, it is believed, to visit the Sikh shrine at Astracan. Years passed away, he failed to return, and was almost forgotten. made his way from Astracan to St. Petersburg, and there he settled as a merchant and accumulated a fortune of three millions of roubles, equal to nearly half a million sterling. Either desirous that his friends should share his good fortune, or anxious for the companionship of his own people, some six years ago he wrote a letter to one Ramdass in Jhung, inviting him to join him. At the same time a Mussulman of the name of " Moolla Ooch," as rendered by the Russians, also resident in St. Petersburg, and having made a fortune of some twenty thousand pounds, invited an old friend, called in the Russian official papers, "Galarman Chowk," of Sharpore, in Oude, to join him. The two seem to have set out together for the distant Russian capital. On reaching Moscow they were robbed, but on appealing to the authorities their property was recovered, and they were told they would find it at Nijni-Nov-gorod. They pressed on to St. Petersburg, how- Christian station-master was only Rs. 50 a-month.

ever, and found that their rich friends, Roy Brahmin and Moolla Ooch, had both died a month or two before their arrival. Ramdass presented his letter of invitation to the Russian agent of Roy Brahmin, but was unceremoniously turned out of doors with the gratuity of one rouble. Disconsolate, yet determined to have justice, he appealed to the Emperor. One day, while lounging in the precincts of the palace, the Emperor saw him, was attracted by his peculiar appearance, and summoned him to the presence where he told his story, presenting the letter which Roy Brahmin had written to him. Galarman Chowk had meanwhile been enter-tained by a Russian official, and on his declining longer to support him, he too had told his story to the authorities. About the beginning of 1856 both cases were reported to the Foreign Secretary in London through the Russian minister. The Russian Government admitted the wealth of Roy Brahmin and Moolla Ooch, which consists chiefly of claims against the State, and asked Lord Clarendon to investigate the truth of the stories told by the two claimants. The papers were sent out to India. Meanwhile. to complicate the matter, Ramdass died. There is thus a fortune of balf a million sterling ready for any heir who can prove his title, and Galarman Chowk is still in St. Petersburg awaiting the issue in his own case.

The Calcutta Foreign Office instituted the necessary inquiries. The names of Indians and Indian towns, as they appear in the Russian despatches on the subject, are strangely altered. 'Galarman Chowk," is the corruption probably of some Mussulman name—but of which? states that he belongs to Saharpore in Oude, but the Oude authorities can find no trace of either him or "Moolla Ooch." His only claim to the fortune of the latter consists of the letter of invitation to join him. But is that not a forgery, was he not told of Moolla's death at Astracan, and did he not accompany Ramdass St. Petersburg from that place? dualism which runs through the whole story is so strange that if the rationalistic principles of criticism be applied to it, we can as easily disprove it as Whately does the existence of Napoleon Buonaparte, or Rogers the historic fact of the Papal Aggression. As to Roy Brahmin and Ramdass, the Punjab authorities have discovered that there are people living in Jhung who remember the departure of the former as a faqueer thirty years ago, and the latter setting out to join him in 1855. Ramdass before his death stated that he had two brothers, one in Jhung and one in Umritsur, called by the Russians "Ambrasur." These brothers are there at this moment, and are the legal heirs of Ramdass. But that Ramdass was the lawful heir of Roy Brahmin and entitled to his fortune it is impossible to prove. There the matter rests, and these unsatisfactory results have been reported through Sir Charles Wood to the Russian Government. How Roy Brahmin made that sum we are not told. But so far as the present evidence goes, it is likely that both his fortune and that of Moolla Ooch will lapse to the Russian State, unless it is very generous to the disconsolate and mysterious "Galarman Chowk" now in St. Peters burg .- Friend of India.

Mr. F. B. Kemp, who was gazetted lately as appointed to a vacant judgeship in the Sudder, nas declined the appointment, and remains in his old quarters, as judge of Backergunge. In consequence of this the Sudder Court have been called upon to make their own nomination for the vacant post.

CANALS IN THE NORTH-WEST .- The result of the canal operations of the Government in the north-west from their commencement to April 1860 is a deficit of Rs. 18,00,937, chiefly due to the loss on the Ganges Canal. If the cost of maintenance and repairs be excluded the Irrigation Department has returned 5 per cent. to Government, and has a reserve fund of Rs. 70,28,476. The profits for 1859-60 were—

LE Howl .-- A letter in the Delhi Gazette describes a remote and almost unknown settlement of Moravian missionaries in a valley called "Le Howl," about seventeen marches from Simla, and surrounded by snowy mountains more than 20,000 feet in height. Four years ago the Moravians took up their abode among the inhabitants of this secluded spot, and the only communication they maintain with the civilised world is to send one of their number once a-year to Simla, to lay in provisions for a twelvemonth. They have derived their knowledge of the language from a vocabulary and a grammar published by a German, who has never been near Le Howl, and who lives in St. Petersburg. It is said that the chiefs of those parts are invited to the Russian capital, and that minute inquiries are made regarding their language and country. These materials are sufficient for a German to manufacture a learned treatise on the subject, NEPAUL.—By a private letter from Nepaul of 1st June we (Englishman) learn that Maharajah Jung Bahadoor returned a few days ago from Gosaethan, a place on the Himalayan chain, adjoining the Bhotea territory. He had been there for a change of air, and took advantage of the opportunity to make his orisons at the shrine of Mahadeb. The Maharajah set out on his visit to this place, after consulting his astrologers, on the 2nd May. He was accompanied by thirteen of his Ranees, the King and members of the Royal family; and travelling by easy stages, the party, with camp followers, doolee bearers, &c., consisting of about 3,000 people, arrived there in a week. The Mahara-jah had much "shikar" on the way and back, consisting of the musk deer, the common brown deer, and wild goat, which he hunted down by dogs, and ensnared in nets. Among other game a large baboon was caught, which Jung presented to the King, whose partiality for this animal is well known. This scion of a noble house was so pleased with his son-in law's kind attention to him, that he declared he would not part with the monkey for half his kingdom. It was chained cage to be opened, when master ape, with one bound, broke the chain and escaped to a tree. All efforts to recover this lost treasure were fruitless; and the King sorrowed so deeply for its loss, that it is said he ate but little for several days after. He has a menagerie of five or six monkeys, and his chief and daily pleasure is to see them fight! Jung Bahadoor returned to Katmandoo on the 25th of May, and on the day before, at noon, a royal salute was fired in honour of her Majesty the Queen of England. There having been an insufficient complement of men at the guns for the Maharajah's salute, he fined the general in command of the artillery ten rupees, and treated the captain in charge of the battery to twenty strokes of the ratan on his bare legs. Gooroo Persad Sha, one of the chowttereas, or dukes, and brother to Fettee Jung Shah, the late Prime Minister, who was killed fifteen years ago, during the revolution by which the Maharajah got the chief power, invited by him, returned from Betia, where he had taken refuge He has been restored to the rank of a chowtterea on a salary of Rs. 10,000 a year. It is anticipated that a marriage between Jung Bahadoor and one of his daughters will heal old sores.

ABOLITION OF HALF-BATTA.—The worst memento of Lord William Bentinck, the stupid halfbatta system of payment in the army, is doomed to early abolition, its fate having been decided in connection with the coming establishment of an entirely new code of pay and allowances for the Indian armies. This half-batta system was long since condemned to annihilation; and its existence was only prolonged in order that it might be terminated in the general reform of the military pay department recommended by the Finance Committee.

EUROPEAN DEPOTS IN INDIA.—Government being unwilling to incur the expense of the provisional battalions, to be formed from the company's European regiments, has ordered the formation of depôts instead, and that for the presidency will be constituted immediately at Dum-Dumunder the command of Colonel J. D. McPherson. of the late 6th European regiment, just returned from furlough to Europe. Thirty-five officers will at once be attached to this depôt, and orders have been issued to provide accommodation for that number at the above station; but officers arriving from England, between this time and the cold season, and for whom other employment cannot be found, will also be attached to this depôt, to do duty. These arrangements will be much cheaper than the provisional battalion scheme; and there is an economy in the command allowance, which will be only half that allowed for an infantry regt.

SUICIDE OF MR. J. L. TURNBULL.-Mr. John Law Turnbull, of Calcutta, of the firm of Greenway Brothers, of Campore and Calcutta, has committed suicide under the following extraordinary circumstances :-- On the 28th May he left home as usual at noon for his office at No. 3, Lyon's-range, and having given his son instructions for the current duties of the day, went to a gunmaker and supplied himself with a revolver pistol. He then proceeded to Colvin's Ghaut, and thence in a "boliyo" to the Botanical Gardens, where after trying the pistol by firing two shots in the air, he deliberately applied it to his head and blew out his brains. In his pocket was found a paper in his own writing, stating who he was and where he lived, also clearly exculpating the boatman from all blame in his death. The deceased was the only surviving partner of the above firm, and the executor to two large in future expected to reside.

THE 2ND SIKH POLICE CORPS have been disbanded. The discharged men have received a gratuity of three months' pay. Mr. Edmonstone, the Lieutenant-governor of the North-western Provinces, in an interview with the Viceroy at Benares during his recent tour, brought this subject to his notice, and requested permission to take steps for the disbandment of the regiment after its arrival at Lahore, as the corps entailed a heavy expense upon the Government of about Rs 15,000 per mensem. As its presence at Goruck pore interfered in some measure with the measures to be taken for the organisation of the new police, and as the season was far advanced, Mr. Edmonstone thought it right to avail himself of the permission then given.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT .- In the following towns in Bengal forms of Municipal Government have been introduced : - Tirhoot, Behar, Monghyr, Bhaugulpore, Purneah, Dinagepore, Maldah, Moorshedabad, Rajeshye, Rungpore, Pubna, Bograh, Nuddea, Santipore, Hooghly Serampore, Ooterparah, Mymensingh, Nuseerabad, Kamroop, Gowhatty, and Darjeeling. There are no towns under Municipal Government in the Arracan, Chittagong, or Chota Nagpore division, or in the district of Cachar. division orders have been issued for extending the provisions of the Municipal Act. The system has had a partial success, but it is in some places decidedly unpopular.

CASTE IN CALCUTTA.—Our Bombay contemporary says, that in Calcutta the fence has been to some extent overleaped, and he has heard of Brahmins dining at the Union Club with Sir Bartle Frere and Mr. Beadon! Our contemporary has not been misinformed. The Clubhouse (next door to the Town Hall) has been, if we have not been misinformed, the scene of not a few festive spreads at which the Baboos have used knives and forks with a dexterity that has quite astonished the members of Government! "My goodness, how the turkeys have disappeared, and so few present!" exclaimed the President in Council to an honourable member who sat near him. "That's nothing to speak of," was the reply; "only watch the ham; see how it is made away with !"-Phanix.

SURVEY OF CASHMERE .- A finished and comlete map of Jummoo, Kashmir, and the adjacent districts, and a chart of the triangulation of the Great Trigonometrical Survey on which that map is based, were despatched a short time ago to the Secretary of State. The first is a general map, comprising the whole mountain tract, from the plains of the Punjab on the south, up to Thibet or Battistan, and the glaciers of Nanga Parbat on the north. It stretches from the Ravi river and glaciers of the Brahma range on the east, to the river Jhelum on the west. The area of this survey is 22,000 square miles, and includes every variety of plain and mountain, from 750 feet above the level of the sea to 26,629 feet, which is the elevation of Nanga Purbat. Many of the districts embraced in the map have hitherto been unexplored, and therefore come under the category of terræ reclusæ. It completes the survey under Colonel Waugh's direction of the entire Himalayan and Sub-Himalayan region from the Ganges on the east, to the frontiers of Affghanistan on the west. Captain Montgomerie, who has concluded the Kashmir Survey since 1856, is deserving of great praise for the judgment, tact, and policy he has exhibited in his relations with the court of the Maharajah, in the management of a large native and European establish ment dispersed over a large tract of country, and in the conduct of the whole party towards the people. Not only have no complaints been made, but the relations subsisting between the members of the survey, and the officials and people of the country, have been of the most friendly character, and calculated to sustain the English This is a most important consideration everywhere; but nowhere is it more indispensable than in foreign territory and on the fron tiers of the British empire.-Times of India.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NAWAB NAZIM. - The Hurkaru states that the agent to the Governor-General at Moorshedabad having brought to the notice of Government that his Highness the Nawab Nazim of Bengal remonstrates against the decision of the Supreme Government in declining to entertain his claim for interest on the sum of rupees 1,39,599, which has been directed to be refunded to him from the Nizamut Deposit Fund, as having been improperly expended from his private funds in the erection of stables for the Nizamut during his Highness' minority, the Supreme Government have, under the circumstance stated by his Highness, been pleased to allow the claim for interest, which amounts to rupees 93,900, calculated from July, 1847, to December, 1860.

THE "NIL DARPAN" SCANDAL .- The court was filled yesterday morning (June 11) with a highlyrespectable crowd anxious to hear the trial of Mr. Manuel, the printer of the "Nil Darpan." On the judge, Sir Charles Jackson, taking his seat and the case being called on, there was a general for-ward movement, and most people stood up to catch the low tones in which Mr. Longueville Clarke, the counsel for the defendant, announced that he withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. A dark shade of disappointment passed over the faces of the members of the Landholders' and Commercial Association, who were present in considerable numbers. Was this the result? Had they only bagged Mr. Manuel, when they were aiming at higher game? Was their bait nibbled off by such a contemptible fish as this? Were they check-mated with a pawn? Mr. Peterson muttered something about the necessity of the prisoner's pleading to each of the four counts of the indictment, to which Mr. Longueville Clarke replied, that he had a state-ment to make. Sir Charles Jackson, who seemed rather afraid of the length to which this statement might extend, proposed that it should be made by affidavit to-morrow, but on Mr. Longueville Clarke intimating that he proposed to give up the name of the party who had given the printer the manuscript, all eves brightened, the members of the L. and C. S. who had sat wearily down, rose up again and bent forward to listen, and Mr. Peterson, on behalf of the prosecutors, intimated that on their learning the name of the real Simon Pure, they would be very well contented if the printer were let off with a mere nominal punishment. Mr. Longueville Clarke was determined to keep his audience in suspense as long as he could. He began by telling them that his client was a mere printer, who, on receiving a manuscript from a gentleman moving in the very highest circles in society (sensation), never thought of reading it over to see whether it contained anything libelous, but merely did his part—that of printing—for the most respectable gentleman (sensation again) who had brought him the manuscript. He then said that he doubted whether the work so published was a libel at all, but whether that be the case or no, it was not his client who had done any harm, if harm had been done. The highly respectable person (increased sensation) who had brought the manuscript to the press, and who was well known to all there, and who alone had held any communication with the printer concerning it, a gentleman of the greatest respectability-(intense sensation)—and moving in the very first ranks of society in Calcutta, was, he was authorised to state -(whispers of Seton-Karr)-was, he said, the Rev. Mr. Long-(sudden collapse). However, after a moment's reflection faces began to brighten again, and we heard it said, "Well, this is one step gained; let counsel be instructed against Mr. Long, and we shall probably get at gentlemen moving in still higher circles." So Sir Charles Jackson said that printers ought to be very careful about what they printed, and fined Mr. Manuel ten rupees; and so ended the last scene of Act 1 of the "Nil Darpan," or Mirror of Indigo, a Drama .- Hurkaru.

INDIAN PRIZE MONEY .- Assuming that the value of a single share of the Delhi prize money is about one hundred and fifty rupees, the Lahore Chronicle estimates the amounts receivable by the several undermentioned ranks as follows :- Captain, 5,250 rupees; subaltern, 3,000 rupees; sergeant-major, 1,500 rupees; sergeant, 1,200 rupees; corporal, 600 rupees; private, 450 rupees. The Lucknow prize money, adds our contemporary, will be comparatively trifling in amount, while a captain's share of the Burmah prize-money will not exceed thirty-five rupees.

RUMOURS. — There are sundry disquieting rumours about Delhi, Umritsur, and other places, says a North-West contemporary, "which we merely mention to draw attention of the authorities to them as rumours and nothing else; they appear to come periodically at this season almost as regularly as the monsoon. In the present instance it is not difficult to understand that reports of the kind may have been spread by the numbers of recently disbanded sepoys going about the country." The Peshawur correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes on the same subject as follows:—"Some trifling rumours of disaffection and threatened disturbances on the part of the soldiery who are affected by the recent reduction of some 8,000 Punjabees have been floating about, but are not traceable to any reliable source, and are probably without any material foundation, though it is just as well they should be sifted and traced if practicable; or those who bear us no goodwill will believe the authorities are slumbering, and might take advantage of some remissness to cause trouble."

COLONEL SIR GEORGE R. BARKER, K.C.B., of the Royal Artillery, and commanding that force in the Bengal Presidency, has been compelled by ill-health to return to Europe. The recal to Europe, in the ensuing cold season, of all the Royal Artillery, renders the departure of this distin-guished officer less inconvenient than it would otherwise have been.

THE GREAT SHOE QUESTION has lately been brought "on the carpet" at Calcutta, owing to Zelaloodeen Hyder, one of the Mysore Princes, having brought his shoes on the carpet of Government House. It seems that he was permitted by the attendants, under protest, to enter, the point having been raised in his favour that the shoes were English; but his name was next day struck off the list of Government House visitors.

THE RAJAH OF COOCH BEHAR has punished a British subject who committed an offence within his jurisdiction. This has attracted the attention of Government, and an inquiry is now going on as to whence he derives authority to exercise such a power over a British subject.

Mysore.—The frightful anarchy of the Nizam's Court, his persistent attempts to dismiss Salar Jung, his minister, and his own insolvency, have led the Governor-general to depute Mr. R. Temple, of the Civil and Military Finance Commissions, to visit Hyderabad. He will also inquire into our own civil establishments in Berar, with the view of rendering them more efficient. Any saving will only result in helping to create that surplus revenue which, by treaty, we are bound to pay to the Nizam. The matter of most importance in Berar, Nagpore and Central India, at the present time is roads to feed the railway and to reach the Godavery, and we are glad to learn that they will be vigorously carried out.

THE RAICHORE DOAB.—Captain Ralph Taylor has communicated to the Madras Chamber of Commerce a statement showing the state of cotton cultivation in the Raichore Doab:- is generally sown every second year; therefore the cultivation of cotton may be extended to onehalf the lands in any district suitable to such cultivation. In 1859-60 the cultivated area of the Raichore Doab comprised 15,57,400 acres, and of that number 8,92,861 were of black soil, capable of growing cotton. This is one of the districts lately made over to the Nizam of Hyderabad and now misgoverned.

BURMAH.—The inhabitants of Rangoon are still grumbling at the new Municipal Bill, and it would appear with good cause. A meeting, convened by Colonel Phayre, was held on the 15th of May, presided over by that officer, and attended by the principal commercial men of the town. Another meeting of the rate-payers was held on the 18th, at which it was resolved, without prejudice to the former petition, to require distinct information from the Commissioner as to how much of the money raised by the town collections was to be applied to its proper purpose, i. e., to be placed at the disposal of the Municipal Commissioners for the general conservancy of the town. Some other resolutions were also passed, objecting to the establishment of a municipality with any existing deficit, and the appointment of Commissioners, votes, &c. What with the ill-success of this municipal scheme, and the unpopularity of the Amherst Port dues, it would seem that no one in the Legislative Council knows or cares anything about the proper administration of the Burmese portion of our Indian empire. The military retrenchments which are being carried out are also complained of, and the merchants, &c., of Bassein, have held a meeting deprecating the withdrawal of the military. Bassein is by no means a safe place to reside in, on account of the many bad characters prowling about, and the absence of the military will make it worse still. There was a grand divisional parade on the anniversary of her Majesty's birth-day, at which the Rangoon volunteers were distinguished by a high compliment from the general commanding, for the manner in which they managed to go through their evolutions without tumbling over each other. Englishman.

TEAR FORESTS OF PEGU.—The Gazette Supplement contains correspondence on the subject of the Teak Forests of Pegu. Mr. William Wallace, of Rangoon, has applied to the Supreme Government for permission to work the Teak Forests on the Hline river, from which the forest department have as yet brought down little or no timber. He represents the difficulties he is under, as a contractor, on account of the Teak Forests of Pegu being retained under the exclusive management of Government. He contracted to supply the East India Railway Company with 8,000 tons of teak within a given time, of which 6,000 were to be of Moulmein and 2,000 of Rangoon timber. Regarding the former there was no difficulty; but in the case of the Rangoon timber the required quantity could not be had. He shows that the policy of monopolising the forest trade is most injurious both to Government and to private traders. The action of Government should be confined to the conservancy of the forests, the prevention of wilful and thoughtless destruction, and the girdling of the trees which contractors will cut down. The timber exported from Moulmein is chiefly brought from native states beyond our frontier where much risk is incurred by the foresters. Pegu is under good government and possesses many advantages for a trade in timber. The Government of Indiarequest Colonel Phayre to grant Mr. Wallace a lease of the Hline forests for three years on liberal terms, but subject to strict conditions and penalties as to the breach of forest regulations. They approve of the policy of throwing open the forests.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF POLICE.—Owing to the impossibility of one inspector-general personally supervising the constitution and working of the police of twenty districts of the Madras Presidency, the Governor-general, on the recom-mendation of the Madras Government, has sanctioned the appointment of five inspecting superintendents, on a consolidated salary of Rs. 1,000 per month, with travelling allowance at the usual &c., take their turn in rotation with cotton, which | rates.

THE NIZAM has expressed his great regret at having proposed the dismissal of his Minister, Salar Jung. Captain Davidson, the resident, has been requested by the Nizam not to bring the matter before the Vicercy. The Minister, with a sound discretion and true generosity, has not taken any measures to punish the instruments of this conspiracy against him. The whole family of the Nizam, the Begums, and the people, are all alike in supporting him. The Rohilla troops threw down their muskets when the announcement of the intended dismissal was made, and demanded their pay, declaring they would no longer serve.

DEATH OF SIR A. LARPENT, BART .- The mail steamer Colombo, from Calcutta, arrived at Madras on Saturday, the 13th of June, and left for Galle and Suez in the evening. We regret to learn that Mrs. Abbot and Sir Albert de Hochepied Larpent died on board during the passage. Sir A. Larpent was the second baronet. His father, the first baronet, was a highly respected London merchant. He stood for the City of London at one election, and only lost by a very few votes.-Athenœum.

GWADEL.—The Hugh Lindsay having been placed by Government at the disposal of Major H. Green, c.B., political agent at Khelat, for the purpose of ascertaining the facilities offered by certain ports in the Meakeran Coast for the projected line of telegraph from Bussorah to Bushire, thence to Bunderabbas and coastwise to Gwadel, Oremarrah, Cape Monze, and Kurrachee, left Kurrachee on the 28th May, and proceeded direct towards Gwadel, on the Meakeran Coast (in latitude 25.08 N. longitude 62.17 E., distant from Munora about 250 miles) until the evening of the 29th, when being some 45 miles distant, and it being impossible to reach before dusk, the engines were eased until day-light (5.15) of the 30th: then she entered the port and anchored at 6 a.m. in three feet low water with the town west three miles off shore. Gwadel is situated at the foot of a long range of high hills forming a promontory terminating in a cape called "Ras Noo," easily known by a single date tree on the extreme point. The town, which is none of the cleanest, consists of about six hundred mud huts, with a fort, apparently built of stone, without guns or arms of any description; the bazaar, which is narrow and ill-built, contains some few which is narrow and ill-built, contains some few shops kept by Banians, the goods exposed for sale consisting of European piece goods, dates, rice, &c.; supplies such as poultry and sheep are also obtainable, but it requires some three days' of the Rajah of Rajpeepla, a dependency of supplies and child, Mrs. Jones and child, Mrs. Jones and child, Mrs. Jones and child, Mrs. Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs.

notice, they having to be brought some distance from the interior. Water is to be had from good wells about one mile to the northward of the town, of very fair quality and in abundance. The inhabitants, who are mostly Arabs, are friendly and  $obliging, apparently {\tt quite}\, harmless\, ; they were {\tt much}$ pleased at the long standing promise of Major Green to visit them being fulfilled, and he was received with great apparent pleasure, the people heaping upon him presents of all descriptions. The harbour, which is large and commodious, is well adapted for ships drawing about eight feet of water, and affords good protection in the S.W. monsoon, being well sheltered by the high land in that quarter; the entrance on the western shore is boled, with plenty of water, shoaling gradually from fifteen fathoms to the anchorage in three and a half fathoms, about three miles from the shore, with the town bearing west; it is much used in the months of June and July by the American whalers, who go there to refit and purchase wool, of which there is a small quantity at times in the market. There are some native raft belonging to the port, owned by the Banians, who trade to the Malabar Coast, Bombay, Muscat, and the Persian Gulf, but several of these were hauled up, the trade to the southward being closed during the monsoon, though open all the year round with Muscat and the Persian Gulf. Major Green having completed his inspection of this place re-embarked, and requested the steamer might proceed to Oremarrah, situated about one hundred and twenty miles to the eastward of Gwadel, at the foot of a high range of hills terminating in a cape called Ras Arubah, or Oremarrah. The inhabitants, who are fishermen, are very poor and harmless; the water is scarce and very bad, and the country around being unproductive, the inhabitants derive their support from catching and drying fish, which they exchange for rice ghee, &c., with the native craft from Bombay and Kurrachee during the fine weather season; as a harbour it is not at all suited for the monsoon; a vessel might anchor there, but owing to the heavy surf it would be impossible to communicate with the shore .- Our Paper.

THE KOORIA MOORIA ISLANDS .- The two last "victims of the Kooria Mooria delusion" have been brought to Bombay in the Indian Navy ship Constance, Commander Cookson. We hear that these two men were rescued with great difficulty, and in a very gallant manner, from their perilous position on a desolate island to which it was impossible to convey supplies, and where, if they had been left a few days longer, they must have died of starvation. The case was known to be urgent, and one attempt by a merchant ship having failed, the Constance was ordered to Kooria Mooria to bring the men out at any cost. On arriving at his destination the captain found the surf was so heavy that ordinary communication with the shore was impossible. He therefore caused his boat to be rowed as near the surf as was safe, and then, tying a line round his waist, he himself swam ashore and effected the men's rescue. They were all three pulled through the surf in a state of complete exhaustion.

PALITHANA.—The Bombay Telegraph mentions the death, on the 11th of June, of Gohal Purtabsungjee, the Chief of Paulytanna, or Palithana, in the peninsula of Kattywar, province of Guzerat, a town in the district of Gohilwar. It is situate at the eastern base of the Satrunja, a mountain sacred to Adinath, the deified priest of the Jains. As an instance of the liberal endowments and offerings made to this divinity, it is mentioned that lately a rich banker of Ahmedabad presented a crown of massive gold, studded with sapphires, and of the estimated value of £3,500. The extensive summit of the mountain is surmounted by numerous steep peaks, crowded with temples, shrines, images, and viharas, or monastic retreats, connected with the belief of the Jains. The town itself is walled, and contains many relics of antiquity of various eras.

BARODA.-We, Bombay Gazette, learn from Ba-

Baroda. It appears that the wages of some of the Arab mercenaries in the service of the Rajpeepla principality had run into arrears, and having made several ineffectual efforts with the authorities there for the settlement of their pay, they appealed to the Gaikwar Court. Here too they failed to obtain redress, notwithstanding repeated endeavours on their part to obtain their dues. It is alleged that the minister added insult to injury, having ignominiously ordered their expulsion from the Gaikwar territory. Apparently they obeyed the mandate of the Karbharree; but before long they managed somehow or other to re-enter the town, armed with formidable weapons of attack and defence, and took the earliest opportunity of revenging themselves on the offending Minister. One evening about a fortnight ago, as he was returning home from the durbar, three or four of these Arabs suddenly rushed out of a lane, where they had been awaiting his passage, and most brutally attacked him. Although he was accompanied by his peons, he was quite defenceless, for they ignominiously retreated the moment they perceived that the Arabs were desperate, and determined in their object of revenge. But an old and faithful servant of the Minister, who happened to be by him at the time, gathered courage, drew his dagger, and thrust it right through the person of one of the most desperate of the gang with such violence that it drew forth his entrails, and he fell down senseless to the ground. The wounded villain died soon after. In the meantime, the hamals or bearers of the Roria seized the other assailants, and made them over to the police. It is said that one of the ruffians was thrown before an elephant, to be torn asunder between his fore feet and his trunk; but we are not disposed to credit that his highness would subject any human being to so barbarous a treatment. Our correspondent adds that Govindrow was doing well.

HER MAJESTY'S 6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons, now stationed at Ahmednuggur, will, it is said, re turn to Kirkee after the monsoon, and the 4th troop horse artillery will return to Wannoorie, and the head-quarters of the horse brigade will be removed to Ahmednuggur, their old station. These changes will take place in consequence of Aurungabad having ceased to be a military station of the Bombay Presidency. The new road now under construction from Patus to Ahmednuggur, leaving only forty miles to meet the railway at Patus, will not take a long time to bring the guns

&c., if required on an emergency.

Imports (Bombay, June 27).—Cotton Manufactures.—

During the fortnight the tone of the market has been very quiet, and sales to a very moderate extent have transpired, especially in goods in which the holders could sustain but httle loss. Grey Shirtings of 40 in. up to 7 lbs. have been in moderate request at previous quotations; 8 lbs. cloth has little or no inquiry, and the value has declined; 9 to 10 lbs. cloth has some inquiry at former rates; 45 in. cloths, up to 7½ lbs., appears steady at previous quotations; 8 tbs. 6d lbs. remains depressed; 9 to 10 lbs. is in better inquiry; no sales are reported in 50 and 54 in. cloth. Grey Longeloths of 36 by 40 inches are quite neglected, while those of 45 in. and 10 lbs. weight attract some attention. Grey Domestics are in livite demand; those of narrow widths, however, meet with ready sales at slightly reduced rates. Grey Mulls and Drills, being held freely in first and second hands, are dull of sale, and no transections of moment have taken place in either of them. Grey Cambrics remain unchanged. Grey Jacones are dull; sales were effected at reduced quotations. Grey Trinters are in moderate inquiry at previous praces. Grey T Cloths in good inquiry at steady value. Metals.—Copper has improved in demand, and the prices for Brazier and Sheathing show an advance on the previous quotations. Iron remains in an unsatisfactory position; English Bars, Square and Round Nail Rods, Sheet, and Hoop meet with but little inquiry; Swedish Bars are somewhat better in inquiry and value; holders continue firm. Yellow Metals remain unchanged. Steel is heavily held and dull of sale. Spelter, Implaces, Quicksilver, and Lead are without inquiry. Swedish Rars are somewhat better in inquiry and value; holders continue firm. Yellow Metals remain unchanged. Steel is heavily held and dull of sale. Spelter, Implaces, Quicksilver, and Lead are without inquiry. English. Exports Bounds, June 27).—Collon.—

in wood is dult of sale, while that in bottle is saleable at fair prices.

EXPORTS (Bombay, June 27).—Cotton.—The latest advices from Europe received here having reported an advance in the Liverpool market, a corresponding effect took place here, and an advance has been established in previous quotations. Large purchases have been made for export as well as on speculation. Speculation amongst the natives has again commenced, and the settling takes place in November. Oilsteds. —There is no stock of Linseed or Ropeseed available in the market, otherwise the holders would have been obliged to reduce their prices, as the demand is limited. Sesame very scarce. Coffice.—Mocha not to be had at market. Malabar also scarce, and held for higher prices. Pepper.—Both Bhutcoil and Malabar have advanced in price. Saltpetre.—Very little doing. Fine qualities scarce, and held computatively high. Madder Root.—Stocks are getting scarce, and sells at our quotations. Gums are largely shipped by natives.

Abolition of Transit Duties in Nagpore.

June 10 .- The Gov. gen. in council having reason to believe that misapprehension prevails as to the existence of transit duties in Nagpore, and of impediments thereby raised to the conveyance of cotton in that province, the following extracts of official correspondence are published:—

Extract from a letter from the Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to the Commissioner of Nagpore,—No. 5084, dated 27th October, 1860.

dated 2/th October, 1860.

After reading your report and its enclosures, the Gov. gen. in council can come to no other conclusion than that the transit duties should be entirely abolished as soon as possible. In the opinion of his Excellency in council the abolition should be complete, and should include not only the duties impacted in home preference of the posed on home produce passing from one part of the province to another, but those on goods imported into and exported from Nagpore, from or into any other part of the British territories, includ-ing the Hyderabad assigned districts of Berar under British management. The imports and exports into and from the other parts of the Hyderabad territory are very trifling, and probably not worth the cost of

If the picture drawn by Major Snow be correct. and there is no reason to doubt its correctness, these transit duties must be a most mischievous burden to the country, and it is no wonder that, under such a system, the general revenues of the province have not increased, and that its condition is stationary. Not only should the Government transit duties be abolished, but no Zemindar should be permitted to levy such duties on his own account, and if the proceeds of such duties have been taken into calculation in fixing the jumma, an abatement to that ex-tent should be made; but it is not sufficiently clear that there is any ground for giving the Zemindars compensation in any other form. The other Sayer duties should be abolished from the date on which the license tax comes into operation; and the agency of farmers should be entirely dispensed with.

The town duties may be maintained at Nagpore, but only to the extent required for municipal pur-poses, and there seems to be no objection to the sub-stitution of town duties for the present chowkeedaree tax at Kamptee, or to their introduction in any large town (if there be such in the province), where such an impost is suitable as a means of raising money for local municipal objects. But as a source of imperial revenue the town duties should be given up.

From Major E. K. Elliot, commissioner of Nag-pore, to A. R. Young, Eq., deputy secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, (dated the 12th November, 1860).

SIR,—In continuation of the correspondence by telegraph, having reference to the orders issued for the abolition of the Sayer transit duties, as conveyed in your letter No. 5,084, dated 27th ultimo, I have now the honour to transmit, for the information of his Excellency the Gov. gen. of India in council, a copy of a circular addressed to the district officers, under date the 9th instant.

2. Regarding the question of compensation to Jagcerdars and others, I propose to address you hereafter, after communicating with the deputy Extract from a Circular dated 9th November. 1860. from the Commissioner of Nagpore, to all Deputy Commissioners in the Nagpore province.

Commissioners in the Nagpore province. I have the honor to acquaint you that the entire abolition of Sayer duties in this province has been finally resolved on; and under instructions from the Supreme Government, I have to request that you will intimate to the customs farmers that their contracts now existing will cease with the close of the current calendar year, viz., on the 31st December, after which date the levy of all duties, under whatever denomination, and hitherto exhibited in the accounts under the head of Sayer, will be illegal and must be strictly prohibited. must be strictly prohibited.

Instructions will be hereafter issued in regard to the best mode of compensating the Zemindars and others who heretofore may have possessed the privilege of levying customs duties. In most instances a suitable reduction in the assessment on their estates ought to suffice, but where such may be the case, a special report should be submitted. In the mean time the most comprehensive measures should be taken for securing the entire abolition of customs and transit duties from the date specified. An extract from the Government despatch No. 5,084, under date the 27th ultimo, is annexed for your information and guidance.

A proclamation on the subject will also be issued, A procumenton on the subject will also be issued, the contents of which are to be promulgated throughout the length and breadth of the district under your charge, care being taken to assure yourself of its meaning being made known to, and thoroughly understood by all classes of the community.

LIEUT. A. C. A. WYLLY. Lieut. Aylmer Charles Alexander Wylly was tried by court martial at Cannanore, on the 11th of May, on the following charge:—

For scandalous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Cannanore about the month of August, 1860, wilfully and falsely stated to Lieut. Alexander Milner of the same regiment, that his object in obtaining a loan for the sum of Rupees 840 from one N. B. Appasawmy, butler, was for the purpose of paying off certain stoppages against him them awarded by Courts of Requests, and thereby induced the said Lieut. Alexander Milner to become a security for the repayment of the said loan; whereas he the said Lieut. Aylmer Charles Alexander Wylly well knew the same to be false, and did apply the sum so obtained to other purposes.

He was found not guilty, and fully acquitted "of all and every part" of the charge. The Provincial C. in-C. approved and confirmed this finding on 27th

CENTRAL ASIA .- The Cabool correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states, as will be seen in his letter, that the King of Bookhara, having been worsted in an encounter with the rebels, had applied to the Russians for aid, and that the Russian General had directed a large force to proceed to Bookhara. It was proposed at first that he should solicit aid from the Affghans, but this plan was rejected. The Russian troops were at Tashkund. Here, then, at last has the opportunity occurred for their active interference in the political affairs of these States. Dost Mahomed has given orders to his lieutenant, Ufzul Khan, to give all possible aid to the rebels, in the event of the Russians assisting the other party.

THE POLICE IN BENGAL.

So much has been said about the improvement of the police in Bengal since the publication of Mr. Halliday's scathing minute, that it is almost incredible that two such cases as those we are about to notice could have occurred only last autumn in a district contiguous to the very suburbs of Calcutta. The facts, however, are beyond all question, and indicate an almost incurable depravity in the lower class of native officials. All comment is superfluous. The police of the Burdwan district have been clearly proved guilty of the most atrocious cruelty, with a view to extort confession, and swift punishment has overtaken the offenders.

On the 9th of last August Mr. Birch, magis trate of Burdwan, while inspecting the gaol, was asked by the Jemadar to give out some clothes for certain female prisoners. He thereupon proceeded to that department, and inquired who were the women for whom the clothes were wanted. The first one pointed out was named Raemonee Bustobee, a feeble creature, upwards of fifty years of age, on whose shoulder blade Mr. Birch observed a dark mark, and he also noticed that her right arm was stiff, and out of its natural position. In answer to his inquiries, she calmly and simply replied that she had been tortured by the Naib Darogah and police of the Selimabad Thannah. She likewise mentioned that her husband, Hurridass Bustob, who was confined in the same gaol, had also been ill-treated. Having taken down the depositions of these two prisoners in their separate wards, Mr. Birch instantly despatched an intelligent and trustworthy Deputy Magistrate, Baboo Chundychurn Singh, to investigate the truth of their statements. The real facts of the case were then established beyond a doubt. It appeared that in the early part of June, one Sreenauth Adhicarce had charged hie servant, Bipin Chokra, with embezzling certain ornaments and rupees to the value of £9, and that the accused had admitted his guilt, at the same time declaring that he had given part of the property to a woman named Jogee, who had entrusted it to the keeping of her aunt, Raemonee, the latter being well aware that the goods were stolen. The police, however, failed to discover any traces of the lost property in her house, and the Darogah reported that there was no proof of her being implicated in the robbery. But the Joint Magistrate thought otherwise, and ordered a second investigation to be made. Fearing to lose his place if suspected of remissness in the discovery of delinquents, the her husband and subjected them to torture, thy of all praise. Notwithstanding that the behind her back by a rope, one end of which was then thrown over the roof-pole of the house, and so suspended her from the ground. While hanging in this painful position she was further beaten with a stick, and stinging-nettles were applied to her person. A blow of the stick having fallen upon her right shoulder, broke her collar-bone, and she became insensible. At the same time her husband was seized and hung up by the arms to the branch of a mangoe-tree, and swung to and fro till he also became unconscious. The sufferers were then convicted by the Joint Magistrate, notwithstanding their protestations of innocence, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment with labour, commutable by a fine of £5. It was while undergoing this sentence that Raemonee's shoulder attracted the attention of Mr. Birch, who immediately instituted proceedings against the police. The trial came on before the Sessions Judge, Mr. C. T. Buckland, and resulted in the conviction of the Naib Darogah, a Jemadar, two Burkundauzes, a Phareedar, and a Gomashta. The case was in the ordinary way referred for the orders of the Nizamut Adawlut, when Mr. G. Loch sentenced the Darogah and Jemadar to ten years' imprisonment, and the others to seven years-all with labour and irons. It is not a little significant that neither Hurridass nor his wife should have thought it worth while to lodge any formal complaint against the police. They preferred submitting to the ills they knew, to incurring the risk of worse by rousing the revengeful feelings of their tormentors. It was not until three weeks of their term of imprisonment had elapsed that Mr. Birch became aware of their previous ill-treatment. The Civil Assistant-Surgeon who attended Raemonee "only treated her as a patient for the fracture, and did not inquire how it had been caused"!-evidently a gentleman of an incurious disposition. It is almost to be regretted that neither his name is given nor that of the Joint Magistrate who was so eager to convict somebody. These two men in their way are types of the bad European element:-the one utterly devoid of sympathy for his native patients,-the other only ambitious to be thought a smart officer.

The second case shall be more briefly told. One Sabir Khan was wounded by a Chookeedar, while in the act of committing a burglary, and was traced to the house of his master, Jeo Jan Sheikh. The burglar confessed his guilt, and was duly convicted and punished, but the Darogah of Thannah Poorbuthul was not satisfied with success so easily won. He not only arrested Sabir Khan, but also Jeo Jan Sheikh, whose only offence was the misfortune of having a dishonest servant. Probably the motive for this second arrest was simply to extort money, for it was not entered in the police report until it became necessary to account for the prisoner's death. It was then stated that he had been taken down to the river to bathe, and had been carried away by the stream and drowned. Luckily, it was again Mr. Birch to whom the report was made, and he lost no time in sending the Joint Magistrate, Mr. Wells, to make a local inquiry on the subject. We know not if this gentleman be the same who convicted Hurridass and Raemonee, but in any case Darogah immediately arrested Raemonee and his conduct in the present instance is wor-

The unfortunate woman had her hands tied | road was almost impassable, he contrived to reach the Poorbuthul Thannah before his coming was even suspected. In fact, it is positively stated that the police never supposed a European magistrate would be sent, especially at the end of August, to inquire into the circumstances of a death reported to be accidental. So judicious were the steps taken by Mr. Wells that it was soon clearly proved that the deceased came by his death at the hands of the Darogah. He is described as an exceedingly fat man, and the Darogah was seen by several witnesses to beat him with a stick, three feet long, half an inch in diameter, and tipped with metal. Death seems to have been caused by a poke in the stomach, on receiving which the poor wretch suddenly fell down and expired; and his body, being first stripped, was thrown into the river. Mr. Loch was again the judge. and passed sentence of sixteen years' imprisonment with labour on the Darogah, while his accomplices were condemned to ten years, also with labour. What hope, then, is there of ever establishing an effective police except under the most direct European surveillance?

"THE INDIGO PLANTING MIRROR."

"NIL DARPAN," we are told, is a Bengali drama, intended to "depict the Indigo Planting system as viewed by natives at large," and has been translated into English by a native to gratify a wish "expressed by various Europeans." It is now ascertained that the translator was employed by the Rev. James Long, a missionary violently opposed to the planters, and in order to gratify that animosity quite prepared to cast any amount of contumely upon his own countrymen. But it is not the planters alone who are reviled in this wretched production, the proprietors of the Englishman and Hurkaru are likened in the preface to "the detestable Judas," who "gave the great preacher of the Christian religion, Jesus, into the hands of odious Pilate for the sake of thirty rupees." Indeed, the only Englishmen really well spoken of are the missionaries, whose "bounty, mildness, and forgiving temper," filled the ryots with wonder, so that comparing them with the indigo planters they began to say to one another: "All bamboos are of one tuft; but of one is made the frame of the Goddess Durga, and of another the sweeper's basket." The planters themselves are described as "the low people of Belata" (England), and as "the dregs of the Sahebs."

The scene of this tragic drama is laid in the once pleasant village of Svaropur, now desolate through the oppression of the planters. "My family," says Goluk Chunder Basu, a well-to-do ycoman,

"Has been here for seven generations. The lands which our forefathers rented have enabled us never which our forefathers rented have enabled us never to acknowledge ourselves servants of others. The rice which grows, provides food for the whole year, means of hospitality to guests, and also the expense of religious services; the mustard seed we get supplies oil for the whole year, and besides we can sell it for about Rs. 60 or Rs. 70. Svaropur is not a place where people are in want. It has rice, peas, oil, molasses from its fields, vegetables in the garden, and fish from the tanks."

And yet from this delightful spot he must go forth into foreign lands, for, as his neighbour Sadhu Churn chimes in-

"It is no more a place of happiness; your garden is already gone, and your relatives are on the point of forsaking you. Ah! it is not yet three years since the Saheb took a lease of this place, and he has already ruined the whole village. We cannot bear to turn our eyes in the southern direction towards the house of the heads of the villages. Oh! what was it once, and what is it now! Three years ago, was to once, and what is to now: Three years ago, about eixty men used to make a daily feast in the house; there were ten ploughs, and about forty or fifty oxen; as to the court-yard, it was crowded like as at the horse races; when they used to arrange the ricks of corn it appeared, as it were, that the lotus had expanded itself on the surface of a lake, bordered by sandal groves; the granary was as large as a hill; but, last year, the granary not being repaired, was on the point of falling into the yard. Because he was not allowed to plant indigo in the rice field, the wicked Saheb beat the Majo and Sajo Babus most severely; and how very difficult was it to get them out of his clutches; the ploughs and kine were sold, and at that crisis the two Mandals left the village." as at the horse races; when they used to arrange left the village.

There are two planters introduced, named respectively J. J. Wood and P. P. Rose, who are represented as committing the most horrible cruelties, in order to compel the ryots to cultivate indigo. Wood himself is made to say, "I have scourged those wicked people. taken away their kine, and kept their wives in confinement," while Rose carries off the wife of a refractory ryot, and causes her to die of shame and a broken heart.

"Ha! ha! ha!" he exclaims, "we indigo planters are become the companions of Death. Can our factories remain if we have pity? By nature we are not bad; our evil disposition has increased by indigo cultivation. Before, we felt sorrow in beating one man; now, we can beat ten persons with the ramkant (leather strap), making them senseless; and immediately after, we can, with great laughter, take our dinner or supper."

He does not, however, eat his dinner with much mirth after delivering himself of this speech, for an injured ryot "thrusts him with his knees," tauntingly crying aloud, "Now, sir, where are your kicks with your shoes on and your beating on the head?" and finally "throws him about, lying on his back, and flies off." This avenging hero had shortly before been severely ill-treated by Mr. Rose, who not only addressed him, being a Mussulman, as "thou child of the sow!" but kicked and belaboured him lustily-ironically exclaiming, "This ramkant is very sweet!"

Mr. Wood is even more abusive and violent than his friend, and accordingly suffers more terribly for his wrong doing. He never speaks even to his own agent without calling him a "rascal," or an "upstart of a son," or the "coward son of a kaistar," and even "throws him down with kicks." He also ill-treats the ryot who pummelled Mr. Rose, and stood upon his breast, "thrusting in the nails" till the "blood began to fall drop by drop." The hour of vengeance came at last. Wood has some angry words with a model ryot named Nobin Madhab, the eldest son of Goluck Chunder Basu, who has hanged himself in jail, and he insults him on the subject of his father's death. "Then placing his shoe on one of the eldest Babu's knees, he said, 'This is the gift for your father's ceresaony."

"Instantly the eyes of the eldest Babu became red, like blood, his whole body began to tremble, he bit his lips with his teeth, and then, remaining silent for a short time, gave the Saheb a hard kick on the breast, so that he fell on the ground upside down like a bundle of bena (a certain grass). Kes Dali, who is now the jamadar of the factory, and other ten surkiola, immediately stood round him. The eldest Babu had once saved these from the hands of robbers, so they felt a little ashamed to raise of robbers; so they felt a little ashamed to raise their hand against him. Mr. Wood gave a blow to the jamadar, took the stick out of his hand, and smote with it the head of the eldest Babu. The head was cracked, and he fell down senseless on the ground."

The avenger, seeing this outrage from a short distance, rushed to the rescue, and caught on his hand a sword-cut intended by Rose for the prostrate Nobin Madhab.

"Sadhu: When the young Saheb struck his hand! with the sword, like an ichneumon making a noise when its tail is cut off, he in agony from the pain of his hand flew off, after seizing, with a bite, the nose of the elder Saheb."

nose of the elder Saheb."
"Torapa: That nose I have kept with me, and when the Babu will rise up alive again I will show him that (shows the nose cut off). Had the Babu been able to fly off himself, I would have taken his ears; but I would not have killed him, as he is a creature of God."

However, the Babu never again rose up alive, and the sight of his dead body drove his aged mother out of her senses. In her madness the poor old woman mistakes her favourite daughter-in-law for the wife of the Saheb, and accordingly "takes hold of Saralota's neck by her two hands and throws her down on the ground," exclaiming, "Thou stupid, beloved of Yama (death). Now, will I kill thee (stands upon her neck). Thou hast devoured my husband; again, thou art calling your paramour to swallow my dear infant. Die, die, die, die now (begins to skip upon the neck).

"Saralota: Gah, a, a (death of Saralota)."

The poor old soul then recovers her senses, embraces her daughter-in-law, and falls down dead on the ground. To sum up, Goluck Chunder Basu hangs himself in despair and shame. His wife, as we have seen, goes out of her mind and destroys the wife of her younger son. The elder son has his skull fractured by Mr. Wood, and the wife of another ryot refuses to survive her dishonour. This is pretty well, one would suppose, for the events of a few days, and yet the preface bids us not to expect any "very tragic scenes."

It will naturally be asked how it is that the magistrate does not interfere for the protection of the rvot. The reason is simply given by the jemadar of Indrabad Jail. "At Sachigunge, on Saturday, they have a champagnes party, and ladies dance. Mrs. Wood can never dance with any other but our Saheb; and I saw that when I was a bearer. Mrs. Wood is very kind; through the influence of one letter she got me the Jamadary of the Jail." But, in one case, the magistrate is quite willing to hear certain charges by his friend Mr. Wood, and this is the best scene in the play. At the commencement of the 4th Act the curtain rises upon the Criminal Court of Indrabad.

"Defendant's Attorney: May the prayer in this application be granted? (Gives the application to the application to granted? (Grees the application to the Sheristadar.)

"Magistrate: Very well; read it. (Speaks with Mr. Wood and laughs.)

"Sheristadar (to the defendant's attorney): You have written here what equals the length of the Ramayan. Can the petition be read without its being in abstract? (Turns to another page of the application) application.)

"Magistrate (having spoken with Mr. Wood, and concealing his laughter): Rend clearly."

The case is opened by the plaintiff's attorney with admirable irony. He admits that the very profession of an ordinary attorney is "a cheating one," but he insists that "the attorneys of the Indigo Planters can never deceive:"-

"The Indigo Planters are Christians; falsehood is accounted a great sin in the Christian religion. Stealing, licentiousness, murder, and other actions of that nature are also looked upon as hateful in of that nature are also looked upon as nateful in that religion, not taking evil actions into consideration; even forming evil designs in the mind dooms a man to burn in the fire of hell. The main aim of the Christian religion is to show kindness, to forgive, to be mild, and to do good unto others; so it is by no means probable that the indigo planters, who follow such a true and pure religion, ever give false evidence. My Lord, we do serve such indigo planters; we have reformed our character according to theirs; and, even if we desire, we can by no means teach the witness anything false," &c., &c.

And so the trial goes on while the magiscalls a chaprasi, and bids him give it to Mrs. Wood, and "tell the Khansanah the Saheb who is come here will not go to-day."

"Sheristadar: Sir, what orders are to be written? "Magistrate: Let it remain within the Nathi, or court documents.

"Sheristadar (writes): It is ordered that it remains within the Nathi (signed by the Magistrate). Saheb, thou hast not yet made a signature on the orders to the reply of the defendant.

"Magistrate: Read it," &c., &c., &c.

So much for the "Nil Darpan," a play so highly thought of by the Bengal Secretariat that it has been circulated under their official seal and frank as "On her Majesty's service only!"

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.-July 18.

EAST INDIA (HIGH COURTS OF JUDICATURE) BILL. Lord DE GREY and RIPON, in moving the second reading of the East India (High Courts of Judicature) Bill, briefly explained that the object of the measure was to unite in one the two chief courts of judicature existing in each of the Presidency towns, which, although sitting in different courts, exercised jurisdiction of the same kind. The Bill proposed to abolish the present Supreme Court and Sudder Courts, and to substitute a High Court of Justice, and also contained provisions for the appointment of judges, their qualification, and their salaries.

Lord BROUGHAM objected to the provision that the Indian Council should have power not only to appoint the salaries of judges upon their entrance into office, but from time to time to alter those salaries, as it was obvious for what purposes such a power might be used.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON explained the meaning of the clause objected to by Lord Brougham, and expressed his readiness to consider any words which would make its meaning clearer

Lord Ellenborough thought the Bill went far beyond the necessities of the case, and said that had it come up earlier in the Session he should have proposed to refer it to a Select Committee. The Bill was well adapted for producing discontent from one end of India to another, for it proposed to appoint English barristers as judges, who would know nothing of the laws, languages, caste, and customs of the country. He then proceeded to call attention to the additional cost, which would be no less than £262,000, if the Bill were passed. In conclusion, he entreated the House not to pass the Bill without hearing further evidence on the subject from competent persons. As it stood the Bill was nothing more than an enormous job for barristers. He objected strongly to the provision for transferring the appointments to all the higher judicial establishments from the Government of India to the Crown.

Lord CLANRICARDE hoped the Bill would pass without much alteration. He raised objections to various clauses, which he expected would be modified in Committee.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON replied to Lord Ellenborough's objections, and explained that neither would India be overrun with newly appointed English barristers, as Lord Ellenborough feared, nor would the cost incurred be anything like the sum stated.

The Bishop of London drew attention to the fact that as the Bill stood the courts would have jurisdiction in ecclesiastical matters, some of the judges of which would be Mahomedans.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, having regretted that Lord Ellenborough had not exhibited his usual candour and knowledge in dealing with this Bill, vindicated English barristers from the charge of ignorance and unfitness to administer native law satisfactorily. At present the Europeans and natives were placed on a different footing, a defect which the Bill proposed to remedy. As to the objections that barristers of only five years' standing were to be appointed judges, that was the minimum fixed, but it did not follow that men of a longer standing would not be aptrate writes a letter. Having addressed it, he pointed. He proceeded to combat Lord

Ellenborough's estimate these new appointments, and curred by while he contended that cost was a secondary consideration to a pure administration of justice, assured the House that the Government had no such lavish views as those attributed to them. Having explained the different state of the English law at the time when Mr. M. Elphinstone expressed his opinion against the union of the two Courts and against the introduction of the English law into the Mofussil, he stated the position (in reply to a remark of Lord CLANRICARDE) as to removability in which colonial judges stood as to the Crown, and pointed out to the Bishop of London the difference between the words "ecclesiastical" and "spiritual," assuring him that the Government, in order to remove all fears upon the point he had raised, intended to substitute the word "testamentary" in place of "ecclesiastical."

The Bill was then read a second time.

EAST INDIA CIVIL SERVICE BILL.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON then moved the second reading of the East India Civil Service Bill, and said that the object was to legalize appointments already made and to define the powers of the Governor-General in making future appointments either from the covenanted or uncovenanted service.

Lord Ellewborough did not think the Bill just to the present civil service, interfering as it did with their rights and privileges.

Lord Lyveden wished the measure had been confined to appointments already made, and objected that uncovenanted servants were not required on appointment to submit to the same examination as the covenanted service, nor was any provision made for the employment of natives.

The Duke of Argyll and Lord Clangicarde supported the Bill, which was then read a second

HOUSE OF COMMONS .- JULY 18. MEDICAL OFFICERS OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

Mr. BazLey asked the Secretary for India when his promise to place the medical officers of her Majesty's Indian army upon a perfect footing of equality with medical officers of her Majesty's British army would be carried into effect; and asked other questions regarding the standing of the former.

Sir C. Wood said that the whole question of the Indian medical service was under consideration. A communication had been made to the Indian Government, but until an answer had been received no definite steps could be taken. The matter was one, however, that must be settled before long.

OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARTILLERY.

Mr. Torrens asked whether it is intended to place officers of H.M.'s Indian artillery regiments who are now on staff and civil employ, on the seconded list, as is the case with the officers of the Royal artillery when so employed.

Sir C. Wood replied that the officers of H.M.'s Indian artillery who hold appointments in the Ordnance Department will be seconded, but those holding any other description of staff employ will be subject to the same rules as officers of infantry and cavalry of the local service, that is, they may join the staff corps, or if they elect to continue on their present condition, they will hold their appointments as local officers, and will not be seconded.

THE OPENING OF THE INDIA MUSEUM, WHITEHALL.

The collection of native products, and the specimens illustrative of the arts and industrial pursuits of the people of India, which for several years past had been on view at the Old India House in Leadenhall-street, have been removed to Fife House, Whitehall. The museum, newly arranged, under the direction of Mr. Digby Wyatt, Dr. Forbes, and Mr. Downing, will be opened to the public to-morrow (Wednesday). Fife House was formerly the residence of the earl of that ever, to be hoped that the museum will be per-as he might reclaim and enclose, and the encroachment which he made on the river adjoining to Whitehall Stairs was among the earliest that had been made upon the bed of the river. The earl, having obtained the grant of the land, resolved that he would not live upon British soil, and in order that he might live upon his native land, while residing in London, he brought up immense quantities of gravel and earth from Scotland to form the surface of the grounds surrounding the mansion of Fife House, which he The residence became afterwards the property of Lord Liverpool, and has been held until within the last few months under lease from the Crown by his daughter. The building is not, of course, well adapted for the purposes of a museum, but it may serve as a temporary depot for the extensive collection of silks and jewels, and metal wares, and other produce and manufactures which illustrate the wealth of our Indian empire. In the entrance-hall there are placed the marble statues of Wellington, Clive, Hastings, Coote, Wellesley, and the other military men and statesmen, who have at one time or another distinguished themselves in the field, or in the council of India. On the staircase are hung the valuable pictures which were formerly in the possession of the East India Company. formerly occupied by Lord Liverpool is now filled with the mineral products of India; the diningroom is stored with raw products, and manufactures in jewellery and Japan wares; the drawing-room has been fitted up with much care, and in it are displayed the silk and jewelled dresses of the East, which present a most gorgeous appearance. A small room adjoining is filled with models of agricultural implements, and of the various craft for navigating the seas and rivers of India. The large collection of models, illustrating the manners and customs of the people, will be shown in a corridor adjoining. The six bed-rooms on the upper floor are stored with birds, which have been most carefully classified by Mr. Moore and arranged very ingeniously, so as to take advantage, in the best manner, of the somewhat unfavourable light which the small and inconvenient rooms afford. The kitchen of the esta-blishment is filled with antelopes, stags, leopards, and other large stuffed animals. A fine collection of the Elliot marbles, consisting of slabs, cornices, panels, and other portions of the sculptures from the ruins of Amrawutti are arranged in the grounds of Fife House. These marbles have not yet been exhibited in this country, and they are remarkable for the extreme delicacy and minuteness of their finish. The subjects represented are connected with the worship of Buddha; and the marbles formed at one time portions of a magnificent temple, of which the ruins now alone remain to tell of the patient skill of its founders. A more interesting collection of sculpture does not exist, and many of them will bear favourable comparison with the Elgin marbles in beauty of design, while they greatly exceed them in point of finish and careful execution. The large collection of ethnological specimens, containing electrotype casts of the faces, feet, and hands of every tribe of Northern India, Cabul, and Thibet, in the completion of which the accomplished M. Schlagentweit lost his life, are arranged in the entrance hall, together with many of those remarkable specimens of Indian sculpture which were formerly shown in the sculpture gallery of the India There is no branch of industry or of House. manufactures, and scarcely any description of raw produce, which is not illustrated in this most interesting museum. Some very considerable inroads were made into the collection by the trustees of the British Museum, who were authorised to take any specimens they thought proper, and they availed themselves of the liberal offer to the extent of clearing off nearly all the specimens of natural history. South Kensing. ton, of course, put in a claim, for the authorities there never allow a chance to escape of adding to their miscellaneous collections. It is, how-

of cost to be in-|grant him such portion of the banks of the river | any other establishment, and will not be lost in the collection of collections which already encumber the British Museum and the South Kensington buildings .- Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Council of India.—A special meeting of the Council of India was held on Thursday, the 18th, for the election of a member in the place of Colonel Durand, c.B., who has resigned, when Colonel Baker, of the Bengal Engineers, was chosen by a large majority. It is understood to have been the intention of the Council to elect Sir James Outram, but the state of his health induced him to decline for the present to undertake the duties of the office. Colonel Baker has hitherto been Military Secretary to the Council. The Secretary of State for India did not take any part in the election.

THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND. - On Wednesday, the 17th, a meeting of the working Committee who superintend this fund, which is now closed, was held at the Mansion-house, the Lord Mayor acting as chairman. General Alexander, Major Macgregor, Mr. William Dent, Mr. Deputy Obbard, Mr. Ghinn, Mr. Lowe, and Mr. Goodman were present, among others. ment was read by Mr. Lowe, one of the hon. secretaries, showing that the total amount of subscriptions received at the Mansion-house down to the above date was £110,298.10s., of which £104.500 in the aggregate had been remitted to India from time to time. Besides this, £9,616 had been subscribed in Liverpool and sent to India direct; £7,220 in Edinburgh, £6,854 in Manchester, £6,553 in Glasgow, and about £5,000 in Dublin; making the total donations in this country towards the alleviation of the distress in Upper India about £145,500. Towards the fund the British residents and others at Trinidad had contributed £583; at Demerara, £300; at Barbadoes, £350; at Constantinople, £46; at Cadiz, £30; and at Frankfort, £25, since the previous meeting of the Committee. From letters received by the Lord Mayor, and read to the meeting, from Lord Canning, the Governor-general; Mr. Edmonstone, the Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces; Colonel Baird Smith, and the Rev. C. Sloggett, chaplain of Lahore, all which were dated within the 1st and 7th of June, it appears that during February, March, and April, in the Meerut, Rohilcund, and Agra districts, the total number of poor people fed by charity was 2,508,863, or 28,129 daily, on an average; and that the aggregate expenditure in their relief amounted to £11.530. These funds had been provided almost entirely by the liberality of the local European communities and the equivalent contributions of the Government. While the number of people relieved at the poor-houses of the Rohilcund and Agra divisions rose gradually from 56,754 and 192,580 in February to 323,069 and 529,668 in April respectively, there was in the Meerut division a falling off from 331,141 in March to 268,253 in April. This was attributable almost entirely to the fact that the Eastern Jumna and Ganges Canals permeate the districts of that division, and that the cutting and gathering of the spring crops, which owed their existence to those canals, and came to maturity in April, afforded employment to thousands, and freed them from the necessity of applying for relief at the poor-houses. In addition to the numbers stated above, about 40,000 people, able to give labour in exchange for a money wage, had been daily employed on different works of public utility within the distressed districts. The actual disbursements had amounted to more than £10,000 a month, from January to the end of April. Those works were all in progress still, and would be continued, while others had been set on foot, in April or since, with various assignments of public money aggregating to £14,000. On special relief works in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab 143,500 people were estimated to have been daily employed. The worst parts of the famine tract had been traversed by long lines of works, or by smaller detached works, to which the name, who induced the Government of the day to mitted to remain, as at present, unconnected with suffering people had freely resorted. It was great and small, throughout both provinces, would not be less than about £250,000. Some isolated instances give painful indications of the mortality that has occasionally prevailed during the famine. For example, in the small subdivision of Bullubghur, in the Delhi district, up to the end of January, 1,371 men, 778 women, and 704 children, or, 2,853 in all, are reported to have died from starvation alone, being about 4 per cent. of the entire population. In the immediate vicinity of Roorkee, about 200 persons are known to have died from want of food or from disease directly induced by hunger. In the district of Meerut, about 7,000 deaths were reported up to the 30th of April, but among these were many from other causes than actual starvation. Lord Canning concludes a letter to the Lord Mayor, accompanying an elaborate report relating to the famine by Colonel Baird Smith, by stating that he had received a second communication from his lordship, intimating a remittance of the further sum of £15,000 to the Calcutta Famine Relief Committee, and he begged to repeat his grateful sense of the munificent liberality with which the English people had responded to the call made upon them from India. The committee at the Mansion-house, before separating, resolved to send a further sum of £2,000 out to India by the mail of the 18th, making the whole amount remitted by them from first to last (exclusive of the sums sent direct from the five large towns) £106,500 .- Times.

FINANCES OF INDIA .- The finance and revenue accounts of India have been laid before Parliament. It is estimated that the gross income for the year ending the 30th of April, 1861, amounted to £39,509,631. The chief item is that of "land revenue," including tributes and subsidies, £20,656,711, followed by the item of opium revenue, £5,638,699; customs, £3,768,677; salt, £3,391,630; Income-tax, £803,550; trade taxes, £213,980; with the various other sources of revenue. On the other side there is deducted £7,705,431 for charges of collection and allowances payable out of revenue, including charitable grants and cost of salt and opium; £31,905,454 for charges payable in India, including military charges, £15,270,005, and navy, £856,870, civil and political establishments, £3,684,451, judicial and police charges, £4,004,500, interest on debt, £3,168,819; public works, £4,084,001; £5,384,340 charges in England (including £1,305,961 for claims in respect of troops serving India, and £946,467 for furlough and retired pay to military and marine officers, with £266,761 for transport of troops; interest on home debt, £1,061,234); and, lastly, £1,072,771 for interest on railway capital guaranteed, after deducting net traffic receipts. In the whole the expenditure is £46,067, 996, or £6,558,365 in excess of the year's income.

MR. G. R. HAYWOOD, Secretary of the Cotton Supply Association, sailed from Southampton on Friday, the 12th, in the Euxine, en route for Egypt and India, as commissioner representing the Association and the Manchester Cotton Company. During his short stay in Egypt Mr. Haywood will have an interview with the Viceroy, and present a memorial from the Association, pointing out that the present is a most favourable opportunity for a great and profitable extension of cotton cultivation in that country. From Egypt, Mr. Haywood goes on to Bombay, and thence to the Dharwar districts, primarily to ascertain how far the supply of cotton therefrom may be increased. and to organize, in the interests of the Cotton Company, cotton cleaning and packing establishments at Sedasheghur and elsewhere. His route will then be through the districts of Lingsoor, Bellary, Bangalore, Raichore, Doab and Mysore, Coimbatore, Palghaut, Tinnevelly, Madura, Salem, Madras, Coringa, Chandah, Nagpoor, Oomrowtee, Candeish, Bombay, Surat, Broach, Baroda, Alimedabad, Rajkote, Dhattera, and Gogo; thence returning to Sedasheghur in time for the next cotton-picking season. During this tour he will report upon the relative advantages offered by the several districts for affording an enlarged supply of good merchantable cotton, and for the opening up of new establishments and agencies similar estimated that the entire cost of such works, to those proposed for the district of Dharwar. Mr. Haywood travels with Dr. Forbes, who has been deputed by Government to accompany him, and whose acquaintance with the dialects and habits of the Hindoo population and knowledge of the cotton question are likely to be of the utmost service. The commissioner is also furnished by the Government—who, it is said, have shown a desire to assist him in every possible way-with letters of introduction to the Viceroy of Egypt, and some of the principal Government officials in India .- Times.

DEBATING SOCIETY OF THE DALHOUSIR INSTI-TUTE.—On Friday evening (June 1) the first debate of the series, to which ladies were invited, took place at the Dalhousie Institute. We were pleased to observe that this room was filled by the time the chair was taken, many ladies having availed themselves of the privilege which has hitherto been denied them. The subject for discussion was the following :- " That the Dead do Sometimes Appear to the Living." It was introin a very able speech by the Rev. E. Storrow, who expressed his belief that the departed do sometimes visit the scenes of their lives on earth, and related several interesting and authenticated instances in proof of his statement. He was followed by Captain Malleson and Messrs. Parker, Nicholls, Jennings, Stanford, and Lazarus, and at the conclusion, when the chairman, Mr. Ernsthausen, put the motion to the votes of the members, it was negatived by a majority of three. The opinion of the whole meeting was then taken, when the decision was reversed (the ladies being almost unanimous in the affirmative) by a majority of eight votes. The interest evinced during the evening was no doubt owing in a great measure to the presence of so many of the fairer portion of the community, and the agreeable manner in which the proceedings altogether passed off augurs well for the continued success of the society. The chairman announced that the anniversary of the society would take place on Friday, the 14th instant, when it is hoped that all the members and their friends will be present .- Phanix.

THE RANGE OF SUMPTHUR has incurred the displeasure of Government for allowing a suttee to take place in her territory, and has been called on for an explanation.

TAVOY .- The waste lands in Crab Island in Tavoy are to be granted rent-free to the cultivators for six years. As soon as the monsoon is over, a tank and several wells are to be dug by prison labour.

THE INDIAN ARMY AND CIVIL SERVICE LIST.

ISSUED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

••• The details of the Amalgamation Scheme, by which the Armies of India are incorporated with the Royal Army, are given. The arrangements for the formation of the Staff Corps, and the new Line Regiments, are yet incomplete. It has therefore been judged advisable to issue the present Edition in its old form. The next Edition will contain full and complete information on these points.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic discloures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties-a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

<sup>46</sup> Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman .that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted-and, as it would seem, systematically tortured-Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 30, 1861.

"Extraorbinary Invention in Dental Suggest.—
To Mr. Ephraim Mosely, of 9, Grosvenor-street, London, may be attributed one of the most remarkable and useful discoveres of the day, that of a substance for the construction of artificial teeth, gums, and palates, so thoroughly adhesive as to his securely, without the use of those troublesome adjuncts, spiral springs. It is, in fact, the most perfect substitute for the natural teeth that can possibly be desired, and may be said truly to attain the me plus altra of art. The substance, for which a patent has been obtained, is purified Indiarubber, which can be moulded to every irregularity of the gums and teeth in the most perfect mainer, forming, as it were, an artificial periosteum to the teeth, keeping them from becoming painful on the absorption of the gum, and enabling the patient to use any force in masticating or striking the teeth together, without the percussion or ratting that attends the action in general cases."

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach Heartburn, Headsche, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effercescing Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. Draung Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly benefic al.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and nurity) by DINNEFORD & Co., 172, New Bond-street, London, and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the Empire.

PRICHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.— This peculiar preparation of dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a slugsish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well-known stomachic efficacy of camonile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these Pils the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy for occasional adhents they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience. venience.

Prepared by W. PRICHARD, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 1<sup>1</sup>/<sub>1</sub>d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all medicine vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—Foresight.—Many slight symptoms forerun most diseases, and should never in any case be neglected. In diarrhea, especially, the earliest symptoms must be checked, or the disease will produce most unfavourable events. Where swelling, tenderness, flying pains, and incipient irritation of the bowels display themselves, no treatment for safety and certainty equals rubbing in Holloway's Ointment. It should be thoroughly rubbed over the abdomen at least twice a day, and flaunie should then be worn next the skip, to prolong the friction and maintain the temperature. The Ointment alone will arrest the diarrhea, but its curative power will be augmented if Holloway's Pills can be taken likewise. Holloway's are the only rehable remedies for every bowel complaint.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched ria Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched ria Southampton, on the 12th and 37th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE arrival of the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd June places us in the position of the "needy knife grinder;" we ask for sixpence, but story have we noue to tell. There is, happily for India, a positive dearth of news. The only topic commented upon in the local journals is one that is usually supposed to be indigenous to "the isles of the West." Editorials and letters from correspondents alike refer to one subject—the steady downfall of rain. From all parts of the country the joyful intelligence is announced of the setting in of the periodical rains with more than ordinary intensity. It is certainly a matter for much congratulation, and we may now confidently hope that the last severe famine has ment.

occurred which will ever take place under British supremacy in India.

The only other subject especially noticed by the Calcutta journalists is Mr. Montresor's report on the state of the indigo districts of Lower Bengal. That gentleman, it will be remembered, was deputed by Government to visit the "area of disturbance" in the character of Special Commissioner, in the hope of obtaining an unbiassed judgment upon the relative merits of the quarrel between the planters and ryots. The conclusions he has formed appear to be decidedly adverse to the European settlers, but how far these opinions are rightly based it is impossible to judge until we have seen the report itself. In any case it is clearly the first duty of Government to restore order, and to give security of life and property to all classes of its subjects. The state of things still existing in the indigo districts is disgraceful to the administration, and, if permitted to continue, must inevitably produce very disastrous results. The law is openly violated, the police assaulted, and the magistrates ridiculed and set at defiance. We read of a Darogah having his head broken by the inhabitants of a village for attempting to arrest two of their number. A magistrate orders some cattle to be seized, which are in the act of trespassing, but the peasants laugh at his pretensions to interfere with their village quarrels, disobey his orders, and drive off the cattle in their own way. These may seem small matters in themselves, but they indicate-to use the words of the gentleman who brought this case to the notice of Government—that "the moral influence of the authorities over the people is entirely broken down, and that they have become as ready to resist a magistrate as a planter, when he interferes with their new notions of right."

The news from China is so far satisfactory that it is devoid of general interest, with the exception of a letter from Major Sarel, one of the party of four who have undertaken to make their way to Simla through China and Thibet.

In consequence of the late ministerial changes Lord de Grey returns to his former post at the War-office, and is succeeded at the India-office by Mr. T. G. Baring. By the lamented death of Sir J. C. Melvill, K.C.B., the office of Government Director of India Railways becomes vacant. We have not heard by whom it is to be filled, but it is difficult to imagine a better or more appropriate selection than that of Mr. Juland Danvers, who has so ably discharged the duties of Secretary to the Railway Department from the very commence-

It is reported that Lord Elgin is, after all, to be the future Viceroy of India, as successor to Lord Canning. We very sincerely hope that rumour for once may tell the truth.

Lieutenant-Colonel Streatley, Bengal Engineers, has been appointed to do duty at Gosport, under Colonel Gordon, Royal Engineers.

THE CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.

The Ceylon, with the heavy portion of the mails, was to leave Malta at noon on the 24th, and may therefore be expected at Southampton about the 2nd of August.

THE OUTWARD BOMBAY MAIL.

The Euxine (from Southampton, 12th) reached Malta on the 22nd, at 6 A.M., and left for Alexandria at noon.

The Vectis (from Marseilles, 20th) arrived at Malta on the 22nd, at 7 P.M., and left at 11 P.M. for Alexandria.

TELEGRAPHIC CONVENTION BETWEEN TURKEY AND ENGLAND .- A convention, with a view to accelerate communication with India, and in connection with the submarine cable from Malta to Alexandria, has just been entered into between the Government of this country and the Sultan, so as to furnish all the requisite facilities for the purpose as regards the Ottoman territory. The British Government are to establish stations and work the line, the Turkish Government undertaking to watch over and protect the cable at all points where it touches land. The official despatches of the Ottoman Government may be sent in cipher, and the British Government, if they thing fit, may make over the line to a company, the Sultan engaging to grant a firman to such company of eighty-five years.

REGIMENTAL SCHOOLS.

Much good has been effected by regimental schools under the surveillance of their respective normal schoolmasters; but we feel convinced that sufficient moral nourishment is not gained by the children during the hours of attendance to counteract the vice driven into their youthful minds while cooped up in the barrack-room for the remainder of the twenty-four hours, listening possibly to profanity, and imbibing that which will lead to future vice and intemperance. Even were parents ever so well-disposed to bring up their children in the way they should go, it is impossible for them to do so while subject to all the counteracting influences of an Indian barrackroom. All married barracks, or nearly all, have the upper portion next the roof open, to allow a constant current of air passing through the building, and this, though doubtless beneficial in a sanatory point of view, is one of the evils of which we complain. The privacy actually requisite for married life is nowhere obtained. What benefit can accrue from good impressions imparted to a child from its mother in one room. whilst a drunkard's voice at the same moment indelibly fixes the oath and curse on the infant The mother, being of mature years pro bably, has the moral courage to repel the attacks so offensive to the ear, but her anguish (supposing her to possess the smallest amount of maternal feeling) must be indeed great, in knowing the baneful influence it will have on her infant's mind, polluted thus early by sounds of vice and immorality. As we sow, we must expect to reap; no wonder, therefore, that the "young ideas" of India are, as a rule, so fearfully precocious.

The Lawrence Asylum and similar excellent institutions have admirably answered the purpose for which they were intended; but we strongly advocate the promotion of Government boardings schools or colleges in healthy localities, to which soldiers could send their children from their infancy, and where, as they grow up, they will foster all the better principles of our nature; be taught to scorn all that is mean and vicious, and where they may be taught how to fight their way through the world in an open upright way, and lay the foundation towards becoming useful and intelligent members of society.

The institution we advocate should be a college for the training and entire moulding of young minds from eight to twenty-one years of ageprovided the pupils desired to remain so long. The masters should be the best procurable, and distributed in such a manner as to impart healthy instruction to all. There is no reason why some of the students might not be expected to attain a very high degree of education, and these should be allowed to pass to Government Universities in India as a reward for their long and prosperous study. The college would then, in fact, assume the tone of those venerable institutions - the public schools of old England. But this would be a subject for after consideration; the great aim for which we now write is the separation of soldiers' children from the barrack-room at an early age. The youthful mind, ever eager to catch at anything from without, whether right or wrong, when confined and compelled to have infection instilled into it, soon becomes hardened, and often produces the most melancholy results: whereas had some providential occurrence intervened to cause the desired separation, the same minds might be moulded to produce benefit to themselves and mankind generally. A building, as described above, might also afford the means of giving a refined education to the sons of civilians who wished to take advantage of it, and thus keeping their children near them, be saved the expense and anxiety of sending them home. There is no reason why the position in society which the students held outside should not be strictly preserved within the walls by a proper system of classification. - Mofussilite.

EDUCATIONAL STATISTICS.

A casual remark which we made five months ago as to the educational inferiority of Bombay when compared with Madras and Bengal has lately roused the Western Presidency to a defence. We are glad to learn that it has quickened educational zeal there, and hope to see its fruits in the records of successive annual reports. The remark was not based, as is supposed, on the very honest exposure by Mr. Howard of the educational quackery long maintained and belauded by his predecessors. For that exposure the Director of Public Instruction deserved and received our acknowledgments, and all the more that we accepted it as a pledge of new energy, intelligence and success in the conduct of the department. That such energy and intelligence were manifested, and that great success followed, was not proved by the subsequent reports given to the public, nor is it seen in the present state of education in Bombay. On the contrary, we have had occasion more than once to animadvert on Mr. Howard's administration of his office. He has steadily depressed all private educational effort, which it was the declared policy of Sir Charles Wood's despatch to foster, by refusing to carry out the grant-in-aid He has maintained a crusade against all school books which he supposed to contain the slightest allusion to even the ethics of Christianity, lest the fears of the natives should be aroused. As the Director's opinions are so fully endorsed by the present able Governor of Bombay, we do not expect to see any other policy pursued in educational matters than one which is anti-Christian, and opposed to the grant-in-aid

But we are glad to learn that in the point wherein Madras and Bengal are weak, Bombay is strong. In the two former presidencies English education is eagerly desired by the natives, and the bulk of the money spent by the State is devoted to the support and inspection of English schools. In the latter, the complaint is universal and repeated of the low state of English education, of the difficulty of establishing zillah or county schools, while the greater number of the pupils are trained only in the vernaculars. If Sir George Clerk would continue the State encouragement to vernacular schools, and so establish the grant-in-aid system as to leave English education in the hands of independent teachers, supervised by the University, then would Bombay, in our opinion, be in a better position educationally than the sister presidencies. The fact, however, is admitted, that, so far as English is concerned, Bombay is very far behind. It was of English, and in reference to the Universities, that our remark was made. ports may be exaggerated, and are liable to incorrectness of statement. The zealous inspector or director likes to magnify his office. He has no standard wherewith to compare the results of the year's operations except one set up by himself. He does not come into contact with schools conducted by non-officials, or in other pre-sidencies. But the value of the Universities is that they establish almost a uniform standard for the various presidencies, to which all India can appeal, and which England can understand. If Lord Canning's dictum is right that the more valuable education is that which begins at the higher classes and permeates downward, then the ultimate test of all educational effort in India, at once safe, accurate and equal, must be the University examinations. Now, what is the fact in Bombay? Granted that the delay in establishing the University there has rendered it impossible that there should be any graduates, what is the truth as to the number and intelligence of successful candidates for matriculation? This, that at the first examination in October, 1859, only 21 boys passed out of 126; and in March, 1860, only 14 passed out of 52. We do not exaggerate when we say that the examination papers were so easy that an English boy of twelve would have been ashamed of them. A question of average difficulty was -" How do you form the plural of nouns?" year ago only four institutions were of sufficient

For the success in Bengal we would refer to the Governor-general's speech, and Madras is proportionally as far advanced. English education is still the weak point of Bembay.

Of its vernacular schools we have no proper test, but we are content to accept Mr. Howard's statements in his last report, and to stir up Bengal and Madras to go and do likewise. The North-West Provinces are before Bombay in this respect, however, with their Hulkabundi system and zealous director. Captain Fuller, following up the work of his lamented predecessor, is doing wonders in the Punjab. We have carefully compiled the following statistics from the annual administration reports, which on the subject of education are somewhat inverfect.

In Bengal, with a population, as given in the Parliamentary Returns of 1857, of 40,852,397, a sum of £103,202 was spent on education by the State in 1859-60, and of this about £9,000 was given in the shape of grants-in-aid.

In the North-Western Provinces, with a population of 33,655,193, a sum of £33,060 was spent on schools by the State in 1856-57, and it cannot be larger now. In 1859-60 the sum of £1,587 was given as grants-in-aid. The zemindars subscribed, as "school-cess," £12,500. The indigenous schools not supported by the State contained 66,256 pupils. Of those assisted by the Government and school-cess there were

In the Punjab, excluding the recently added territories, there is a population of 12,717,820. The cost was £31,246, of which only one-half was given by Government, the rest being contributed from the one per cent. fund. A sum of £2,686 was given as grants-in-aid.

Scholars, chiefly Vernacular, 1858-59. .... 84,718 Ditto ditto 1859-60. .... 42,888

In Madras, with a population of 22,437,297, a sum of £50,000 was spent on education, of which £3,300 was given as grants-in-aid.

Vernacular and Anglo-Vernacular ditto ... ... 11,483 11,682 18.005 18.184

In Bombay and Sind, with a population of 11,790,042, the cost was £40,000, of which we are not aware that any part was given as grants—in-aid.

English scholars ... 2,875 2,984
Vernacular scholars ... 25,693 28,079

The general result of this is, that in 1859-60 out of a population of 125 millions there was one quarter of a million in schools on which the State spent the munificent sum of £250,500 cut of a revenue of 40 millions sterling, or a little more than one pound sterling on each pupil. The amount assigned this year for the education of the whole country including Oude and British Burmah, and for science and art, is only £380,710, or one-fourth of what is voted in England for the same purpose. How miserably the grant-in-aid system has been starved may be seen from the fact that only £16,573 was devoted to it in all India.—Friend of India.

THE THUGGEE AND DACOITY DEPART-MENT.

intelligence of successful candidates for matriculation? This, that at the first examination in October, 1859, only 21 boys passed out of 126; and in March, 1860, only 14 passed out of 52. We do not exaggerate when we say that the examination papers were so easy that an English boy of twelve would have been ashamed of them. A question of average difficulty was — "How do you form the plural of nouns?" A year ago only four institutions were of sufficient importance to be affiliated with the University. Whatever may have been, or may now be, the defects in the British Government of India, it cannot be accused of having come short in the cause of humanity. Its efforts to put down suttee, infanticide, human sacrifices and unnatural rites; its attempts to promote the re-marriage of widows and the perfect freedom of the meanest classes of its subjects, and its special agency for the extirpation of Thugs, Dacoits, and Poisoners, all comparatively successful and all initiated or maintained at some political risk and great pecuniary expense, constitute a chapter in the history of general philanthropy as brilliant as has ever been written. A case of suttee or of human sacrifice now excites as much attention in India as it once did in England. The practice of female infanticide is almost extinct in Rajpootana, the Punjab, and Western India. evils of Thuggee and organised gang robbery were taken up at a later period. They had raged unchecked all over India for centuries. The ordinary police were not only unable to cope with them, but welcomed each case of either death or robbery as a means for extorting money from the villagers of the neighbourhood. The police of India under all administrations have been the originators of a large amount of crime and always the allies of professed criminals. When in any district Thuggee or Dacoity increased to such an extent that the magistrate was roused to check it, the police were forced to seem active, they apprehended innocent peasants, and tortured or plundered others. When again suspicion was lulled and the real criminals renewed their deadly work, the police were equally prosperous with the money that hushed them into silence. As now in Lower Bengal, they fattened on both parties. It was their interest to make crime, if it should have no existence. Unlike the curses of suttee and infanticide, Thuggee and Dacoity were thus fostered by our own administration, till they reached such a height that, instead of reforming the police, Government established a special agency for their extirpation.

What the Thuggee and Dacoity Department accomplished under Sir W. H. Sleeman is wellknown. So long ago as 1848 he was able to write that the old Thug associations had been effectually put down in all parts of India. Since that time it may be said that his energetic successors have not only kept them down, but have attacked the evils in such recently annexed provinces as the Punjab, Oude, and parts of Central India, have unearthed and annihilated several robber tribes and poisoners in Southern India, and have brought to bear on several native States a moral pressure which has resulted in the capture of the greatest criminals in their most obscure haunts. The work has been so well done that there is little left for the various branches of the department to do. Thuggee, as a crime practised by trained and hereditary stranglers, is extinct in India. So little has the establishment maintained for its suppression in the Punjab to do, that the officers are engaged in the somewhat questionable task of hunting up old offenders who flourished in the days of Runjeet Singh, and have long been quietly living in their villages. In Oude, where the crime might be expected to be rife, and where of late murder has been somewhat frequent, the new police have shown themselves able to grapple with it. In Bengal the number of Dacoities has been reduced by 60 per cent. The question then arises, is it necessary to maintain the existing establishments for the suppression of Thuggee and Dacoity in the Punjab, Oude, Bombay, Central India, and Bengal, at a cost of upwards of three lakhs of rupees annually? They were called into existence to meet a special emergency, they were always regarded as temporary in their character, they have done their work most admirably.

We have seen that their existence at all was rendered necessary by the utterly corrupt and inefficient state of the ordinary police. If that police is still to be maintained, as the local authorities seem determined it shall be in Bengal, then a Dacoity establishment will still be necessary. But now that the new constabulary has been, or is about to be, introduced into every other part of India, all reason for a special agency for the detection of certain classes of criminals is removed. The value of that agency at present is acknowledged to lie, not in the detection of criminals, but in the prevention of crime by its very existence. The criminal classes are kept in check by fear of its operations. Sir W. Sleeman was of opinion, and justly so, that were the strength of the Thuggee police reduced, new gangs of robbers and murderers happen with the trained constabulary, who | the established nerick of nine maunds per rupee have been organised for the very purpose, among others, of preventing or detecting all crime of whatever kind. They will apply to every class of offences the same care and vigilance as the special departments have done to Thuggee and Dacoity only. Under a graduated series of European officers, from the Inspector-general to the Sergeant, confined to fixed areas and proportioned according to the number and character of the population, the new constabulary, if properly worked, should be at least as efficient an instrument for the detection of special crimes as the special departments. While the new system will have this advantage over the latter, that its action will be more complete because better organised, and its ramifications will be more widely extended. Its very principles are that "the men must be kept together in sufficiently large parties to admit of well-paid and efficient control, and allow of sufficient numerical strength being readily at hand for any difficulty, or being rapidly concentrated for extraordinary emergency; that each man must have a certain known daily routine duty connected with the observation of the country which he has to perform, unless required for special duty; and that every part of the country, every village, halting-place, highway, and thoroughfare, shall be visited and inspected by the constabulary, and the village police communicated with, if possible, once in twenty-four hours."

But the complete efficiency of the constabulary as regards special crimes will be secured if the existing Thuggee and Dacoity establishments are absorbed in the new force. Their services have been most signal and successful. They are the repositories of a vast body of information and tradition which should be preserved and handed down. They would at once secure for the new force an admirable detective element, and enable it to tide over that early period of transition before it is well organised and experienced, when crime is likely to raise its head, and the opponents of the new system are sure to find, as they are already doing, arguments against its efficiency and success .- Friend of India.

INDUS TUNNEL AT ATTOCK.—The Punjab Gazette contains an account of the progress of the Indus Tunnel at Attock. Major Robertson having gone to England the work is superintended by Capt. Sandilands, executive engineer, and executed by a party of the 24th Punjab Infantry under Lieutenant Chalmers. The tunnel was commenced in April, 1860, and the main difficulties are now believed to be over. The work on the east side accomplished during the past year has been :- Shaft, 176 feet; double galleries to northward, 50 feet; drift gallery to cross river, 160 feet, gallery from the Lahore road, 50 feet; being in all 176 feet of shaft and 260 of gallery, besides 160 feet of brick lining to the shaft. The number of men employed is seven below and eight above ground. Those in the gallery work four hours in the twenty-four, and those in the windlass eight. The work has gone on without intermission by night or day since its commencement On the west side the shaft is sunk 102 feet in all and the gallery has reached 243 feet. gress is about 60 feet a month. The Muzbees of the 24th make excellent miners, and work with great good will. Sir R. Montgomery has visited the work, and expressed his satisfaction with its progress. Natives come from beyond the Khyber to see it.

Delhi, June 12 .- The few showers we had about a week ago led everybody to suppose that the regular rains had set in; this is not the The showers, which were pretty general, especially towards Kurnal and Roorkee (the latter place being all under water), cleared off, and we have since experienced even greater heat than we had before. The weather-wise augur from this good rain when it does set in, while the Brahmin sages in their almanacs foretel such favourable weather, that gram is to go into the would be at once organised. But this will not opposite extreme and be literally given away at whole village was the consequence, in which,

-a shocking state of things for the fat Bunneahs, whose harvest will, I hope, be soon drawing to a close. I am sorry to report considerable sickness in the ranks of H.M.'s 82nd Regiment. No less than one hundred and fifty are in hospital, and it seems likely that this number will increase unless the weather becomes less oppressive, and that speedily. It is a pity to see such fine orderly men pale and wan; but I am in hopes that the worst of the season's trial is past. It is greatly to the credit of the 82nd regiment that since their arrival in Delhi only two applications for Courts-martial have been made. The band has suffered lately, some of their best performers having been carried off by disease. There are all sorts of rumours current in the city concerning something that is to happen during the Bukra-Eed, which festival comes on with the sight of the new moon. I am not one of those who attach any importance to these rumours, beyond their evil influence and the necessity of punishing the originators. The 7th Punjab Infantry marched into Delhi en route to Meerut on the 10th. They must be pretty well accustomed to warmth by this time, so I should say that they would be glad to get under pucka roofs. I suppose you know of the death at Umballa of Mr. G. H. Freeling, of the civil service. He died of congestion of the liver, after a lingering illness. He had proceeded to Simla for change of air, but the medical men thought the climate less suited to his complaint than the Plains, and he was consequently removed to Umballa, where death terminated his sufferings on the 6th.—Linglishman.

THE KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY .- The Englishman states that the Kirwee prize money will be made over by the Crown to the columns of Rose, Roberts, and Whitlock. Madras will grumble at The whole sum will, we believe, amount to upwards of a million sterling. In Kirwee 43 lakhs of cash were taken, and in the district 9, or 52 in all. This sum proved a most welcome boon to our exhausted treasury at the beginning of 1858, and 5 per cent. interest is now due on it. Besides this, jewels and bullion valued at 40 laklis, but expected to realise much more, are yet to be sold. Government confiscated 321 lakhs of Company's paper which belonged to the two rebel cousins of the Nana and their estates valued at £80,000 a-year. The share of each soldier of the Central India columns will be enormous.

LUCKNOW CLUB .- The Oudh Gazette states that the merchants and uncovenanted officials of Lucknow are about to establish a club. They expect to secure rooms in the Chutter Munzil, which is now the Town-hall of Lucknow. There is certainly greater public spirit and more energy among all classes in Lucknow than in any other provincial town in India.

COAL.—A rough geological survey, by Mr. J. G. Medlicott, of Rewah and the adjoining country, with a view to the discovery of coal, has resulted in the conclusion that the best coals are farthest from the market on the line of the East Indian Railway, where they are most wanted. They lie in the most southerly part of the field whence a road must be sought in the direction of Jubbulpore, or some point on the Great Deccan road, and not towards Mirzapore. At present the fine coal found at Keryli, the northernmost point, is carried to the north of the Kymore range on the backs of beasts of burden, so that profitable working is impossible.

Saugor.-On Saturday afternoon, the 8th of June, Lieutenant Beaumont and Ensign Norris, of H.M.'s 80th Regiment, walked out to a small village about three miles from Saugor. Being heated they asked for water, which, after some demur on the part of the natives, was given to them, the water to be poured into their hands, from which they were to drink. Whilst Lieutenant Beaumont was in the act of drinking, Mr. Norris, who was a little in the rear, saw two men strike at his comrade with latties. went to the rescue, and planted his right and left in such style that he grounded his opponents. I am sorry to say, the officers got the worst, being opposed by about one hundred savages, all armed with sticks. The officers were tied and severely beaten, and had a very narrow escape of being thrown down a large well, as the brutes had them on the brink, but funked for fear of being found out. They were beaten with shoes, and all sorts of abuse heaped on them. They made an escape, but were recaptured and brought prisoners to the Assistant Commissioner, who refused to see them, but sent his bearer out and ordered two chowkeydars to take these officers to their bungalows. Next morning they reported the matter to their colonel, who put himself in immediate communication with the brigadier and commissioner (Capt. Browne), not the assistant mentioned above. strict investigation took place, which decided Capt. Browne to go to the village to apprehend the culprits; he started on Sunday afternoon with six or seven sowars, and accompanied by about a dozen officers as amateurs, who, on reaching the village, captured, after a splendid run over the plains and up the hills, sixteen, who were identified by Beaumont and Norris. They were marched under charge of chuprassees to Saugor gaol. Beaumont is the regimental interpreter, so understood all these fellows said. The men of the regiment are greatly incensed, and had it not been for the very prompt measures taken by Colonel Christie, they would have burnt and looted the place. All this occurred without the slightest provocation on the part of the officers.—Englishman.

An Imperial Poet.—A writer in "Chesson and Woodhall's Miscellany" says Bahadur Shah, the ex-King of Delhi, is always spoken of now among the Mussulmans as Zaffer, under which name he was in the habit of writing Persian verses. The translation of a poem is given, said to have been composed by him after the fall of Delhi, in which the following lines occur:-

"He who plants a babool tree Will gather babool flowers: My cruel fate is written clear-I reap the fruit of crimes! If, as king of Hindoostan. Zaffer walked in error's ways, Still vouchsafe thine aid, and help-My city weeps from hour to hour. God speaks kindly to me now:
'Zaffer, why dread the judgment hour?
Thy prophet guides thy feeble steps,
And intercedes before my throne!'"

CHANGE OF OFFICIAL DENOMINATION.—The Bengal Government some time since brought to the notice of the Government of India a suggestion of the Commissioner of Assam, that the designation of the Deputy Commissioner of that province be changed for that of Judicial Commissioner, and that the several district officers be uniformly denominated Deputy Commissioners, but divided into first, second, and third class, as the case may be. The Lieutenant-Governor entirely agreed with Captain Hopkinson, and recommended that the change of denomination be adopted in all the non-regulation provinces. There are officers in charge of districts in all the non-regulation provinces under the Bengal Government; that is, in Arracan, Assam, and the North-Western Frontier; who might be called roughly Commissioners, their status being everywhere the same, though they are of non-regulation provinces under the Bengal Go-different grades regards pay. 8.5 not in charge of districts might be styled assistant commissioners, and uncovenanted officers might be termed extra assistants. In Assam and the North-Western Frontier, but not in Arracan, there is a purely judicial officer who might be styled judicial commissioner, but the Lieutenantgovernor thought provincial judge would be a better name, being more in accordance with the duties which the officer has to perform. He left it, however, to the Government of India to decide this point, but he suggested the immediate introduction of an uniform designation for the officers of the various grades described. The Governorgeneral has sanctioned the proposed change of denomination of the officers in all the non-regulation provinces under the Bengal Government. His Excellency thought it would be better, for uniformity's sake, to adopt the designation of judicial commissioner rather than that of provincial judge.-Englishman.

LAHORE HIGH SCHOOL .- A school for Christian boys and girls of all classes is about to be established at Lahore, to be called the Lahore High School. It proposes to furnish a sound, intellectual, and moral training, with Protestant religious instruction. The fee will be six rupees a month for one child. Arrangements will afterwards be made for receiving boarders at twenty rupees per month. The expense of erecting a building, passage of teachers from England, houses for each of them, &c., will be about Rs. 45,000, of which the Government will contribute one-half. In addition to this ground for the building and playgrounds will be given. The Lieutenantgovernor heads the subscription list with a donation to the building fund of Rs. 2,000, and an annual subscription of Rs. 1,000. This school may be reckoned among the first fruits of the bishop's memorandum on schools in the plains and Lord Canning's minute thereon.

Indigo Prospects.—Very heavy rain has fallen in Kishnaghur and Jessore, which has done injury to the young plant, and has allowed the jungle to choke it completely. In Dacca and Mymen-sigh they have had very bad weather, and produce has fallen to one-half of what it was last week. In Tirhoot and Chuprah the small plant is turning yellow, and otherwise looking very unhealthy. They have had fine rains in the Doab, and prospects are good.

Exports (Calcutta, June 22).—Sugar.—In consequence of continued discouraging ac counts from the home markets, this staple remains extremely dull. Saltpetre.—A fair amount of business has taken place for England, consisting principally of fine qualities, at previous rates. Some parcels have also been bought for China. Calcutta and Furnuckabad refined are firm at Rs. 7-8 for 5 per cent. retraction. Nothing done for America. Stocks have been reduced to about 40,600 bags, Raw Silk.—Business to a moderate extent has been done for the present outgoing mail, both in European and native filatures, the former at previous rates, and the latter at a decline of about 8 annas per fy. seer. The demand is neither active nor general at present, and there still remains in the market a good quantity of silk unsold, Jute.—A moderate business has been done at about last prices. The demand continues stein fresh arrivals are expected, and rates in all probability will become easier. Shell Lac and Lac Dye.—Shell Lac has declined slightly in value, but few sales are reported. Lac Dye maintains its former value. Oilseeds.—In consequence of decreasing stocks Linseed continues in steady request, and prices are looking up. Rape and Poppy seeds are still scarce, and bought up by local crushers on arrival, present rates being too high for shippers. Castor Oil.—Large quantities are offering, at slightly lower rates, but shippers show no disposition to purchase largely, possibly anticipating a further decline.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, June 22).—Britisk Cotton Piece Goods, Grey Skirtings.—Light makes are without improvement, and goods, and prices of all kinds are half an anna higher. Mull Mulls.—A fair business has been doing in Grey at last prices, but demand for White is slack. Grey 39 inches, No. 1, at Rs. 1-4; do. 2, at 1-8; do. 3, at 1-12; do. 4, at 2-0. Book Musiness.—Retail sales have been made at former quotations. No. 1 at Rs. 0-14-0 to 0-15-6; do. 2 at 1-1-0 to 1-2-6; do. 3 at 1-4 0 to 1-5-6. Turkey Red Goods.—A small business has been transacted at last figures. 24 inch Cambrics at annas 2-10 to 3-10; 33 do. do. at 3-10 to 5-0. Prints and Chintzes.—There is more desire to buy these fabrics. Loose colours at Rs. 2-4 to 3-8; Madder Cambrics at 3-5 to 5-2. Coloured Yarns.—Red are salcable at last prices. Orange have declined 6 to 9 pies, and Green are 6 pies lower. Dyo at Rs. 1-4 to 1-9-3; do. German do. at 1-5 to 1-9-6; Orange at 0-12-6 to 0-13-3; Green at 0-12 to 0-14. White Mule Trist.—Fine qualities have rather improved in value, but ordinary sorts in almost all counts have declined one pie. No 20 at annas 7-6 to 8-7.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NAWAB OF THE CARNATIC .- A meeting has been held at Madras for the purpose of petitioning Parliament for the restoration of the rights, titles, &c., of the Nawab of the Carnatic, and their bestowal on Prince Azeem Jah, the uncle of the late Nawab. A petition was read and adopted by the meeting, which, we are told, consisted of from seven to ten thousand people most of whom were Hindoos. One of the leading Hindoo gentlemen of Madras, Lutchmenarsu Chetty, occupied the chair; another Hindoo gentleman, Sadagopacharri, a barrister, or rather as it is termed here, a pleader in the Sudder Court, was one of the principal speakers. The chief address was, however, delivered, by a Mussulman gentleman, who told the assembled natives how the ancestors of Prince Azeem Jah, the early Nawabs of the Carnatic, had been the protectors of the English when they first landed on the Coast of Coromandel as traders. which protection Mr. Wheeler's "Madras in the Olden Time" shows to have consisted in exacting as much money in the shape of presents from the traders as could be extracted from them. But this was a view of the "protection" that had been afforded which did not occur to the speaker, so he said nothing about it. Coming down our own times, however, there is less reason to question the statements of the speaker. The facts of the case, so far as Prince Azeem Jah is concerned, are few and simple. He was the uncle of the last Nawab, who died with out issue, and was consequently, according to Mahomedan law, his heir. He was written of by the late Court of Directors, in some of their despatches, as the future Nawab of the Carnatic But when the Nawab died, the uncle's claim to succeed was set aside by Lord Dalhousie, on the ground that the treaty was a personal one, and did not include him in its provisions. This decision was concurred in by the home authorities, and the prince was pensioned off at the rate, we believo, of £12,000 per annum. All this took place about five years since, and the reason which was advanced at the meeting for not moving earlier in the matter was, that efforts were at first made by way of memorials to get the musnud restored and that subsequently the breaking out of the rebellion rendered any public action in the affair inopportune. There can be little doubt, we imagine, that Prince Azeem Jah ought, if treaties are binding, to be on the musnud; and there can be as little doubt that he will not sit there. He has slept too long over his rights, and to re-open that question would re-open too many others of the same inconvenient kind; so it is generally thought that nothing will come of the late demonstration .- Athenœum.

PEGU POLICE.—Lieutenant Thomas Lowndes, 44th regiment Madras native infantry, has been appointed probationary superintendent of the third class, on Rs. 500 per month; Lieutenant John C. Middleton, 23rd regiment Madras native infantry, probationary superintendent of the third class, on Rs. 500 per mensem; Captain Guy Sanders, 9th regiment Madras native infantry superintendent of the first class, on Rs. 700 per month; Lieutenant John Duval, 50th regiment Madras native infantry, superintendent of the first class, on Rs. 700 per month; Lieutenant S.

per month; Lieutenant G. S. Hutchings, 9th regiment Madras native infantry, probationary assistant superintendent, on Rs. 400 per mensem; P. B. Doyle, Esq., superintendent of the second class, on Rs. 600 per mensem.

Essay on Pepper.—The Travancore Government offer a gold medal for the best essay on the cultivation of pepper in that province. It may be in English or Malayalim. It must treat of the nature of the soil, situation and climate required for the cultivation, the method of preparing and laying out a plantation, the selection of plants, the mode of bringing them up, the manures that should be used, and all other particulars. The essays must be sent to the Dewan on or before the 14th of August. The Court of Travancore resembles that of Siam in its regard for English science and education. It supports a valuable observatory and a fair museum, is carrying out a magnetic survey of the country, and imports models of machinery from England. Madava Row, its Dewan, is a worthy parallel to Salar Jung in Hyderabad.

CANNANORE, May 29.—The volunteering for general service ended last week. The entire company of European Artillery here have taken the bounty; the men of the horse battery attached to this company (East Indians) were anxious for the bounty money, but were disappointed, as they were not permitted to volunteer for general service. I regret to learn from Madras the decease of the oldest member of the Madras medical service, Doctor Ramsay Sladen, physician-general, who reached the good old age of seventy four years in this much decried climate. Doctor Sladen retired from public duty at the expiration of his term of service, viz., in December, 1846, and has resided without interruption in India for upwards of fifty-four years, having long given up all intention of returning to his native country. Cholera is prevailing in the Moplah town of Cannanore, carrying off eight or ten daily. The cantonment is free from this epidemic, and the troops enjoy good health. Weather cloudy, and very oppres We daily expect the monsoon to set in.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON, accompanied by his staff, and Colonel Sir Arthur Cotton, left for Coconada on the morning of the 25th June. It is his Excellency's intention to visit the great irrigation works on the Godavery. As there has always been much hot disputing respecting the benefits these works have conferred on the people, and their profitableness to 'the State, this visit is regarded with considerable interest, seeing that his Excellency's training as an engineer qualifies him to pronounce on the professional character of the works, and that his experience as a ruler ought to qualify him for giving judgment on the other point.

HYDERABAD.-Everything remains in the same state of suspense as when I last wrote. Nizam still fences with the resident, and withholds authority from Salar Jung. The officer commanding at Jaulnah has incurred the displeasure of Government, who have called on him for explanation for his alleged refusal to afford shelter to a company of sappers sent to Jaulnah by Sir George Clerk, on the requisition of the viceroy. A reward of Rs. 1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of Chuttroo Ghond, a relative of the Rajid Ghond, who raised some disturbances a year or so ago, and has been caught and imprisoned.

Hong Kong, June 12 .- The London Mail of the 26th April arrived here on the 6th instant.

The state of affairs in Japan for some time back has been such, that the absence of news implies a maintenance of those friendly relations with the powers of this almost newly-opened country, which were resumed upon the recal of Mr. Alcock from Yokohama, assuming those to have been suspended at the time of that gentleman's flight from Yedo. We have no information regarding Japanese matters at present, beyond the facts that a newspaper has long been on the eve of establishment at Nagasaki, and that a work entitled "The Elements of Japanese Grammar" has just been published at the London Mission, Shanghai, with the name of Mr. Rutherford Alcock as author. We do not attach much importance to a rumour that the Japanese will send embassies to the Treaty Powers for the purpose of begging off that article in the various treaties, which opens Yedo from January 1st, 1862. The matter is of some importance, and until the facts are correctly ascertained it is unnecessary to comment upon them.

We are informed that all is tranquil at Pekin, and again it must be admitted that no better news could be desired. The totally new circumstances of our ambassador's presence in that city are apt to induce a little anxiety, not less for his safety than for his behaviour, and it is something to know that affairs in Pekin have in no way been disturbed since the date of our last intelligence. From Tien-tsin we learn that everything goes on smoothly, that trade is moving, and that our friends, military and civilian, are happy and comfortable. The heat has been considerable there about noon, reaching 89 degrees on the thermometer, but this high temperature has much less of what is unhealthy about it than the heat of the tropics has. We reported some weeks ago that the insurgents were approaching in the direction of Tien-tsin; it now seems that they have disappeared from the Che-li and Shan-tung provinces, and are supposed to be in Honam. Their movements and the reasons for those movements are a subject of very vague speculation at the best. If one side has in any way prevailed in the conflicts during the last fortnight, between rebels and Imperialists, it is perhaps the latter, but scarcely in any appreciable degree. A rumour that Mr. Harry Parkes will proceed to England to confer about having this contention by-and-bye settled one way or another, by England putting her sword into either scale, is, we believe, incorrect. Our country has come fairly enough out of the last embroilment, and a new complication should be shunned. The rumour as to Mr. Parkes' mission home may be idle gossip, but as such a policy as we hint at is on the cards, it cannot be too soon exploded. The following account, which we find in the North China Herald of 1st June, is the first shadow of a misunderstanding between ourselves and the rebels; we hope it will not take any more substantial form :-

On the 24th ult. Captein R. Dew, and one or two other naval and military officers went up the river in H.M.'s gun-boat Flamer to deliver a letter to the commander-in-chief of the rebel forces in this neighbourhood, intimating that any interference on their part with boats engaged in conveying silk for foreigners from the producing districts to Shanghai would be treated as a hostile step, and warning them that if they approached within two days' march of Ningpo they would come into collision with the British forces. They proceeded about forty miles up the river in the steamer, and then in ship's boats, by creeks, to Tsingpo, when a small party, consisting of Captain Dew, Mr. Alabaster, and a boy carrying a white flag on a boat-hook, left the boat and advanced towards gate. On their approach the walls manned, and a fire from gingalls and the gate. guns was kept up upon them. They exhibited the letter to indicate the object of their visit, but the firing continued. No other course was left than to retire; this they did after placing the letter in the cleft of a bamboo and sticking it in the ground. This occurred at the same place where the Imperialists were lately repulsed and twenty-two of the Chinese foreign legion killed or wounded. They then returned to the Flamer, and arrived here late on last Saturday night. French steamer Contest, with a small iron steamer having on board the French Admiral and other officers, accompanied the British party up the river, but returned without proceeding to Tsingpo. We believe a party will go up again next week to demand an apology, on which occasion the gunboat will be taken within range of the city wall."

Commodore Stribbling, who commands the American squadron in the China waters, has returned from an expedition up the Yang-tsze river, where he has procured for his countrymen the same freedom from molestation from the rebels which had before been pledged to Admiral Hope in behalf of British subjects. Three native boats, under charge of Europeans, proceeding up to the silk district to purchase produce, were recently attacked by Imperialists and robbed of treasure to the axtent of 72,000 taels; prompt steps have been taken to have the loss made good.

The following is a communication from Major Sarel to the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. We trust to hear from the travellers when they reach Chingtu, a large city in the middle of Sze-chuen, to arrive at which our friends must soon quit the course of the great river:—

Description of the Yang-tsze-kiang, from Hankow to Kwei-Chau Fu, 1,203 English miles from Shanghai.

"From Hankow to Yoh-chau, at the entrance to the Tung-ting Lake, we were taken in tow by Admiral Sir James Hope; and as that part of the river was surveyed by the naval officers, Captain Blackiston did not commence his chart until we left Yoh-chau.

"Nothing remarkable was met with between Hankow and Yoh-chau. This town is situated at the entrance to the Tung-ting Lake. I consider it well located for a trading port, as more merchandise apparently comes into the Yang-tsze by the Lake than by the upper part of the Great River. There is water conveyance from it through the Lake by a canal, which joins the river about four or five miles above Kian-chau; this is a shorter route than by the river, but we travelled by the river in order to make a chart of it, so that I can give no information of the country through which the canal passes; the boatmen said there was not sufficient water in it for steamers. After leaving Yoh-chau, the river becomes very tortuous. (I ought to mention that at Yoh-chau we observed a great number of sheep grazing; this is the only place we have seen them on the river, and very few cattle have been seen.) The country on both banks is flat; and immense sand pits reach into the river, which are uncovered with water at this time of year. The land is cultivated everywhere with wheat and beans.

"King-chau is a flourishing town, and a great number of Sze-chuen junks come there, bringing salt, tea, sugar, and tobacco, and taking back cotton, raw and manufactured. Coal is brought by way of the lake and canal from Hu-nan. The town is populous, being inhabited by Tartars and Chinese; the numbers given us were absurd. It is five days by land from Hankow. I give the value of different articles as follows:—1 Mexican dollar = 1,000 cash; tea, 140 cash per catty; charcoal, 1,800 cash per picul of 100 catties; flour, 20 cash per catty; these were the prices we paid, so that the articles are probably cheaper.

"From King-chau to Itu the country is flat and cultivated as below. At Itu mountains first commence, and continue to Ichang, or Y-lin, as it is called on some old maps. The current is here not so rapid as lower down, and wherever we got soundings we never found less than four fathoms in mid-channel. At Ichang a great number of junks were collected, but they were generally full of braves, who were being sent to Sze-chuen to put down the robbers that have lately become very troublesome there. There is not much indication of trade. We met a fleet of about 200 junks with Tartar troops on their way to Hankow to oppose the rebels.

About two miles above Ichang the hills contract to a precipitous gorge, about eighty yards in width; the current becomes here much stronger, and shortly after the rapids commence, and between Ichang and Kweichau Fu we had to ascend seven or eight of them. At this time of the year they would not be practicable for steamers. From the marks on the faces of the cliffs, the water at times rises seventy or eighty feet, but in a place where the rocks are almost vertical, I should think the current would increase so much that no steamer could stem it. Except close to the rapids there are generally strong eddies, which the country boats take advantage of, and might be of service to steamers; but as these rapids extend almost the whole way from Ichang to Kweichau, such a break (supposing the river to be navigable above) would present a serious obstacle to navigation. In a great number of places in the gorge between Ichang and Kweichau coal is worked in galleries driven into the hill-sides close to the river; it is worked into bricks with water, and sent in boats down to Ichang, which place they reach in a day.

"About Kweichau the poppy is cultivated and opium made; we were asked nearly four dollars a catty for it, but the Prefect of the district said that its proper cost was little over two dollars. Raw silk was seen in some shops. Mexican dollars have always been current at £1,000 cash; we have no more, or they would probably be current here. We got yesterday seventeen hundred and twenty cash for a tacl of silver.

"I did not expect to send letters so soon, and am unable now to forward a copy of Captain Blackiston's chart; but I hope to be able to do so from Chingtu, or, failing that, from India.

"H. A. Sarel, Major 17th Lancers."
Chinkiang is still closely invested by the rebels;
the British Consulate is stationed at Silver Island,

At Hankow the natives are returning from their flight on the supposed approach of the rebels, and trade is returning with them.

At Ningpo business is dull, and the newly-established fereign Collectorate of Customs for the Chinese is causing trouble from informality in the working.

Chapoo is still held by the insurgents.

Rumours as to the speedy evacuation of Canton by foreign troops are still as rife, and no doubt as groundless, as ever; we believe there is no prospect of that event taking place before September at the soonest. A missionary expedition up the Canton river has lately been made, and places unvisited hitherto, as well as places more familiar, have been visited by the Rev. Dr. Legge and two friends. The result of their few weeks' travelling has been very pleasing.

In local matters nothing is more important than the proceedings that have inaugurated the establishment of the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce, the value of which institution is now no longer a matter of question.

We have attained our regular summer temperature of 85 to 90 degrees, but are still open to the relaxations which enlivened our winter. The gentlemen amateurs, whose last season was so great a success, are about to have a short season of two performances, and everybody has determined to enjoy this brief snatch of mirth as fully as before. Miss Emma Grattan and her brother have given an entertainment in the theatre, which has been most successful.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, June 29.—The weather for the past fortnight has been good, and favourable to the preparing and shipping of produce.

The prospects of the coming crop are still rather gloomy. Labour is very plentiful; the coolies coming over in large numbers, and exciting fears in some quarters that work will not be found for many of them. This would be a sad misfortune, and would operate much against a future visit from the disappointed coolies, and we trust that it will not be realised.

The volunteer movement still excites attention. Something definite on the railway question may now be speedily looked for. The Governor has returned to Colombo, and the executive council civingorated by the infusion of new blood, (Mr. Pennefather, the new Auditor-general having been sworn in) had a meeting on the 24th instant. The legislative council meet on the 17th proximo.

The export of coffee during the fortnight amounts to 50,001 cwts. in the proportion of 36,641 plantation, and 13,360 cwts. native. The greater portion of which went as usual to London, for which port six ships have sailed, taking 34,767 cwts. plantation and 6,136 cwts. native. The Charles and Pauline, which sailed for Havre, took away 1,874 cwts. plantation and 7,224 cwts. native. The exports of plantation are now 414,964 cwts., against 394,375 cwts. for the corresponding period of last year, showing an excess of 20,589 cwts., while the export of native is only 121,292 cwts., against 142,773 cwts., which shows a decrease in this description of 21,481 cwts.—the total shipment to date being 536,256 cwts., against 537,148 owts., which also shows a very slight decrease of 892 cwts. this year. The comparative statement of imports, showing the value of our trade in the concluding years of three decades is valuable and interesting. The results in some cases are wonderful. For instance, rice. Of this grain only 1,043,064 bushels were introduced in 1840, while in 1860 the import had risen to 3,237,110 bushels -more than a three-fold increase within twenty vears. The increase in value was from £202.333 to £636,423. In the same period the import of fish, dried and salted, with which the coolies employed on estates chiefly flavour their curries, rose from 6,049 cwts., worth less than £4,000, to £55,989 cwts., valued at £55,989. Cotton goods have increased from a value of £158,326 to £488,590. Coal and coke have risen enormously -from £150 to £204,587. Malt liquor nearly quintupled within twenty years; curry stuff rose from £1,393 to £35,967. But the coffee trade, which brought in coolies, and rice and salt-fish to feed them,-required for its eonveyance more and better cattle than Cey-lon could furnish; and so the value of live stock imported rose from £4,012 to £39,880. Coffee is, of course, the beverage of the people, but with the influx of Europeans we should have expected a greater increase in tea than from £1,014 to £5,180. Gunnies and twine and sugar of sorts have increased eight-fold; silk goods, twelve-fold; and metal, wrought and unwrought, more than seven-fold.

The above are some of the main articles in the statement. The total value of goods imported rose from £558,564 to £2,369,232; specie, from £174,948 to £1,182,006. Taking the total value of our trade in the concluding years of three decades we get :-

£1,143,459 £2,785,684 £6,101,824

So that the trade of Ceylon has increased nearly six-fold within twenty years. The Customs revenue rose from £116.948 to £224.490, although the cinnamon duties to the extent of £70,000 were given up.

We also notice, with pleasure, that the Customs revenue is steadily progressing, and that for the last five months there has been an increase of more than £20,000 over the corresponding period of 1860. The Governor may well congratulate the colony on the satisfactory state of our revenue.

Among minor matters the state of the Postoffice, the Dutch Presbyterian Chaplainey, and the episcopate form subject of remark. Dr. Chapman, we understand, proceeds to England by the next steamer .- Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

MURA. - H. M. steamer Charybdis, the Hon. Capt. Keane, returned to Singapore on the 15th June from Muka. Mr. St. John, the British Consul-general to Bruné, proceeded up the river, accompanied by the armed boats of the Charybdis and delivered to the chiefs of the place, Pangerans Diese and Kahar, the Sultan's firman ordering them to throw down their defences and receive Sir James Brooke as his representative. Mr. St. John was received with great respect, and implicit obedience to the behests of the Sultan was promised. The forts are said not to be so strong as was supposed, and the feeling amongst the chiefs as well as people was in favour of submission. It was thought that Sheriff Mashahore would give himself up if he received a promise that his life would be spared. Sir James Brooke intended to leave Sarawak for Muka on Saturday last the 15th. Mr. Consul-general St. John remained at Sarawak.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—The programme of colonial policy of the new ministry in Netherlands has caused great disappointment. The news from the S. and E. division of Borneo contain nothing of importance. The result of a renewed and energetic attempt to capture Antasarie was still unascertained. The earth and sea quakes on the West Coast of Sumatra still continued, but with less violence than at first. Accounts had been received of the great devastation caused by a seaquake on the island of Simo, on the 9th March, in which 778 persons perished. Intelligence had been received by telegraph from Djoqjocarta, of an attempt to excite a disturbance by a small party of sixty or seventy persons, which was at once repressed. Disaffection to the Netherlands rule appears to have had nothing to do with the affair, which arose entirely out of local events. There was a great dulness in all mercantile affairs, The firm of MacMillan, Marten, and Co., at Sourabaya, had stopped payment. The debts Sourabaya, had stopped payment. The debts were estimated at 750,000fl., and, according to latest advices, it was thought that the assets would yield about fifty per cent. of that amount.

Medical Leave of Absence.

No. 184.—FINANCIAL

India Office, London, Nov. 17th, 1860.

India Office, London, Nov. 17th, 1860.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

My Lord,—Mr. F. C. Forbes, a civil—want on your establishment, acting sub-treasurer at Madras, has advised his arrival in this country on one Year's furlough, on m.e., granted him by the Indians Govt in accordance with an order of your Govt. in the financial department, dated April 12, 1810, No. 3,279, wherein, in reply to a reference from the Madras civ. auditor, as to whether an officer might take furlough before the completion of six years from his return from absence on sick leave, provided his application were supported by a m.c., you confirmed the decision of the civil auditor, Fort William, that the restrictive rule of six years' service was applicable to furlough on private affairs; but that when medical certificate supported the application that rule was not resorted to in regulating the same.

2. That decision is at variance with the orders of the Court of Directors, as contained in the Financial Despatch dated July 23, 1856, No. 62, and no deviation from those orders should have been sanctioned without previous reference to me. In the event, how-ever, of your considering such an alteration in the Rules expedient, I shall not refuse to take into con-sideration the expediency of sanctioning it.—I have, &c, (Signed) C. Wood.

No. 6 .- To the Rt. Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bt., M.P. Secretary of State for India.

Fort William, Jan. 14, 1861. Fort William, Jan. 14, 1801.

Sir,—We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your financial despatch, No. 184, dated Nov. 17 last, noticing the arrival in England, on one year's furlough on medical certificate, of Mr. F. C. Forbes, acting sub treasurer at Madras, and stating that the decision passed by this Government in April last, that the restrictive rule of six years' service, alluded to in the orders of this Government of Sept. 10, 1856, quoted in the margin, a samplinghle vice, alluded to in the orders of this Government of Sept. 10, 1856, quoted in the margin,* is applicable to furlough on private affairs, but that when a medical certificate supports the application that rule is not resorted to in regulating the same, is at variance with the orders of the Court of Directors, as contained in their Financial Despatch No. 62 of 1856, dated July 23 and observing that no deviation from dated July 23, and observing that no deviation from those orders should have been sanctioned without previous reference to you, but that, in the event of our considering such an alteration in the rules expe-dient, you will not refuse to take into consideration our considering such an alteration in the rules expedient, you will not refuse to take into consideration the expediency of sanctioning it.

2. In reply we have the honour to intimate that the rule passed on Sept. 10, 1856, was founded on the instructions of the Court of Directors, contained in their Despatch No. 62 of 1856, to which you refer in your despatch under reply. We think, however, that the rule then passed was passed under a slight misconstruction of the letter of the Court's despatch, the rule obtaining in the military regulations having been adopted instead of merely the restriction of six years, in the case of civil servants, to whom furlough under medical certificate might be granted, which letter seems to be the view taken by you of the Court's intentions. But this would obviously have placed the civilian in a more disadvantageous position than the military officer; and we do not, therefore, think that the Court really meant what the terms of their despatch may literally be taken to signify. Their intention evidently was that the rule of the military department should be adopted, the restriction being applied, as in the military regulations, to furlough on private affairs; and this is confirmed by the fact that the Court, in acknowledging the receipt of the report $\frac{1}{2}$ of the proceedings of this Govt. in the Financial Department for the third quarter of 1856, made "no remark" on the paragraphs in which the matter was reported to them, and in which the rule in question was submitted to them in extenso.

3. You will observe from this that no change is

3. You will observe from this that no change is o. Tou will observe from this that no change is necessary in the rule laid down by this Govt., that rule having virtually been approved by the Home Govt.—We have, &c.,

FINANCIAL

India-office, London, April 16, 1861. To H.E. the Right hon, the Governor gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your financial letter, dated Jan. 14 last, on the subject of the grant of 1 year's furl. to Mr. F. C. Forbes, act. sub treasurer at Madras, in which you express

- Civil servents who have taken leave of absence upon sick certificate to Europe or elsewhere beyond sea will be incligible to furlough on private affairs until they have served six years from their last return to duty.
- † Financial despatch, No. 70 of 1857, dated Oct. 6. ‡ Financial letter to Court, No. 35 of 1857, dated March 13, paragraphs 59 and 60.

an opinion that the rule* quoted in the margin was passed under a slight misconception of the letter of the Court's despatch, No. 62 of 1856, that the Court did not really mean what the terms of their despatch might literally be taken to signify, and that their intention was that the rule of the mily. dept. should be adopted, the restriction being applied, as in the mily. furl. regs., to furl. on private affairs.

2. I am unable to see upon what grounds your Govt. have arrived at that conclusion, nor why Mr. Forbes has been granted leave which is not only unauthorised by any rule, but actually prohibited.

8. A furlough could only have been granted to Mr. Forbes under Chapter IV., Section XV. of the Absentee Rules, which applies exclusively to leave on private affairs, from the benefit of which he is clearly excluded by the rule passed by your Govt. in Sept. 1856, under instructions from the late Court of Directors and in which he is a court of the court of Directors, and in which rule I concur with you that no change is requisite.

4. No provision is made in the Civil Absentee Rules for "Furlough on Medical Certificata." The rules only provide for furloughs and special leaves on private affairs and leaves of absence on medical certificate, and there are separate rules for each class of leave of leave.

5. A furlough carries with it an allowance at the 5. A furlough carries with it an allowance at the rate of £500 per annum, and were the interpretation placed by your Govt. on the rules sanctioned, the effect would be, that a civilian, after six years' service in India, might come to Europe on leave of absence on medical certificate, and draw absentee allowance for three years. He might then return to India, reside there for one year, and upon the production of another medical certificate, proceed to Europe on furlough and draw £500 per annum for another year, thus spending four out of a service of eleven years in this country, and drawing allowance all the time. Such an indulgence is not contemplated by the rules, nor can I concede it.

6. In paragraphs 11 and 12 of the Financial Despatch dated April 7, 1857, No. 28, the Court of Directors noticed the case of Mr. Sconce, who, having submitted a medical certificate, was granted leave rectors noticed the case of Mr. Sconce, who, having submitted a medical certificate, was granted leave under that section of the rules which is applicable to special private affairs. Mr. Sconce was not eligible to leave with allowances under the sections applicable to leave on medical certificate, he having too recently returned from sick leave to Europe; and the Court of Directors stated that the grant of special leave on private affairs was most irregular, as it was never intended that incapacity from sickness should be admitted as the ground for granting spewas never intended that incapacity from sickness should be admitted as the ground for granting special leave on private affairs. The grant to a civilian on the production of a medical certificate of a furlough to which he could not be admitted on the ordinary grounds is equally irregular.

7. In the case of Mr. Forbes the same course should have been followed as that pointed out in the case of Mr. Sconce, viz., he should have been granted leave, but without pay.

8. Mr. Forbes will, therefore, be informed that the furlough of one year to which he has been admitted by your Govt. has been cancelled, and that he has been granted leave of absence for one year on medical certificate.

cal certificate.

9. The furlough allowance of £500 per annum which Mr. Forbes has enjoyed up to the present time will cease, and when he may hereafter take a furlough the amount which he has received for the period of the period riod, from the 10th July, 1860, to the 25th March, 1861, will be deducted from the allowance to which he would then be entitled under the civil absentee

10. In order to avoid any further misconception on this subject, I request that, in future, the term "furlough" may not be applied to leave of absence on medical certificate.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. Wood.

Order.—Ordered, that the above correspondence be published in the Official Gazette for general information and guidance, with a request that the orders of the Secretary of State may be strictly acted on by the officers concerned.

SIR JAMES C. MELVILL, K.C.B.

WE are sure that our readers will participate in the great regret with which we announce the death of Sir James C. Melvill, R.C.B., which took place at Tandridge Court, Godstone, on the 23rd instant. It is only three years ago that he retired from the high post of Chief Secretary at the India House, after a valuable service of fifty years. On that occasion he was publicly thanked by the Court of Directors and the Court of Proprietors of the East India Company for the zeal, ability, and integrity with which he had discharged his important duties, and he received from the members of the Home Service proofs of their admiration and regard. Although he had retired from active public life, he still held the office of Government Director of Indian Railway Companies, and we doubt not that his loss will be much felt by his colleagues at the different Boards. That he performed the delicate and responsible duties of this position with his usual tact and courtesy, is evident from the opinion of the Parliamentary Committee on Indian Railways, who attributed "the harmony which has prevailed at the Boards" "to the judgment and discretion exercised on all occasions by the official director, and to the respect shown to his opinion."

Sir James Melvill was born in Guernsey in 1792. He was the son of Captain Philip Melvill, of the Royal Army, who for the latter years of his life was Governor of Pendennis Castle, Cornwall. This officer went through a trying military career in Southern India, having taken part in the illfated expedition against Hyder Ali, under Colonel Baillie, in 1780, when a number of officers and men were taken prisoners and kept in captivity for several years. The barbarous treatment which they received caused the death of several before their release. Cap-Melvill's life was shortened by this ill-usage, and he died at a comparatively early age, having married the daughter of B. Dobree Esq., of Guernsey, by whom he had several children. This lady survived her husband many years, and lived to see her four* sons distinguished in the professions which they had chosen. The subject of this notice was the eldest. He entered the Home Service of the East India Company at an early age, and soon exhibited that assiduity and ability which led to his rapid advancement. After rising to various positions of responsibility and trust he was appointed auditor in 1825. A few years afterwards he was made Financial Secretary, Secretary at the India House. He was always a zealous and loyal servant of the East India Company, and with his able colleague, Mr. John Mill, advocated the maintenance in this country of a body free from parliamentary influence to assist in the government of India. Declining complimentary offers of high employment under the Imperial Government, he continued to serve his country in the sphere of duty in which he commenced his public life, and, as we have before stated, completed a service of more than half a century under the East India Company. His clear intellect and great experience led statesmen of all parties to seek his opinion on questions of Indian policy, and on every occasion of any parliamentary inquiry into the affairs of India he was one of the first whose evidence and views were sought. In 1854 he was created a Knight Commander of the Bath, as a recognition by the Sovereign of his public services. In private life he commanded the respect and esteem of numerous friends, and his many excellent and amiable qualities endeared him to a large domestic circle, by whom his loss will be deeply mourned. He married a daughter of the Rev. M. Sellon, who survives him. He also leaves two sons and six daughters. His eldest surviving son is the present Assistant Under Secretary of State at the India-office.

THE FAMINE.

In a recent number we endeavoured to give the substance of Colonel Baird Smith's report upon the effects of the famine on the consumption of Manchester goods, and ventured to express a confident hope that the present depression in that branch of trade would speedily pass away. It now devolves upon us to analyse a second and yet more interesting report by that gallant and intelligent officer on the physical and social phenomena connected with the dire calamity that has befullen the North-Western Provinces.

The "Famine Tract" proper is divided into three sections "by physical differences of surface, climate, and peculiarities of subsoil.' The first, or western subdivision, lies on the right bank of the Jumna, and includes the Cis-Sutlej districts of Umballa and Thanesur. Those lands, however, that are irrigated from the Western Jumna Canal suffered very little from the long continued drought. Large tracts of swampy ground, again, were temporarily dried up and converted into rich arable fields. But in the southern division of the Delhi district the misery of the people was very dreadful. In the most favourable seasons the fall of rain is there both scanty and uncertain. The soil is exceedingly light, and the subsoil waters inclined to be brackish, while to obtain a continuous supply of good water it is necessary to sink wells to a great depth. A portion of the area is further broken up by rocks, ravines, and barren patches, and not unfrequently the streams that ought to fertilise the country overflow their banks, and turn fertile adjacent lands into a mere swamp. The inhabitants, moreover, had been greatly harassed and plundered by the mutinous sepoys, and were in no condition to withstand the pressure of famine. That part, too, of the Muttra district which lies westward of the Jumna and the and in 1835 succeeded to the office of Chief was experienced, though partially relieved by emigration on a considerable scale.

The second, or Central Section, is inclosed between the rivers Jumna and Ganges, and in ordinary times is regarded as one of the richest tracts of the Upper Provinces. The inhabitants are not only industrious, but are acknowledged to display great skill and enterprise in agricultural pursuits. It forms a gentle incline from the base of the Himalayas, and so regular is the fall that "all its drainage is gathered into definite channels; wastes of swampy land are rare; the great boundary streams receive and carry off its surplus waters, and, excepting in the extreme North, water is usually in the right place as the slave of man and not his tyrant. The soil is generally good, often of the richest kind. The level of the water-bearing stratum, which is so infinitely important to the agriculture of the section. infinitely important to the agriculture of the section. is high, and of late years has, over broad areas, been raised higher by the influence of percolation from the canals of irrigation and their numerous channels. In means of artificial irrigation this section far sur-passes any other part of the Provinces."

The rainfall is also very abundant, ranging from thirty to thirty-six inches, and so distributed that about four-fifths fall between June and the end of September, and the remainder between October and March. The natural result of these many advantages was, that when the time of pressure arrived, a power of resistance was developed which materially lessened the suffering that must otherwise have been intolerable.

The third, or Eastern Section, falls within the province of Robilcund, and includes the districts of Budaon, Moradabad, and Bijnour. Here little recourse is had to artificial irrigation, as the subsoil water lies close to the surface. The rainfall, too, ranges from thirtysix to forty inches, and the climate generally is more moist than to the west of the Ganges. The soil is good, and produces capital crops of rice and sugar, but other cereals than rice are cultivated only to a limited extent for internal consumption. Even last year the harvest was not wholly lost, and it is stated that fully twofifths of the average produce were obtained. The population of this eastern section of the Famine Tract is estimated at 2,856,000 souls, and that of the worst portion at 970,000. In the Central Section there are said to be 5,353,000 inhabitants, of whom 2,258,000 dwell in the least productive districts. Finally, the Western Section contains 4,879,000 inhabitants, of whom 2,220,000 are in the least favoured portion. The entire population of the Famine Tract is, therefore, 13,088,000, the greatest sufferers being no fewer than 5,448,000. Colonel Smith then proceeds to remark upon the impressions he received from the external aspect of the Famine Tract :-

"Nothing," he says, "could be less uniform than this aspect. Nearly all through the more south-erly part of the Western Section the desolation is scarcely relieved by even the appearance of culture. In the Trans-Jumna sub-divisions of Agra and Muttra, included in this section, there seemed at first sight to be no cultivation. The monotonous brown tints of the untilled soil suppressed everything else. It was only by some inquiry it could be learnt that even in this great waste there was cultivation in plots round the villages and round the wells remote from the villages. In Southern Delhi and Goorgaon, the country between the Kootub Minar and the station of Goorgaon had been repeatedly marched over by me in all directions during ordinary seasons, and the contrast was truly startling over fifteen or twenty miles of country, where I had been accustomed to see wide expanses of gram chiefly, but also of wheat and hardware graming with excellent promise; there and barley growing with excellent promise; there was not a blade of green produce to be seen, excepting in the bed of some dried-up tank or along the nar-City of Agra also belong to this section of the Famine Tract, and in both very great suffering of all Goorgaon would have led to error. Within the limits of a district, parts of which are thus desolate, there is an area of cultivation close upon 150,000 acres in extent which is secured in each harvest, either by irrigation from wells or by lying so low as to retain moisture for long periods, or if not so secured has still returned some fruits for the labour expended upon it. The people who are to be sustained by the produce of this land number about 650,000 souls, and not even the lowest estimate of that produce can prove that it would be insufficient for its object, if only it could be conveyed to those who need it, or if they could be so placed as to be able to purchase their share of it. But the area seable to purchase their share of it. But the area se-cured or productive, material though it is, and so far as mere supply of food is concerned, sufficient as it may be to meet the emergency, is still only about one-third the ordinary breadth of cultivation in the district, and thus about two-thirds of the ordinary supply of agricultural labour is cast loose on a mar ket where it is absolutely without value."

In other districts, again, Colonel Smith occasionally alighted upon oases of rich verdure, and frequently upon limited tracts of quite average fertility, but these were invariably within easy reach of the means of artificial irrigation. Water and roads are the two things needful, and which cannot be supplied too rapidly. The worse tracts " are marked by high surface levels, raising them much above the average level of the subsoil water in good tracts." Moral causes appear to have exercised almost as much influence as those of a physical nature in aggravating and lessening the intensity of the calamity. Nowhere was the famine more severely felt than by the Goojurs, certain clans of Rajpoot descent, Rangurs, and others, noted for their lawless and indolent habits.

"Race and its influences constantly modify physical conditions, for isoluted estates held by Jats, Aheers, or proprietors of other good tribes, in the very heart of a bad tract, will constantly be found in tolerable cultivation, and at least the utmost made of their poor resources that human industry could make of them. No such efforts are ever made by the tribes who have no natural genius for agriculture. They sink helplessly beneath the pressure of unfavourable physical conditions, and fulfil no single function of a proprietary class; not even the function of tax-paying.

Of the general action of the Talookdaree system Colonel Smith speaks in terms of high praise, and acknowledges that in most instances the large landed proprietors cheerfully did their duty by their tenants. It is satisfactory to perceive that he does not anticipate any insufficiency of the available supplies of food for the support of the people within the famine tract. A real dearth, he says, is altogether improbable. Abundant supplies can be drawn from the neighbouring districts, and even within the afflicted area at least one-half of an average crop may be fairly expected. The difficulty is "not so much how to get food as how to get the starving people to the food, or the food to them in the cheapest and most expeditious way."

It is scarcely necessary to describe the different methods of relief adopted within the famine tract. As a rule, those who could work were required to give labour in return for aid in money, but cooked food was freely bestowed upon those who were altogether helpless. As the personal details of the distribution of food were left entirely in the hands of native committees, no complaints were made by the people of any violation of their prejudices. Europeans and natives appear to have co-operated cordially and successfully, and it can hardly be that kindly feelings will not be called forth hereafter by the pleasing reminiscences of their joint labours. Up to the 30th April of the present year twenty-six central and seventyfive district relief houses were established in the famine tract or on its borders, and, on an than £100,000. Throughout the whole Central average, 80,000 persons were daily relieved. Section the loss in cattle only is about five The rations are usually in the following proportions:

"For men, and women with infants, 16 oz. bread, 4 oz. vegetables.
"For women and lads, 12 oz. bread, 4 oz. vegetables.

"For children above ten, 12 oz. bread, 2 oz. vegetables. "For children below ten, 8 oz. bread, 2 oz. vege-

On the special relief works labour is, of course, not remunerative, for, as Colonel Smith observes, the average capacity of the workers being much below that of ordinary labourers, the cost of work so executed must always be high. "But no middle course exists between employing those people and maintaining them." As they cannot support themselves, it is certainly better to enable them to do at least something than to let them sink hopelessly into the class of the feeble and utterly helpless. The wages paid to them are merely enough for their subsistence; being 21d. for each man per diem, 13d. for each woman, and

ad. for each child.

"A man, his wife, and three children can thus earn four annas, or about sixpence, a-day, on v the whole party can so subsist as to have their capacity to work fairly maintained. The same can be done on each separate wages, though of course family groups fare best. The workpeople are ordinarily organised in gangs of five hundred each, to narily organised in gangs of five hundred each, to which a separate cash-keeper and series of petty-officers are attached. They live usually in light sheds on the works; have grain shops moveable with them; occasionally, as on the hill road through the Sub-Himalayas, where 17,000 or 18,000 people are gathered into one place, officers of the civil department reside on the spot to maintain order, ensure supplies, and the like; while the engineers attend to the works only. On one of the relief works payment for labour was at first made in flour uncooked, but this soon brought on such a system of rude barter that it was wisely abandoned, and a subsistence money wage substituted. Men had to buy fuel with a little flour, salt with a little more, and so on with money wage substituted. Men had to buy fuel with a little flour, salt with a little more, and so on with other petty purchases; and the small merchants, who are always the most convenient channels for such transmissions, were put to so much inconveni-ence by these barterings that they refused to work."

The total number of people employed daily on all kinds of relief work is stated at 143,500, and the entire cost of such works is not likely to be less than a quarter of a million sterling. The East Indian Railway, which passes right through the very worst part of the central section of the famine tract, has also rendered notable service in giving employment to able-bodied labourers, and, together with the Irrigation Department, has been the means of supporting nearly fifty thousand people.

Another mode of relief was by spontaneous emigration to more prosperous lands, whether in British territories or in those of independent States. From the Muttra district as many as 92,355 persons, or 10.5 per cent. of the entire population, deserted their homes; from Meerut 24,747, or about 3 per cent.; and from Allyghur 55,536, or 5 per cent. Altogether it is calculated that from the Western section about 120,000 individuals, from the Central 255,000, and from the Eastern 125,000-in all 500,000 emigrated either to foreign States or to other parts of our own territory. Colonel Smith, however, anticipates no permanent injury to the districts thus temporarily thinned of their population. With the return of favourable seasons the majority of the wanderers will, he believes, go back to their own villages. The greatest loss to farmers is through the death of their plough and well bullocks. In the Meerut district alone 40,000 pairs are said to have perished, which cannot be replaced for less times that amount; and in the Western Section not less than £750,000; but in the Eastern Section the mortality is supposed to have been very much smaller. To this must be added the loss of agricultural produce, which in the Central Section is set down at upwards of £900,000, in the Eastern at nearly £500,000, and in the Western at close upon one million. One way and another there is a loss of about three and a-quarter millions sterling over the entire famine tract.

With regard to the actual mortality consequent upon the famine Colonel Smith speaks with great diffidence as to the accuracy of his data :-

"Some isolated instances, however, give painful indications of the mortality that has occasionally prevailed. In the small sub-division of Bullubghur, in the Delhi District, I find that, up to the end of January, 1861, 1,371 men, 778 women, and 704 children, or 2,853, are reported to have died from starvation alone, being about 4 per cent. of the entire population. The Superintendent of the Relief Works at Agra informed me that on first starting his works the mortality from starvation used to be about eight the mortality from starvation used to be about eight or nine daily; that this decreased to six or seven after the first fortnight; and that after a month it had fallen to four or five, at which rate it was almost constant. The works had been in progress about six weeks when I saw them, and the total mortality had been about five hundred, or about 4 per cent. on the strength. In the immediate vicinity of Rowless about two hundred percents are home. of Roorkee about two hundred persons are known to have died from want of food, or from disease directly induced by hunger. In the district of Meerut about seven thousand deaths are reported up to 30th April, but among these are many from other causes than actual starvation. The ordinary mortality of such a district, containing as it does rather over a million of inhabitants, is not likely to be less than from two thousand five hundred to three thousand monthly, and at a time like the present many deaths monthly, and at a time like the present many deaths from ordinary diseases are not unlikely to be reported by the police as deaths from starvation. The general condition of the population of the very bad districts, however, may be judged of from the following description by Dr. Cutcliffe, civil surgeon, of those received into the hospital of the Meerut Relief House. In speaking of their personal state he says:

—'They were one and all starving, and the majority were skeletons from atrophy. This was not an hospital for sick only, but for starving people attacked by disease.'

It was not merely from deficiency of food that the poor creatures were suffering, but also from improper nutriment. Pressed by hunger they had gathered wild fruits and vegetables which were not fit for human aliment. But, says Colonel Smith, they were not only illnourished and poor-blooded-

"They were also suffering from great nervous depression, both before and after admission into hospital: before, from social calamities, loss of homes, of relatives, and of friends, from the dark prospects of the future and the disseverance from the ties of village life (ever dear and deep-rooted in the mind of the rustic), with its freedom and petty indepen-dence; and after, from the conviction of their being enclosed in a poor-house surrounded by suffering in every form—to-day, perhaps, witnessing the death of enclosed in a power and a power of the death of a child, and expecting to-morrow that of their wives, and only hoping that their own might soon follow. From the first to the present time the great mental depression of the sick in hospital has been most remarkable and many instances have occurred of markable, and many instances have occurred of men who refused to take food, on the plea that they did not desire to live, either because their villages had been in part deserted and their families so tered, or that they had lost their children or nearest relations, or sustained in some way or other some severe trial of the affections, and had succumbed to despair. Many had wandered about the country after leaving their villages, and had been exposed to the vicissitude of the climate, fainting under the heat of the sun by day, and shivering from the cold by night, from which, indeed, they were ill protected. Many people thus found were sent into hospital by the police, and some in the last stages of disease arrived only to die. From the mortuser sh disease arrived only to die. From the mortuary abstract of February we find that out of 162 deaths in that month-

> 28 died on the first day of admission: 28 died on the second day of admission; 27 died on the third day of admission; 19 died on the fourth day of admission 60 survived ever the fourth day, and were affected by, and died subsequently of chronic diarrhosa, dysentery, and lepra.

"From the abstract of March-

87 died the day of admission; 57 died one day after admission;

80 died two days after admission;

23 died three days after admission;

26 died four days after admission; 41 died five days after admission;

69 died six days after admission;

being a total of 333 died within six days of admisbeing a total of 333 died within six days of admis-sion, or about three-fourths of the whole deaths of this month. The total number from January to March was 630, of discharged cured 1,249, with 649 more remaining in hospital."

In a future report Colonel Smith proposes to deal with questions of irrigation, communications, and fiscal systems, with a view to provide future protection against the calamity of drought. This will not be the least valuable portion of the information he has so ably and intelligently placed at the service of the Government; and it might almost be said that India's adversity has proved his opportunity. almost, but not with perfect truth, for the name of Colonel Baird Smith has long been known as that of one of the most earnest, devoted, and accomplished officers of the Indian army.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS .- July 23. PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT (INDIA).

Colonel SYKES moved the following resolutions "That on all occasions when candidates are invited to compete for public employment under the Crown, British subjects born in India should be allowed to compete on the same footing as other British subjects;" and "that Doctors Thompson, Goodhall, Pulney Andy, Muncherjee Beramjee Colah, and Surgeon Pickachy, all British subjects, having been prohibited from competing for the office of Assistant-surgeon in the Royal army, at a publicly-advertised meeting appointed for the 18th of February last in London, it is the opinion of this House that such prohibition was unjust, impolitic, and uncalled for." He contended that the prohibition, while it was a violation of guarantees given by Parliament and the Crown, was disadvantageous to the public service in India, and it disappointed hopes and expectations which the people of our Eastern Empire were encouraged to entertain.

The motion was seconded by Mr. LAYARD.

Mr. T. G. BARING, remarking that the second resolution conveyed a direct censure upon the Secretary of State for War, said this was not a question of the employment of natives of India, but whether they should be employed in the British army, in the general medical service of the Crown, in all parts of the world. The opinion of the best authorities, upon which the Secretary of State had acted, was that natives of India were constitutionally unfitted for service in all parts of the world, and, so far from the prohibition being unjust, impolitic, or improper, the Secretary of State would not have fulfilled his duty had he acted otherwise.

After a few observations by Mr. J. B. SMITH and Captain Jervis, and a reply by Colonel SYKES, who considered the objections of Mr. Baring utterly groundless, the motion was with drawn.

RED SEA TELEGRAPH.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in reply to Capt. Jervis, said that the Red Sea Telegraph Company might be said to be reduced to a state of neutralized existence; but it did not appear to the Government desirable to proceed at the present to any definite conclusion with respect to the financial arrangements involved. They were, however, of opinion that it would be desirable to ascertain at a moderate cost the condition of the line, and his hon. friend the President of the Board of Trade had received some reports which he hoped would enable him shortly and extent of the inquiry which it would be expedient to undertake, in order that they might arrive at the root of the matter. So far as his information at present went, he did not think the circumstances of the case very favourable.

In reply to Sir M. Peto, Lord Palmerston said the Turkish Government were now employed in establishing a telegraphic line along the Euphrates from Bruss down to Bassora, by means of which he hoped communication would be opened with India.

> HOUSE OF LORDS.-July 25. HIGH COURTS OF JUDICATURE BILL.

On the motion for going into committee on the East India (High Courts of Judicature) Bill, Lord ELLENBOROUGH said he could by no means agree with the principle upon which the Bill was founded. As the House, however, had read the Bill a second time, he declined to offer any further opposition, and contented himself with explaining the objects of the several amendments of which he had given notice, the principal one of which was to reserve to the Governor-general the power of appointing some of the judges, and to try the proposed changes, experimentally at first, only in the High Courts of Fort William, Madras, and Bombay, before introducing them into the small courts in the provinces. He also strongly objected to the appointment of some thirty-five barristers without Indian experience as judges.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON felt bound to oppose the amendments of Lord Ellenborough, as it would be most unwise to have legal functionaries sitting on the same beuch and holding their commissions from different authorities. It was not intended to fill up all the judgeships appointed by Lord Kingspown, having admitted the difficulties attending on the administration of justice in India, said that, before their Lordships abolished what existed, they ought to have some intimation of what was to be substituted for it. The Bill was also defective in not supplying a remedy for the present system of appeals from India.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said it was hoped that the amalgamation of the two Courts would have the effect, by rendering justice more efficient, of diminishing the number of appeals to this country. He could not concur with the amendments of Lord Ellenborough, for it was one of the first prerogatives of the Crown, as the source of justice, to appoint the judges. If there were to be two sets of judges appointed, those appointed by the Crown would be looked upon as a superior class—a circumstance which would tend to promote the same jealous feelings which had formerly existed between the Queen's and the Company's troops.

After a few words from Lord WENSLEYDALE, the House went into Committee on the Bill, which passed through Committee, after an amendment moved by Lord Ellenborough had been negatived on a division.

The East India Civil Service Bill passed through Committee, and was reported.

> HOUSE OF COMMONS .- July 25. EAST INDIA LOAN.

In the evening, the House having resolved itsolved itself into a Committee on the East India Loan.

Sir C. Wood, in moving a resolution empowering him to raise money by loan for the service of railroads in India, stated the amount of railroad expenditure during the past year, and the probability that the same sum would be required for the present year—namely, about £8,000,000. The sum which he expected the railroad companies would be able to raise was about £3,000,000, and he proposed to ask for a discretionary power to raise by loan the sum of £5,000,000, not one sixpence of which would be borrowed except for railway purposes, and unless the companies should require the aid. Sir Charles then proceeded to give an exposition of the finances of India, premising that the details received from India had been, to a certain extent, conflicting and erroneous. The balance between revenue and to apprise them more precisely as to the mode expenditure for the year 1860-61 left a deficiency of about £5,500,000, including the home charges. Mr. Laing's estimate for the year 1861-62 showed a surplus of revenue of £300,000. He (Sir Charles) thought this too favourable a view, and was disposed to conclude that there would be a deficit of about £1,000,000, but that in the following year the deficiency would disappear, and a surplus might be expected. He then reviewed the prospects of the chief sources of Indian revenue, observing that the increased salt duty had been most productive. The retrenchment of expenditure had been mainly in the military branch, and it had been carried to a very great extent, the number of troops having been reduced by no fewer than 200,000 men, who had been ab sorbed into the police force or by the increased demand for labour in the country. The military expenditure, which in 1858-59 amounted to £24,750,000, was now only £15,500,000, being a diminution of charge to the extent of £9,000,000. In a survey of the social condition of India, he referred to the famine and the large area over which the distress consequent upon the high price of grain had extended; to the number of starving people employed upon public works, and to the favourable prospects of the current year, the rain having fallen earlier than usual. He adverted to the state of the indigo cultivation, and to the important subject of the growth of cotton in India, expressing his belief that, if proper means were taken and all parties interested cooperated, India could furnish a large supply of cotton of excellent quality. The supply this year would be very considerable; 620,000 bales had been already shipped to this country, and 400,000 more might be expected. Passing to the political state of India, he eulogised the policy pursued by Lord Canning towards the native princes and great landowners, which was calculated, in his opinion, to establish more firmly the foundations of British power in India. The renunciation of views of aggrandisement by the annexation of territory disarmed native jealousy and conciliated friendship, as in the recent case of the Rajah of Sikkim, whose treatment had inspired the neighbouring Tibetan authorities on the borders of China with favourable feelings towards our Government. In conclusion, he alluded to the three Bills which had recently passed the House for improving the Councils of British India, the High Courts of Justice, and the Civil Service.

The debate in the committee embraced other topics besides those touched upon by Sir C. Wood-railway administration in India, roads and communications in the country, the sale of waste lands, the redemption of the land-tax, the settlement of English subjects in India, a new law of contracts, and the cultivation of tea.

Sir C. Wood having replied, the resolution was agreed to and reported.

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENTS (Downing-street, July 20.)-The Queen has been pleased to appoint F. Saunders, Esq., to be Treasurer for the Island of Ceylon; Vane, Esq., to be Principal Collector of Customs for the Island of Ceylon; Capt. W. L. Morrison, R.E., to be Surveyor General and Colonial Engineer for the Island of Mauritius; and Commander H. Tomselt, R.N., to be Harbour Master, Marine Magistrate, and Emigration and Customs Officer for the Colony of Hong Kong.

THE EASTERN AND PACIFIC TRADE. - A return of the tonnage entered inwards and cleared outwards in London and Liverpool from and to the Eastern and Pacific seas during the first six months of the present year, contrasts somewhat unfavourably with the corresponding period of 1860. Thus the entrances inwards at London exhibit the following results:-From Calcutta, 103,495 tons, being an increase of 4,643 tons; Madras, 15,096 tons, being an increase of 4,931 tons; Bombay, 37,768 tons, being an increase of 2,920 tons; China, 42,775 tons, being a decrease of 3,419 tons; Ceylon, 13,235 tons, being a decrease of 2,287 tons; Singapore and Penang, 10,614 tons, being a decrease of 3,587 tons; the Philippine Islands, 6,227 tons, being an increase of 1,074 tons; Java and Sumatra, 1,092 tons, being a decrease of 1,047 tons; New South Wales. New Zealand, &c., 45,782 tons, being a decrease of 19,733 tons; the Mauritius, 25,240 tons, being an increase of 2,980 tons; and the Cape of Good Hope, 9,682 tons, being a decrease of 7,967 tons showing a total of 311,006 tons, being a decrease of 20,892 tons. At Liverpool the entrances were -From Calcutta, 40,315 tons, being an increase of 12,438 tons; Madras, 1,067 tons, being a decrease of 91 tons; Bombay, 66,507 tons, being an increase of 6,165 tons; China, 3,114 tons, being an increase of 1,034 tons; Celyon, 815 tons, being a decrease of 369 tons; Singapore and Penang, 3,624 tons, being a decrease of 2,002 tons; the Philippine Islands, 9,018 tons, being an increase of 2,492 tons; Java and Sumatra, nil, being a decrease of 458 tons; New South Wales, New Zealand, &c., 4,574 tons, being a decrease of 12,323 tons; the Mauritius, nil being a decrease of 5,779 tons; and the Cape of Good Hope, 222 tons, being an increase of 33 tons; showing a total of 129,255 tons, being an increase of 2,139 tons. The clearances outwards at London were:-To Calcutta, 44,818 tons, being a decrease of 4,797 tons; Madras, 17,154 tons, being an increase of 36 tons; Bombay, 27,273 tons, being a decrease of 14,531 tons; China, 22,932 tons, being a decrease of 6,168 tons; Ceylon, 2,574 tons, being a decrease of 1,014 tons; Singapore and Penang, 3,131 tons, per str. Chma, from Marsititha, Agr. 12, to proceed pre heing a decrease of 980 tons; the Philippine Ist. RANEEGUNGE.-CONSECRATION OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.—The want of church accommodation at Raneegunge for the increasing European population, drawn to that station and neighbourhood by the works of the railway and the coal mines, has long been felt. To supply this want a movement was made some time ago, which has at length resulted in the erection of a suitable and wellarranged church, from a design furnished by Mr. Osborn, of Calcutta. The funds for this purpose were raised partly by the liberality of the Railway and Bengal Coal Companies, and partly from subscriptions collected in the district through the persevering exertions of Messrs. Cockburn and Blessley. Sunday, June 16, being the day appointed for the consecration, the Lord Bishop of Calcutta proceeded to Raneegunge on Saturday evening, where he was received by some of the principal residents of the district, who, to the number of about thirty, dined with his lordship at the house of the Manager of the Bengal Coal Company. On his lordship's arrival at the church on Sunday morning the memorial of the inhabitants, praying for the consecration, was read by Mr. T. R. Moultrie, who afterwards presided during the service at a harmonium with which the church has been provided by private generosity. The sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop on Heb. x. 25, and was listened to, we need hardly say, with evident and deep attention by the numerous congregation assembled. His lordship dwelt upon the essentially social character of the Christian religion, and pointed out the extreme spiritual peril which must ever arise from a careless disregard of the duty and privilege of public worship. The Holy Communion was afterwards administered by the bishop and the Rev. J. Rofe, who officiated as his lordship's chaplain, and the offer-tory collection will be added to the fund now being raised for building a parsonage house for a resident clergyman. At present the station is visited once a month by the chaplain of Chinsurah, but as soon as a sufficient sum is obtained to build or purchase a house for his reception, a clergyman will be provided for it by the additional clergy society. Divine service was again performed in the church at five o'clock in the evening, when the Rev. J. Rofe preached. The bishop also paid a visit to the cantonments, where he held a service for the troops.- English-

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—Be prepared.—In Great Britain one-third of our deaths is caused by consumption. It usually makes its attack between the ages of sixteen and thirty, and is usheree in by debility, dry cough, and other unmustakable signs which could be and should be immediately emoved by rubbing this celebrated Ointment upon the back and chest. The friction must be brisk, and repeated regularly night and morning, and two of Holloway's purifying Pills should be taken at bed time, as an alterative to mitigate the cough and fever. The early employment of this treatment is of the most momentous importance, whether to preven the fatal disease or to direct it, when developed, to a safe and favourable issue.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, s the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest bene-factor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glauders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most entirely profesand the cause of some of the most eminent profes-sionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illus-trated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thou-sands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faith-Jour Aumdred Illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life. July 17. 1861. Life, July 17, 1861.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to businese, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 12th of July has at length arrived, being a whole week overdue, and on Wednesday next the Calcutta and China mails also will probably be delivered in town. There is again but a scanty supply of materials for a summarist. The most profound repose prevails in all parts of our Indian possessions, and journalists are in something like exultation in getting hold of an absurd report from Cabul on the subject of Russian troops being sent to reinforce the King of Bokhara, who has been worsted in battle by his own subjects. Verily, there seem now-a-days to be a good many gaps in the divinity that was once supposed to hedge in Kings! On the same unreliable authority it is stated that the Russians have offered to as stat the Chinese against the other European Powers. The one story is nearly as true as the other.

The best news received by the present Mail relates to the heavy and continuous downfall of rain all over India. Indeed, it appears that there has already been more than enough for agricultural purposes, and it is said that some injury has been done to the sugar cane and the young rice and indigo plants. A superabundance of rain also characterised the season that followed the famine of 1837-38. Great destitution still pervades large districts of the Upper Provinces, and will necessarily do so until after the harvest is gathered in. Relief, however, was being widely and wisely administered, and all that a judicious benevolence could devise to do has been done with the most humane persistence.

The sudden depreciation of opium has caused a panic in the bazaars of Calcutta. Bombay, and Indore, and led to a universal suspension of payment by the Marwarree houses. It is even said that 300 of the wealthiest Marwarree families in India have fled into the British territory to escape the processes of the Malwa Court.

We would draw the attention of our readers to an important notification in our gazette columns with respect to the transfer of officers of the Indian armies to her Majesty's Line Regiments. Such appointments, it will be seen, cannot be made in India even provisionally, but rest entirely with H.R.H. the General Commanding in-Chief.

We are happy to learn that Colonel Jameson, of the Bombay Establishment, has been appointed auditor of the India-office, in succession to Mr. Fredk. Sandoz. Mr. Stapleton Cotton Hogg has been appointed a temporary clerk in London, and passed his examination.

In our next issue we hope to be in a position to lay before our readers the Retirement Scheme finally resolved upon by the Secretary of State for India in Council. It is based, we understand, on broad and liberal principles, and it is expected that a very considerable number of officers will avail themselves of its provisions. Unless we are greatly mistaken, full instructions were forwarded to the Governor-General of India on Saturday last, so that no time will be lost in giving action to Sir Charles Wood's wise and considerate liberality.

Every trace of the old East India Company. except the mighty empire it founded, is being rapidly effaced. Its army has been annihilated, its supreme law courts are absorbed, and its exclusive system of civil administration thrown open to all comers. At home, not only has the House in Leadenhall-street been dismantled and brought to the hammer, but the same fate now awaits the civil and military seminaries at Haileybury and Addiscombe. On the 30th of the present month the public will be invited to bid for the possession of that "valuable and important freehold estate situate near to Hoddesden and Hertford," and hitherto known as Haileybury College. This property offers, we are told, "a singularly eligible opportunity for a public institution of any kind, or for almshouses in connection with any of the rich public companies." Alas, how are the mighty fallen! On the same day the same auctioneers are instructed to dispose of, in one lot, "the valuable and important freehold estate for many years the military college of the Hon. East India Company." Upon this property, which extends over nearly ninety acres of land, there stands "a noble mansion, adapted for the residence of a gentleman," the ceilings of several of the "elegantly furnished rooms" being "believed to have been painted in the last century by Sir William Thornhill." How delightfully vague is all this; and then we read that "this"—the rooms, or the ceilings painted in the last century-"this, with a portion or the whole of the park-like land, might still form a nobleman's or gentleman's private residence of considerable importance, within an hour of London." Previous to the sale of the estate, the household furniture is to be disposed of, consisting, among other things, of seven milch cows, iron hurdles, one hundred loads of meadow hay, Brussels carpets, two fire engines, and the "Encyclopædia. Britannica." "Miscellaneous stores," indeed !

"What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks, The formless ruin of oblivion." 321

the Royal Speech at the Prorogation of Parliament. "Her Majesty has seen with satisfaction the rapid improvement in the internal condition of her East Indian territories, and the progress which has been made towards equalising the revenue and expenditure of that part of her empire." Again—"Her Majesty has given her assent to important Acts which she trusts will have the effect of opening more largely employment in the public service to the European and native inhabitants of India, of improving the means of legislation, of furthering the ends of justice, and of promoting the contentment and well-being of all classes of her Majesty's Indian subjects." We trust that it may prove so, and that Lord Elgin may enjoy the happy distinction of carrying out to their fullest legitimate extent the well-intentioned innovations now introduced into the internal Government of India.

CALCUTTA IN 1860.

The Report of the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta for the past year is full of striking contrasts. It draws a picture of growing wealth, population, trade and general prosperity unprecedented in Asia, side by side with a sketch of stagnation or actual deterioration in all that constitutes municipal progress, whether of a social, sanitary or architectural kind. The wealthier Calcutta becomes, the filthier it grows; the denser its population, the more unhealthy; the greater its trade, the more intolerable for residence; the more striking its general prosperity, the more impossible is it for civilised beings to tolerate its

The increase in wealth is remarkable. The assessment on landed property, which was in 1857 Rs. 4,91,148, had risen in 1860 nearly Rs. 64,000 to Rs. 5,55,105. This affords but a faint idea of the enormous rise of prices, whether of land, building materials, house property, or the common necessaries of life. In not a few instances the rent of private houses is a hundred per cent. above what it was in 1857, and that, of shops and business premises held on short leases two hundred per cent. The resident monied classes, who are chiefly natives, are the gainers, while the Europeans and Christians on fixed income feel life every year becoming more expensive. The rise in rents and prices, and the increase of taxation, have fallen with crushing severity on the men with monthly incomes of from Rs. 100 to 300, who rear their families entirely in India, and on those with incomes under Rs. 500, who educate their children in England. For them-and they are the class which increases by the addition of clerks, first class mechanics, and tradesmen from England — new houses are not built; and boarding-house life, destitute of all the privacy and associations of a home, has become as painful a feature of society in India as in the cities of America Wealth increases at their expense and through their agency, and it is locked up in the coffers chiefly of the native capitalist, whom taxation fails to reach. southern division of Calcutta, which is inhabited by the European tenants of these millionaires, contributes Rs. 2-7 per head to the municipal assessment, while the northern district, where the wealth is chiefly concentrated, pays only 10 annas or one-fourth. The same is true of the incometax, for the Asiatic taxpayer is destitute of a conscience. The growth in traffic is seen from the fact that the 1,391 bullock-carts of 1850 have grown 140 per cent.-to 3,368 in 1860; and the 12,681 vehicles of every description in 1859 have swelled 60 per cent.—to 20,329. There are few capitals in the world which could produce 4,168 four and two-wheeled carriages, drawn by 3,750 horses and 2,307 ponies.

A stranger would expect the growth in civilization to correspond with all this, to find a city well lighted, watered, drained, free from offensive smells, with good roads and paths, and not altogether destitute of becoming public edifices, arched path-ways, trees and architectural beauty. Especially would he look for this when he is told that the Government of India is a despotism of the most absolute character, to which, and not to the rate-payers, the municipal authorities are amenable. Alas, for the result! There are 1,571 lights to a city covering an area of seven square miles, in which crime both Asiatic and European abounds. There is a Gas Company, but of these lights more than half are lamps, the filthy oil in which emits only such flickering rays as render darkness visible. Within half this area there are 2,000 dangerous and offensive trades busily pursued in localities which no fire engines can reach in the event of the not unfrequent conflagrations, and where if they did penetrate there is no water with which to supply them. Nature in the tropics pours down rain bounteously, but it is allowed to inundate the city because there are few tanks to receive and preserve it for times of drought. These few exhalations for more than half the year. A river half a mile broad flows past the town, and the water has only to be lifted to the top of its banks to find its way to every house and street, but a Municipal Commission, with an annual income of nearly £80,000, cannot purchase an engine, nor keep it in order when they have got it. Out of several hundreds only forty-six streets are watered. and so inefficiently by human labour that soon after noon the dust is blinding and the glare intense. A premium is offered to crime by the impunity with which the sick are allowed to be suffocated on the river bank, and by the absence of all registration of births and death. Cholera, fever, and dysentery daily carry off their hundreds of victims, from the absence of good water and tolerable sewerage; and at last when a drainage scheme is begun, at a cost of half a million sterling, it is found to be in direct violation of the most patent laws of public health. The burial grounds are choked with dead, although they skirt the European quarter and adjoin the great railway focus of the city. With such evils we speak not of the common conveniences which cities in cold climates enjoy, of regulated conveyances for hire, of public latrines, of broad thoroughfares and wide streets, of decent roads. Mere comforts and conveniences cannot be looked for when the first elements of civilisation and principles of sanitary science are wantonly set at nought.

Calcutta needs municipal regulations of the most inexorable and despotic character. Without them no taxation, however fertile, no municipality, however perfect, will reform and prevent abuses now intolerable. The Asiatic submits, as he passively does to everything else. The Englishman grumbles, but contemplates the time as near at hand when he will be "out of it." There are few European landholders to initiate improvements or insist on reforms in their own vicinity. Neither the legislature nor the executive have yet learned to look on Calcutta as being to the empire what London is to England—a city which is common property and which ought  $\omega$  be the object of imperial care and pride. How can they when the council sits in a house in a back street to be reached only through rows of stables, and the Governor-general represents royalty in a building which resembles an inflated star-fish ?- Friend of

WASTE LANDS IN THE DHOON.

It is impossible to look down from Mussoorie on the Dhoon without being struck with the vast extent of lands lying waste-lands capable of producing almost every necessary and luxury of life. It is equally impossible to refrain from marvelling at the folly of a Government deeply in debt-and very, very " hard up " for money wherewith to pay its servants-in not selling these lands by public auction at an upset price of, say, five rupees an acre. In short, why not adopt the plan of the Australian Government, which retrieved itself, at a very critical period, from its difficulties by the sale of Crown lands; and, what was more, brought shoals of emigrants and capitalists to those distant shores? Let these lands in the Dhoon be advertised for sale, not only in this country, but throughout Europe. Let the capabilities of the soil be made known, its contiguity to the Himalaya mountains,—in short, all that is connected with the place, and its demesnes. this, and ere long we should have Englishmen, Germans, Frenchmen, and other races speedily wending their way to the East, to make or improve their fortunes; and, in the majority of instances, to settle here for life.

It may be said that the lands have been, and are, grantable upon certain conditions, and that Europeans prefer America or Australia to this part of the world. Very true; but it is those "certain conditions," and the constant fear of "Resumption," that deters a man of enterprise from embarking his means upon a tenure of so unsatisfactory a character. Grantees in this country cannot help thinking that, at best, they are but "tenants at will." A very brief act of the Legislative Council would suffice to impose very are so badly kept, that they send forth noisome heavy taxes on these grants, and in default of pay-soil itself. It may be all very well to say that "the Government would never think of breaking its word and its faith." But, unfortunately, the Government has, in respect to grants of land in the Dhoon, broken its faith with even its own servants-members of the Civil Service.

Some years ago, a number of gentlemen, with the express sanction of the Government, and with hopes held out to them of encouragement, formed a company for cultivating large tracts of land which were granted to them. Agricultural implements of every description, elephants, oxan, carts, &c., &c., were purchased—and a large establishment engaged, when, lo! just as operations were about to commence, there came an order that no members of the service were to hold lands in India! A short time was given to those gentlemen who had embarked in the speculation to make up their minds whether they would remain covenant servants or cultivators! What happened? The lands, live stock, &c., &c., were put up to public auction, and were sold for about a tenth of their value. Some few favoured grantees, who had good interest at home, were to some extent "compensated" by the Government; but the bulk of the victims had to put up with their losses; and several have not got over the shock up to this day. So manifest did it appear that the cultivation of the Dhoon would pay immensely, that those who had no ready money borrowed it at high rates of interest. What faith can "outsiders" have in the word of a Government, after hearing this true statement?

What we repeat is-" Sell the land out and cont." Say to the purchaser, " Give us your money, and take your fee simple. You may cultivate it, rent it, sell it, do what you like with it; it is yours absolutely and in reality in every sense of the word." Some persons who are endowed with more of talk than reason may object to what they may call " flooding the country with land jobbers. To this we would reply, "so much the better, both for the Government and the country." What can it signify to Covernment who have and the cultivates, so long as the marketable value of the land is paid into the treasury? Of course there would be large speculations in soil, and no doubt companies would be formed on the model of the Australian Agricultural Company—the company which imported the best horse-flesh procurable in England, Normandy, and Arabia, and laid the foundation of that stock which is now sought after by nearly all countries in the world, not excepting America, and even England herself. To this some pragmatical gentleman may remark that "India is not a horse-breeding country." Is it not, indeed?" The ghost of Major-general Gwatkin would tell a very different tale. He was of opinion that in the Dhoon he could "raise" horses equal to any in Europe, and at a comparatively trifling cost. Had his sensible suggestions been attended to there would have been no occasion to send Apperley, Robbins, and others to Sydney to buy cattle which cost the Government a rather high price by the time they were landed in this country.

But let us look at the question under notice in a political point of view. The natives of India are as dissatisfied with the land tenure, as it now exists, as are the Europeans. Now, give these people, who would be sure to come into the market, some tangible title to their land, and their interests become indissolubly connected with those of the British Government. Not only would they join heart and soul in checking rebellion and disaffection within these territories, but be ready to oppose any invasion on the part of a foreign foe. When your neighbour's house is on fire it is your self-interest, as well as humanity, that prompts you to do your utmost to extinguish the flames. "Proximus ardet" would be the cry of all persons, of all races and classes bolding tenures in fea simple under the seal of the Crown.

We are glad to see that the extremely important matter, upon which we have so often touched is at present engaging not only the attention of the entire press of India, but of private indivi-fluential members of the mercantile community are pressing the point with the most praiseworthy vigour and ability .- Mofussilite.

THE SIMLA FRACAS.

There has been a fracas at Simla, which will probably be turned to some account by Mr. Tom Taylor in his next dramatic effort to put Indian society on the boards of the Haymarket. case as it stands would be a play in itself, if there were any "female characters" to represent. It is true there is "Brandy Moll"—but then she is only a mare, the property of Major Samuel Goad who "scratched" her he save—so that even as a mare her appearance would be objectionable on the stage. The particulars of the affair we extract from the columns of our Agra contem porary. Each party appears to be right in some respects and wrong in others. Goad was wrong when, as a steward of the Sky Races, he entered any horse or mare to him belonging, or in which he had any share or interest. No man-especially in racing matters-can be a judge in his own case. The rule used to pertain in India, and we hope it does still. Indeed, it has been questioned whether a steward of races ought to bet, except to some trifling or nominal amount. Major Elwall, who sported as extensively and as honestly as any man who ever came to this country, held to this opinion; and we have the pleasure to concur with him.

Major Goad was quite right when " he objected to valuable and first-rate horses" starting for a prize which was "intended only for third-rate nags." But Major Goad is wrong—extremely wrong—when he wishes the public to believe that "Brandy Moll" comes under this descrip-Everyone who knows anything of Major tion. Goad knows that even second rate nags are never sheltered beneath the roof of his stablefor the purposes of sale. As for "Brandy Moll" being "a 41 rupee caster," the idea—when it is simply ridiculous. Itis not what " Brandy Moll " was bought for at auc tion, but what is the horse worth? And what are the capabilities of the animal? Mr. Pakenham's horse Hector was worth Rs. 5,000. Sir Jasper, a caster belonging to the late Mr. William Johns, of Deyrah, and bought at an auction for Rs. 11, beat Hector easily. Capt. Knatchbull's Mordecai, if we mistake not, was a "caster," but his pace was superior to that of Revoke or Revenge, and equal to that of Cardinal (an officer's charger). What would Major Goad take for Brandy Moll? Ten times forty-one rupees? If so, there are many sporting men in India who, relying on Major Goad's eye to horseflesh, would be glad to send him a cheque immediately; and if Brandy Moli (in racing parlance) should happen to be "a maiden," doubtless the amount would be freely doubled and trebled.

On what ground Major Goad withholds the cup from Moleville's owner we cannot imagine. An objection, possibly, might have been made to his running, but after winning (at these Sky races) to put forth any such objection is purely nonsense and instead of bringing a suit to recover the value of the cup the horse's owner ought to grasp it forti manu.

That part of the quarrel which has reference to "men of rank" as stewards is simply amusing. If Captain Clarke be in the military service of her Majesty, Major Trevelyan's objection is childish to the last degree. The very fact of his holding a commission is a sufficient guarantee that he holds the position of a gentleman.

Some few years ago, at Lahore, an officer com manding a native infantry regiment sat down to gamble at cards with a subaltern, and lost to his adversary some 10,000 or 12,000 rupees. When asked for payment, the commanding officer told the subaltern that he declined to pay, on the ground that he had heard, long previously, that he (the subaltern) had been turned out of a gambling house at Baden-Baden for cheating. Sir Charles Napier, then Commander-in-chief, very properly remarked that if the allegation duals. In almost all the large stations in and were true it was a strong reason for not playing;

ment a seizure, not only of the crops but of the near the hills, meetings have been held, or are but, that having played and lost, no objections to soil itself. It may be all very well to say that about to be held, while in Calcutta the most inpaying could be entertained; so the subaltern got his money, and his commanding officer lost his commission. Let us hope that Major Goad will profit by this reminiscence of former days, and hand over to Captain Mylne the cup which his horse would seem to have fairly won. - Mofussilite

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE DR. ALLAN CURRIE.-The services and character, both personal and professional, of the late Dr. J. A. Currie were such as to entitle his memory to something more than the mere record of his death. He died nobly at his post in the gratuitous discharge of a humane but perilous duty. During his brief career Dr. Currie saw more service than falls to the lot of most men. On his arrival in India, in January, 1854, he was appointed assistant-surgeon to the 47th B.N.I., then in Burmah, with which regiment he remained until promoted to the medical charge of the 8th Irregular Cavalry. When that corps mutinied at Bareilly on the 31st May, 1857, Dr. Currie escaped, with several of his brother officers, by riding sixty-six miles in twenty-two hours without changing his horse. wards rejoined that portion of the regiment which continued true to its allegiance, and was posted at Oonao; to keep open the communications with Lucknow. On one occasion this faithful remnant was despatched under the command of Captain A. M. Mackenzie to attack a body of rebels, under Lultah Sing, who offered a desperate resistance, and at one moment the issue of the conflict seemed likely to be disastrous. Dr. Currie at once perceived the critical nature of the emergency. He had been left with the reserve a short distance in the rear, and was the only European officer with it. Instantly placing himself at the head of this small body of troopers, he rushed to the aid of his sorely pressed comrades, and by the impetuosity of his charge threw the enemy into confusion. In the melée his horse received a musket ball in the neck, and was wounded by a bayonet thrust in the quarter, but Lultah Sing and his bodyguard were slain, and the pacification of the entire district was the first fruits of the victory. In 1859, Dr. Currie was, without solicitation on his part, appointed Superintendent of Vaccination in the Agra division, and Lecturer on Surgery in the Medical School at that city. On his leaving the 8th Irregulars, the commanding officer of that corps placed an Order of the Day in the Regimental Books, recording his strong sense of Dr. Currie's services as medical officer of the corps, and of the way in which he had endeared himself to the men. His death was especially noticed in the following manner at a meeting of the Agra Central Relief Committee, held at the magistrate's cutcherry on Monday, June 17, 1861-present, M. R. Gubbins, Esq., C.S., chairman; Messrs. Ross, C.S.; Wynyard, C.S.; Harvey, C.S.; Philips, C.S.; H. Cowley, W. Birks, and Dr. Murray; Rev. D. Fynes-Clinton, secretary. Resolved VII.—" That this meeting cannot separate without recording their deep regret at the death of Dr. James A. Currie, which took place on Saturday evening, and is believed to have been caused by his humane exertions in the cause of relief. Dr. Currie had undertaken to visit periodically the out kitchens of the Agra district, and proceeded to the kitchen at Khundolee [twenty miles distant from Agra on the left bank of the River Jumna], on Friday last, to make arrangements for the mitigation of cholera, a violent outbreak of which had taken place there. He returned on the same afternoon; was attacked with that dreadful disease on the following evening, and in a few hours fell a sacrifice to the cause of humanity.-D. FYNES-CLINTON, Secretary to Agra Central Relief Committee." Of the highly satisfactory manner in which Dr. Currie acquitted himself as superintendent of vaccination, a just idea may be formed from the official letter addressed to him. by George Couper, Esq., Secretary to Government, N.W.P. It is as follows:—" Nynee Tal, 6th. October, 1860. Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your report on the

The results which it exhibits are extremely satisfactory, not only in the largely increased number of the persons who have been vaccinated, but in the evidence which these afford of the energy, activity, and judgment with which you have conducted these operations. 3rd. The several vaccinators have been closely supervised, a fair assurance has been gained of the correctness of their returns; and the prejudices of the native population have been in a measure made to give way to the advice, the persuasions, and the arguments brought to bear upon them. . . . . . . 9th. The Lieutenant-Governor does not think it necessary to touch on the professional points, which are discussed by you in the 12th, 13th, and part of the 14th paragraphs of your Report. These no one is better fitted than yourself to determine. . . . 12th. Your Report will be printed as soon as possible for general distribution .- I have, &c., &c." Dr. Currie's Report, published at Allahabad by authority, was accordingly distributed. Dr. Geo. R. Playfair, civil surgeon, Agra, and principal of the Medical School, also bore ready testimony to Dr. Currie's talents, assiduity, and conscientiousness, as witness the subjoined extract from an official letter to the local Government, dated so late as the 12th June :- " I must make special mention of Dr. J. A. Currie, A.M., M.D., superintendent of vaccination, and lecturer on surgery during the summer session. His very superior attainments as a surgeon, and the labour he has expended in teaching the students has given me the highest satisfaction. In addition to the lectures he daily delivers in Hindostanee, he has assumed sole charge of the surgical wards of the Thomason Hospital, and his bedside teaching is invaluable. He has made this department of the school all I could wish it to be. Thus respected and beloved by his fellow-men, Dr. Currie has been suddenly called away to receive the rewards of a useful and meritorious life.

THE WEATHER IN THE FAMINE DISTRICTS. We are indebted to the Delhi Gazette for the following extracts :- Cawnpore, June 22 .- The appearance of the sky would indicate the monsoon to have set in. The rains have come down very opportunely, and if they only keep up as steadily and in as moderate showers as they have begun with, at least for a month or so, an abundant harvest may safely be looked to.—Lucknow, June 20.—As I anticipated in my last, the rain clouds, after flirting in an inconstant manner with Seetapoor Gonda, Roi Bareilly, and other county towns, have at length vouchsafed to visit the royal city and give us a benefit. It is raining now and very cool, and the Wingfield Park looks something like its cousin in London, fresh and pleasant to look upon and the most English garden in India.—Allahabad, June 22.—I am glad to say the rains have set in with unusual severity. We have had an almost continuous downpour since last Thursday evening, and all our roads are as slushy as possible. We have every indication of there being a very favourable rainy season. It has certainly commenced auspiciously.—Bareilly, June 20. -Rain, rain, rain. It has rained for three consecutive days-Sunday, Monday, Tuesday. There was a lull yesterday: it is gathering and looking black to day. The rains may be said to have fairly set in. In 1838 the rains, after the famine, set in just about this time. I believe it was on the 18th of June it poured down in Agra and Muttra, and almost simultaneously in other places. The rains continued steadily, and were heavy. Three inches and upwards must have fallen here, and Rohilkund may now be said to be under water. Tanks in Bareilly which have been perfectly dry for upwards of a year have now been filled, and travellers from Shahjehanpore and Budaon say it is no easy matter to travel. Delhi, June 22.—The rains have fairly set in and have been falling with very little and brief intermission for some hours; they commenced two days ago, but not so plentifully as ushered in by loud peals of thunder, and heavy rain continued up to 1 P.M. Towards the east the fall has been even more plentiful, and as far as Secunderabad the country is flooded. Fyzabad, June 18.—There is nothing of any great importance at present here of which I can write to you. The rainy season has fairly commenced: we have showers almost every day. Cholera broke out lately among the natives in the city, there were a few deaths from it, but we hope it will soon dis appear. A letter from Rajpootana reports continuous rain in the Ulwar State.

CENTRAL ASIA.-The Cabool news-letter in the Delhi Gazette records only wars, and rumours of wars, in Central Asia. The Persian troops stationed in the different forts in Merve have been driven out of all but one by the Turkomans, whom they have been trying to subjugate for the last twenty years. The Russians have concluded an alliance with the Chief of Tashkend, and have garrisoned the city with their troops. The Shah of Kokan is afraid. as Tashkend is a gate of his country. The young Shah of Bokhara, who, like Alexander on succeeding his father, Philip of Macedon, has had a hard fight for supremacy over the more turbulent of his own subjects, has been again defeated, and has called in the aid of the Russians. We must not forget that these news-letters present the state of Central Asia as Dost Mahommed wishes it to appear to us. To exalt his own services, and the necessity of a firm alliance with him, the old Ameer always flaunts in our faces the fear of Russia. The Shahs of Kokan and Bokhara are certainly at open enmity, and it is difficult to see how Russia can assist them both at the same time. The same letter gives the following gossip in the Cabool durbar on events in Hindostan :--"June 1 .- A news-letter was received from Peshawur. It was stated in the Ukbar that the native army of Hindoostan, that is cavalry and infantry, was going to be disbanded, and that grain was sold there at famine prices. The Ameer having gone through the news turned towards Scottan Mohamed and Ghoolam Mahomed, and said: 'What do you think must be the reason for disbanding the nauve works, are the families, I hope.' 'As there is not any enemy in Hindoostan or the Punjab, and besides this the expense of the army is greater than the income, the British have thought it proper to curtail the expenses, replied Sooltan Mohamed Khan. A merchant who was sitting in the durbar interrupted, and said that he had received a letter direct from Calcutta, by which he had learnt that more European troops were coming from England, and that natives were to be disbanded. 'This must be the case,' said the Ameer."

ICE-MAKING .- The Gazette Supplement contains some papers on the subject of establishing icemaking machines at the larger military stations. A patented machine imported by Messrs. D. Wilson and Co. was brought to the notice of the Military Finance Commission, and they strongly recommend the scheme to Government, both as a matter of comfort to the soldier and as an economical measure. It appears that the cost of a No. 3 machine is Rs. 5,000, or with engine, freight and charges, Rs. 7,500. In the case of Government experiments the cost of a small two roomed building, say Rs. 2,000, would have to be added. The cost of a day's work, including ether, coal, &c., would be Rs. 14-4. One thousand pounds of ice can be turned out in twelve hours. The cost is, therefore, below one pice a pound, or less than a fourth of what is charged for ice in Calcutta at present. At upcountry stations the cost of the ether would be increased by 25 per cent., and of fuel by 50 per cent. A No. 1 engine would turn out four times the quantity of ice, and the daily cost of producing the 4,000 lbs. would be Rs. 26-2, being at the rate of 13 lbs. per rupee. The block ice produced by the machine keeps much longer than the panice made in the North West. An eight seer share of ice in Northern India costs 60 rupees per season. For this the shareholder should receive 1,456 seers of ice, or 24 seers for the rupee. The same quantity could be produced by a No. 1 engine for Rs. 22-8, or by a small engine for Rs. 45. hey have come down since. This morning was To all this the Supreme Government say that the is the average with New Orleans seed.

copartnership between Government and the community suggested by the Military Finance Commission as the best means of securing the success of the scheme, "would neither answer well nor be a proper course for Government to adopt," but that Government might purchase the machinery on its own account and place it under a committee, with permission to sell all surplus ice. Dinapore is mentioned as a proper station to make an experiment. The Government call for an esti-mate for machinery for one or two stations, with a statement showing how much ice would be required by Government and the probable demand for it on account of private parties. The cost for ice in the whole Bengal Presidency was only Rs. 6,510 in 1860-61.

WARM WORK .- The 8th Native Infantry, alias the old 59th, reached Peshawur on the morning of the 21st June, a burning march of exactly one calendar month. So fearfully intense was the heat day and night that casualties from sun stroke were fearfully numerous. The Quarter-Master-Sergeant lost a child, and on the 20th ten men (Sepoys) were struck down, of whom one died in a few hours; the rest are under treatment. A Havildar also died through the same cause on the 18th, after an illness of only two hours. They had also casualties among the camp followers. A burning wind blew day and night with great violence over the camp, without cessation for three The Sepoys who were sun-struck whole days. were struck through their tents.

NATIVES FOR GENERAL SERVICE.—As the case of employment as medical officers in the British line army has been decided, and in our opinion rightly decided, against persons of Indian parentage; and as, at the same time, this numerous class of our fellow-subjects has been promised equal rights and privileges, as regards State employ, with all the other races governed by the British Crown, we should be glad to see the word and guarantee of the Government honorably acted up to as regards the East Indian anxious to obtain medical employ in its service. This would be done by the establishtain strength, from which the sepoy regiments, police battalions, &c., could be supplied with medical officers. The Europeans attached to these corps could be attended by an English medical officer, who, as in the case of division and brigade commands, would be always glad to take up such practice at the military stations for a small staff allowance. We recommend this suggestion to the Government, which, by some such measure, would meet what we consider the just claims of the East Indians, and could be carried out with a saving to the State-a point of which we never now lose sight .- Englishman.

DEWAN MOWLA BURSH, formerly deputy magistrate of Patna, who lately resigned his appointment, and declined to receive a pension from Government, has been offered the appointment of honorary magistrate. The selection is an excellent one, and the compliment will, in some measure, compensate this old and faithful public officer for the neglect and ingratitude with which he was treated by Mr. Halliday. The services of Mowla Buksh during the rebellion were conspicuous, and it was principally to his exertions that we owe the capture of the traitors who headed the emeute in the town of Patna, and murdered Dr. Lyell. It suited Mr. Halliday's purposes at the time to discourage all those who had co-operated with the commissioner of Patna, and therefore Mowla Buksh, instead of distinction and reward, was snubbed and removed; and it is only lately that his deserts have forced from the Government a recognition of his services. We trust that Mr. Grant's future nominations to these honorary appointments will be equally judicious, for on the character and competency of the nominees depends the success or failure of the scheme.—English-

COTTON IN THE ANDAMANS .- Captain Haughton reports to the Agricultural Society that his experiment in cotton-growing in the Andaman Islands is a failure. The crop yielded at the rate of 52lbs, of clear cotton instead of 200lbs., which

SNAKE CHARMING .- The following curious adventure with a snake is sent us (Delhi Gazette) from Rawul Pindee, 19th June, 1861:—"Last night a private of H.M.'s 93rd Highlanders was playing 'Love Not' on the clarionet, when, to his great surprise a snake, four feet five inches long, and of the most dangerous description, succeeded in gaining the top of the table on which his music was spread. He coiled himself up quite comfortably and listened to that most exquisite song. His love for music, however, happened to shorten his period of existence, for he was quickly dispatched by the stroke of a ramrod. The snake is preserved in a bottle of spirits, and will eventually be taken to 'Auld Reekie,' the home of the successful snake charmer. He deserved great credit for his presence of mind in continuing his playing until some one despatched the unwelcome intruder. It will no doubt be recalled to the man's mind for ever after, when playing or hearing 'Love Not.'"

NEPAUL, June 15.—Gooroopershad, by invitation of the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, has returned to Nepaul. The durbar has taken measures for the restoration of the infant child of Colonel Cromelin, together with the stolen property, and the colonel has been directed to send a man to receive his child and the property. The attention of Jung Bahadoor directed towards the improvement of the timber trade. He intends to visit the jungles during the ensuing cold weather. The Sooburnorakha has overflowed its banks, and the weather is delightfully pleasant. Colonel Ramsay has discouraged fresh attempts lately made by the Minister to obtain what he calls "liberal consideration" for the claims of Rajah Koolraj Roy of Mullewan. The Maharajah Jung Bahadoor and Thiraj are engaged in hawking; the resident also is often invited to share the sport. Jung is going in the ensuing cold season to the shrine of Kali.

KAMROOP, June 17.—A fellow has just been arrested here who has been moving about among the Hill Tribes, declaring himself to be a Soubadar of a Nepanlasa ragimant, catting the people together and spreading disaffection among them, as if employed by the Nepaul Government. This having been brought to the notice of our Magistrate, the Soubadar then professed to have been sent to the hills to purchase elephants for the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor. He is detained, pending a reference to the Nepaulese Durbar.

SONTHAL DISTRICT, June 17.—The district at present is perfectly quiet. The Zemindars at the request of the authorities have advanced small sums to the poor hungry wretches, and they have hung their bows upon the moul trees, and go in for cultivation with the common understanding even of savage tribes that, bad as it is, work is some shades better than starvation or bullets. This has been brought home to their feelings rather sharply. Whilst a sum of money was advanced they "hung up their bows" certainly, but they nevertheless did not do the other needful thing. So now they are supplied with bare subsistence day by day, whilst they work day by day, and no longer. This has been effective, and about half the cultivable lands have been already sown.

SIKKIM.-Our last letter from Sikkim informs us (Englishman) that, under instructions from our Government, Dr. Campbell, the Darjeeling Superintendent, has made inquiry as to the residence of the refugee Dewan Namgoway with the old Raigh. In consequence of these inquiries. the Dewan is reported to the Superintendent to have fled to Nepaul, in hope of influencing the Maharajah, Jung Bahadoor, to intercede for him with the Government. That he has endeavoured to secure the influence of Jung our informant does not doubt; but he also doubts, and with very strong reason, whether the cunning Dewan has left a secure asylum for the chances of a doubtful reception. The Soubah of Dalimkote is in disgrace with the Bhootan Rajahs, his masters, for his insolence and inhospitality to our officers in the course of the late disturbances. The Hon. Ashley Eden has been and continues very unwell.

SIMIA, June 20 .- This place is at present exceedingly gay, and it has been remarked that never before was such a congregation of fair women and brave men observed on the Mall. I have seen some faces before whose radiant beauty fancy herself might droop her pinion. The great event of the day is not an escalandre, nor is there, strange to say, even a woman at the bottom of it, but a misunderstanding of a rather serious kind between the Stewards of the late Sky Races at Annandale. The Volunteers subscribed for a very handsome silver cup, worth about Rupees 250, to be run for by hacks. The first disagreement took place between Majors Goad and Trevelyan (both elected Stewards), about the merits of Captain Clarke, who was also an elected Steward. Major Trevelyan objected to Captain Clarke on the score that he was unfit for the post, and proposed that "a man of rank " should be placed in his stead. This stirred Major Goad's wrath up to concert pitch, and the war of argument commenced. I forgot to say that Major Trevelyan elected Colonel Campbell a Steward on his own responsibility. The next dispute was about horses being entered under "sealed nominations," and Major Goad contended that it was unfair to enter valuable and first-rate horses for a prize which was intended for only third-rate nags. As soon as he saw Moleville Major Goad scratched his horse Brandy Moll, in high dudgeon, and certainly not without reason, considering Moleville is offered for sale at a good round sum of money, whereas Brandy Moll is a fortyone rupee caster. The cup being in Major Goad's hands he refuses to give it up, and thus the affair rests at present, though I was not a little astonished to learn that Captain Mylne, the owner of Moleville, has filed a suit in court against Major Goad for the value of the cup. The most amusing part of the business is Major Trevelyan's proposal about the "man of rank." I never heard of such an absurdity in my life, and everyone laughs over it as a famous joke meant in earnest; but a joke all the same. It is extraordinary how some natures will truckle to what they fancy is suppariority or provition. Benk is all very well on parade or in the field, but at table or off duty the ensign, as a gentleman, is the equal of the Commander in Chief .- Delhi Gazette.

Cash Balances.—In continuation of notification No. 95, dated the 7th June, the following statement of cash balances, as reported up to this date, in the Government treasuries in India at the close of the month of April last, contrasted with those of the previous years, is published for general information:—

_	April,	April,	April,
Government of India  Bengal  N.W.P  Punjab  Madras  Bombay	2,42,04,891	1,43,81,485 2,59,72,364 1,39,57,290 2,42,46,952 3,99,46,152	2,65,28,616 1,07,58,115

DISUSE OF KHAKEE.—The use of the now familiar Khakee cloth for troops in India is to be discontinued. Sir Hugh Rose prefers a white tunic for the men. The ordinary sea kit canvas frock is henceforth to be issued to troops leaving England for India. The change is advisable. The ordinary Khakee cloth never washed well.

RED TAPE.—The Bombay Government have offered to that of India the services of Mr. E. H. Little, of the Bombay Civil Service, who expressed a wish to be transferred either temporarily or permanently to the Bengal establishment; the Governor-general, in reply, expressed his inability to accept the offer of Mr. Little's services. A civil servant of Bombay or Madras, when qualified for the public service, may be employed in any non-regulation province which has not been annexed to the Presidency of Fort William, but a civil servant of Bombay or Madras, whether qualified or otherwise, cannot, under the existing law, be permanently transferred for employment under either of the local Governments of the Presidency of Fort William.

THE COMET.—A splendid comet made its appearance in the northern sky last evening, July 3, for the first time, for though it must have been visible for a few evenings past, the clouds have prevented its attracting any notice at this station, as far as we are aware of before, though it has been seen elsewhere. It is close to the Great Bear, between that constellation and the pole star, and is of such imposing proportions that when, towards midnight, it approached within ten degrees of the horizon, its tail extended almost to the zenith, a sweep of not less than seventy degrees. In the absence of the moon it is by far the most brilliant object in the sky. Our astronomical friends will, perhaps, tell us whether the illustrious stranger is to be identified as having exhibited himself before, to us or our forefathers, or is to be regarded as an entirely new acquaintance. It is larger than the comet of 1858, but not so bright; and its tail is straight.-Delhi Gazette.

THE FAMINE RELIEF COMMITTEE of the Punjab, with their energetic secretary, the Rev. Mr. Slogget, have done well in publishing a more detailed account of their operations up to the 30th of May last than Colonel Baird Smith could give. Up to that date ninety thousand men, women and children were fed every day in the Punjab. Of them the report says, nearly all must have perished but for the aid afforded them.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The turn of the Public Works Department has come at last. Major G. Chesney has been appointed a member of the Civil Finance Commission for inquiring into the enormous establishment of the depart-

Head Quarters.—We believe that there is now but little prospect of the Commander-in-Chief and the head-quarters staff of the army getting away from Calcutta to the hills this year. Work accumulates as fast as it can be got through; the worst months of the hot season have passed away; and with occasion still existing for constant reference to government, it would scarcely be worth while to undertake a journey to the hills, when it may be possible to get away, as it will be necessary to descend again in October or November.

REDUCTION OF THE 46TH N. I.—With the view of carrying out the orders of the Government of India in the military department relative to the reduction of the numerical strength of the 46th N. I., we hear that Capt. A. G. Forsyth, now commanding that corps, has been requested to take an advance of Rupees ten thousand from the collector of Lukimpore to pay gratuity and arrears of pay to those Sepoys who would be dismissed.

GOVERNMENT PROMISSORY NOTES.—The total amount of government promissory notes enfaced for payment of interest in London up to 31st May last was, Rs. 8,35,48,005. Of this just one-half was in 5 per cents., and one-fourth in 5½ per cents. The amount held in England has thus increased nearly two millions since Mr. Wilson's first financial statement and in spite of the double income-tax.

THE RANEE OF JHANSI, during the mutinies, collected from the district about three lakhs of Government revenue. Of this amount we learn that the Government have realized some Rs. 50,000 only, from the sale of jewels and land taken from the Ranee. The balance is one of the little items which go to form the vast losses by the mutiny.

MOULMEIN .- We learn from the local journal that of 207 English and East Indian residents of mark in Moulmein in 1844 there had died 101 and 55 had left the station. Four are unaccounted for and only 47 are now left. This is what, on a larger scale, goes on in the Presidency cities and the large stations of India, where the European population, like the human body, is almost renewed by changes and death every seven years.

HYDERABAD.—The Resident has expressed to the Nizam the gratification of the Viceroy at the conclusion of his difficulty with Salar Jung, and the restoration of that minister to power and confidence; and that in token of that gratification the Viceroy had despatched a magnificent present to the Nizam, which might be expected very shortly to arrive.

THE GOVERNOR embarked on the morning of the 25th of June, in the Dalhousie, under a salute of seventeen guns. The following passengers accompanied his Excellency:—Sir Arthur Cotton and Lady Cotton, Miss Dennison, J. W. Breeks, Esq., private secretary; Dr. Sanderson, Captain Villiers, A.D.C., W. Robinson, Esq., Captain Rundall, Captain Kennedy, and sixteen servants.

THE MADRAS BANK has declared a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ending the 30th of June last. THE ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP OF MALABAR AND THE SYRIAN CHRISTIANS .- The Cochin Courier learns "that an action for damages to the extent of Rs. 10,000 has been lodged in the Principal Sudder Ameen's Court by the Bishop of Veropoly, against Mar Curilos, the Syrian Bishop, resident in our town. The cause of action is that Curilos had publicly reported to Mar Thomas, the new Chaldean Bishop, that the Bishop of Veropoly had offered a heavy bribe for poisoning Mar Thomas on his arrival here." In the same paper is published a letter from "Fre Bernardino, of St. Theresa, Archbishop of Pharsaglea and Vicar Apostolic of Malabar," to Sir William Denison; it is dated the 21st of May, and is as follows:—"I had the honour, under date the 15th inst., of transmitting to your Excellency a telegram on the subject of an illegal invasion of my legitimate authority over the Catholic Churches in these parts. I was in-Catholic Churches in these parts. duced to resort to this summary mode of communication under the exigency of the case, with a view to save time, and secure the immediate action of your Excellency's Government, to prevent undue aggression or breach of the peace. I now take the liberty to solicit your Excellency's attention to the following facts. have for a long series of years held the position of sole and only head of the Catholic Churches Malabar, under direct authority from the Holy See, and with the sanction of your Excellency's Government and that of the States of Travancore and Cochin. The latest recognition of Government on my promotion as Vicar Apostolic of Malabar to the office of Archbishop was recorded in the Proceedings of Go vernment, No. 498, dated the 17th of August, 1850. By virtue of the proclamations issued by the local authorities, I am vested with exclusive control over the property of the churches under my jurisdiction, and the law courts have never recognised any other representative of those interests. A Syrian bishop, representing himself to have been ordained by the Chaldean Patriarch of Mosul, to the episcopate in Malabar, has now presented himself in Cochin, and is said to entertain views of invading my jurisdiction, and obtaining possession of the churches of the Chaldean rite, heretofore under my sole control and authority. Possessing no order or rescript from the Holy See, the fountain of all Catholic jurisdiction, the new bishop has no pretence whatever to assert claims to ecclesiastical power in this country. I am aware that it is not in unison with the policy of your Excellency's Government to enforce spiritual obedience upon any class of your subjects; but I trust, that without interfering with the consciences of individuals, it would not be thought incompatible with justice to grant effectual protection to the churches so long under my control against any invasion of the rights of property, or attempts to disturb the peace. Soliciting that your Excellency will issue such instructions to the local authorities as will achieve these subjects." The order of Government on the above letter is dated the 11th June, and runs thus :- "Resolved that the Right Reverend the Vicar Apostolic of Verapoly be informed that communications have already been addressed to the Governments of Travancore and Cochin, pointing out the necessity of taking due precautions to preserve the peace, and punish any illegal acts of aggression that may result from the circumstances to which his letter refers. The British Government will follow the same course in the provinces under their immediate control, but they will do nothing more. While they refuse their sanction to any forcible intrusion by the Syro-Chaldean Bishop, they will no less strictly refrain from putting any constraint on the people in their chele of their own spiritual guides; this will be left entirely to the people themselves, and on them my depend the reception which the new Bishop meet with."

RETRENCHMENT .- Under instructions from her Majesty's Government, his excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to direct the abolition of the appointment of Deputy-quartermaster-general of her Majesty's forces in the Madras Presidency. The duties of the office will be performed by the Quartermaster-general of the Madras army, under such instructions as may be given by his excellency the Commander-in-chief in India.

COTTON IN PEGU.-We learn from the Rangoon Times that the export of raw cotton from Pegu in 1860-61 amounted to 2,114 bales, almost entirely to Calcutta. The cost is about 3rd. the pound of clean cotton when shipped. It is grown chiefly in native Burmah, and is one of the many royal monopolies.

Ambulance Waggon .-- A new description of ambulance has been devised by Surgeon Major Ford, of the artillery, which seems from the plan to offer many advantages over the one now in use for the conveyance of sick and wounded soldiers on the march or in the field. It is capable of ascommodating eight men in the sitting or two men in the recumbent posture, with every facility for the removal of the latter into hospital without disturbance, or danger, or exertion on the part of the patients. It has room for water and hospital appliances; can traverse safely any ground that a six pounder can pass over, and can be turned readily on any ordinary road. It runs on four equirotal wheels, and promises to be easy, strong, and of light draught for two bullocks or large ponies.

SECUNDERABAD, July 1, 1861.-A portion of the articles intended as presents for his Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad has arrived, under a strong guard of the Hyderabad Contingent. They consist of twelve handsome bays, two carriages, one painted yellow and the other green. sets of harness, beautifully mounted with silver, hhopers, whire, he Another party of the Hyderabad Contingent has been sent out to Cocanada, under the command of a European officer, to bring up the rest of the khilluts for his Highness, which consist of rich jewellery. The horses at present are being trained up, and as soon as the other portion, which is now on its way, arrives, they, together with those that have already arrived, will be presented to his Highness the Nizam as a mark for his loyalty. That day will be a grand one. The Finance Commissioners for Hyderabad are daily expected. Very little rain as yet.

DOCTORS DIFFER. - The following are the grounds upon which the committee of the Church Missionary Society felt themselves unable to concur with the committee of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in urging upon her Majesty's Government the division of the diocese of Madras :- " 1. Because the present number of clergy, one hundred and fifty-two, appears to this committee an inadequate reason for the division of the see of Madras. 2. Because the geographical circumstances of the diocese of Madras admit only of a division of the southern from the northern parts in which Madras is situated, by which division the bishopric of Madras would be shorn of its chief missionary fields in Tinnevelly, Travancore, and Tanjore, and would be thereby greatly reduced in its relative importance in comparison with the southern bishopric. 3. Because the missions of the society in South India have hitherto received the full benefits of episcopal superintendence from the Bishop of Madras; and the facilities of travelling will render such superintendence more than ever efficient, and they apprehend that the separation of their southern missions from the diocese of the Presidency city, where are local boards of management, and the chief local support of missions must always be situated, would be attended with great risk to their best interests. 4. Because the time is fast approaching when the native church in Southern India will be ripe for a native bishoprie; and they apprehend that the proposed constitution of a southern bishopric will impede, rather than facilitate, that desirable measure; especially by keeping the native church too long and too closely identified with a foreign episcopate."

MRS. BUIST .- The widow of the late Dr. Buist desires to acknowledge with gratitude the sub-scriptions of upwards of £500 raised in India by the friends of her late husband. The amount will be devoted to the education of her children. It is all the more valuable since Mrs. Buist is not, as was supposed, well provided for.

THE FRENCH IN THE RED SEA .- Letters from Aden inform us that Shermaki, the Somali chief, had been seized by the French and carried off to Suez, to be tried, and probably hanged, on the charge of having been accessory to the supposed murder of Mr. Lambert, the French Consul, two years ago. Our gallant allies continue to make themselves very busy in all parts of the Red Sea, and very hateful to the natives on both the African and the Arabian coast.

MR. Dosabhov Framjer, a Parsee of Bombay, has just published in the Guzerati language an account of his "Travels in Great Britain" the view of inducing the natives of India to visit England. The writer says of England—"There is no kingdom on earth to be compared to it in power, wealth, industry, and commerce." He not only describes what he saw, but gives an account of the English constitution and trade. He thus states the benefits of a visit to Englandare there thrown freely into intercourse with Englishmen as they should be seen, where they shine in all the bright qualities peculiar to them as a nation. By such intercourse the people of England also become better acquainted with the views of the people of this country. The natives of India, on the other hand, from seeing the foremost and most civilised country in the world. will not only be enabled to judge of the room which exists for improvement in their own, but will also obtain a knowledge of the means by which the sought-for ends could be accomplished.' The local Government assisted the author in the publication of the work. There is no book more wanted for the educated classes of India than a short description of the physical aspect, constitution, resources, and power of England, written in the various vernaculars.-Friend of India.

ARTESIAN WELLS IN THE DECCAN .- Dr. H. J. Carter has reported to the Bombay Government against the feasibility of boring artesian wells in the Deccan. Sedimentary strata of which the lowest, composed of clay, superposed on each other and elevated so that the incline formed by the surface of the clay stratum is as high as the mouth of the bore, with a considerable fall of rain, are the requisites of success. Apart from the question of rain, there are no such strata in the Dec-From the north of the province of Malwa to the Malabar coast near Vingorla, and from Bombay to Nagpore in the east, Western India is covered with a sheet of trappean rocks upwards of five thousand feet thick on the Concan, and gradually thinning out to four hundred feet or less at Nagpore, which has been more or less broken up in all directions. This subject of artesian wells should have the attention of the geological survey, especially in the famine tract of the North-west.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY On the 4th July declared a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum, clear of Income-tax, upon the last half-year, plus a bonus of twenty rupees per share, making the dividend equivalent to one of 14 per cent. A bonus of 10 per cent. also on the salaries of the establishment was voted, and the surplus of Rs. 46,827, after defraying these charges, carried to the reserve fund.

TELEGRAPH TO BUNDER ARRAS.-The Sucreme Government has sanctioned the construction of a line of telegraph from Kurrachee along the coast of Mekran to Bunder Abbas. The work will be commenced immediately after the monsoon.

THE SEWREE GARDENS are at last to be abandoned, and wisely so, their distance rendering them almost as inaccessible as though they were at Poonah. Government has made the Horticultural Society a present of the Mount es-tute, lying between the Parell-road and Mazagon: the new gardens will be laid out thereon.

LIEUT. COOKSON, I.N.-Commodore Wellesley, Commander-in-chief of the Indian Navy, in a letter dated the 17th June last, reported, for the information of Government, that the schooner Constance, Commander Cookson, which had been despatched to the Kooria Mooria Islands, returned to Bombay on the 10th June, having succeeded in rescuing the two men who were on Jibleea Island, Kooria Moorias, and who had been brought to Bombay in the vessel. He goes on to say that " although Lieut. Cookson, commanding the Constance, with a modesty which does him credit, has refrained from alluding even in his official report to the difficulty he experienced in rescuing these two men, I cannot avoid bringing to the notice of your Excellency in Council what I have learned from other sources, viz., that, after remaining two days at anchor off Jibleea, the Constance during that time lying exposed to bad weather and a heavy sea without being able to communicate with the shore, Lieut. Cookson swam on shore with a line from a boat, by which means he harfled the two men into the boat, and there is no doubt that he nearly lost his own life in doing so. Such conduct I cannot doubt will entitle him to the commendation of your Excellency in Coun-Government, in acknowledging Commodore Wellesley's letter, stated (July 8) that "the Governor in Council is much obliged by your having brought to his notice the manner in which Lieut. Cookson effected the rescue of the men who had been abandoned on Jibleen Island by Messrs. Ord and Co., lessees of the Kooria Mooria Islands. His Excellency begs that in conveying to Lieutenant Cookson the thanks of the Government for his successful execution of this duty, you will express to him the high sense which they entertain of his bravery and skill, with which at much personal risk he effected the rescue of the Europeans left by their employers on the uninhabited island of Jiblees."

OPIUM SPECULATION .- A hurricane of trouble is sweeping over the Marwarree bazaars of Bombay, Calcutta, and Indore, and the end of the gigantic gambling of the last two years is a universal "suspension of payments." The Patna drug, which touched Rs. 2,000 a chest at the last Calcutta sales, has sunk to 1,600, Malwa from 1,800 to somewhere between 1,300 and 1,400. The last advices declare the drug unsaleable in China even at a reduction of 300 to 400 dollars below the quotations two months ago. The richest Marwarree houses in Bombay stopped payment on the 3rd July, and panic, unrelieved by any feature of hope, has paralized the bazaar. The electric wire tells us that three hundred of the wealthiest Marwarree families of Indore have fled across the frontier into British territory to escape the summary processes of the Malwa courts for the recovery of debt. The event is said to be unparalleled in Marwarree history, and men are posted as defaulters whose hoondies have hitherto been held equal to Government securities in every bazaar of the country. This crash, or collapse, or call it what we please, will tell heavily upon the opium revenue of the year. A fall in price of 1,900 rupees a chest will take the gilt off Mr. Laing's estimates we fear. The panic will prohably sweep two-thirds of the opium bazaar into the Insolvency Court, and divert the trade again into European hands for some time.—Times of CIRCULATION OF THE BIBLE.—The following circular, with the Lord Bishop's appended recommendation, has been recently addressed to all the chaplains and missionaries in the presidency. As the object is one in which many of the Christian laity feel a deep interest we now give it the publicity of our columns :- " Dear Sir,-I am directed by the committee of the Bombay Auxiliary Bible Society to inform you that we are earnestly desirous of using every means in our power for the increased circulation of the Holy Scriptures in the Western Presidency. You have observed from our last report that the total number of issues during the past year was 4,315, an amount considerably larger than in the preceding year, but, at the same time, extremely limited as with the vastness of the field. The Parent Society, in its report regarding India, expresses the same conviction. I am, therefore, requested by the committee to say to you that we shall esteem it a favour if you can suggest any means for increasing the circulation of the Bible, either generally, or more particularly in your own locality. They also direct me to inform you that they are prepared to give the most favourable consideration to any applications for colporteurs made by any of the missionaries, chaplains, or ministers of the presidency. The attention of missionaries is especially directed to Rule No. 5, printed on the cover of the report, under the heading 'Grants and Sales of Scriptures.' Trusting that you will give us your active Christian co-operation in this effort, your aid in the pecuniary support of this branch of the Bible Society, and especially your prayers that the Lord may open to us 'a great door and effectual,' I have the honour to be, yours in Christian esteem, JAMES EDWARD CARLLE, one of the secretaries of the Bombay Auxiliary Bible Society." Carlile having been so good as to let me see the above circular before it goes to the press, I cannot forbear to say that I consider the present time as one which urgently calls for the increase of our efforts in Western India to spread abroad the word of life. Vernacular education is steadily advancing, and it strikes me that we should be solicitous to follow in its wake everywhere with a speedy offer of the Holy Scriptures for sale, by colporteurs or otherwise, among those to whom their newly acquired faculty of reading will make the Blessed Volume both accessible and attractive. The very remarkable proofs of the power of the Holy Spirit accompanying the simple text which have attended its circulation in India, no less than elsewhere, afford us the most ample encouragement to "sow beside all waters." J. Bombay.—Poona, June 18th, 1861.

Education.—Sir George Clerk, in a minute on the Educational Report of Mr. Howard for 1859-60, assents to the Directors' statement that "the year has been one of honest hard work." He does not agree with Mr. Howard that the English schools have been starved to benefit the vernacular, as they receive a sum of Rs. 155,389 out of a total grant of Rs. 372,540. He endorses Mr. Howard's opinion that the vernacular schools under the Bombay Government " are the best, or at least the most advanced in India." They " aim at giving a real education of a liberal character in addition to reading, writing, and arithmetic."

The people of the Presidency subscribed a sum of Rs. 215,550 to the educational fund. The general results are as follows, and against them we set those of Bengal for the same year. Bombay .- The number of schools, chiefly vernacular, increased from 291 in 1855, to 761 in 1860, and of pupils from 23,681 to 44,166. Bengal .- The number of schools, chiefly English, increased from 147 in 1855 to 592, and of scholars from 12,865 to 40,366. This progress in education, which has been equally rapid in the other provinces, is remarkable when we remember the check placed on expenditure in 1857, and the fears excited by the events of that and the subsequent year.

RAILROAD THROUGH BOMBAY.—It is stated that the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company have concluded negotiations with Government regarding the construction of a railroad through the island. Three stations, a native contemporary understands, are proposed to be built; one at Lower Colaba, the second on the Esplanade, and the third at Dadar. As the construction of the several iron bridges would require a number of years, it is proposed to make a temporary terminus at the village of Oomersary, from which passengers from Surat and other places can be conveyed to Bombay by steamers in a few hours.

Imports (Bombay, July 12).—Cotton Piece Goods.—Grey Shirtings have been sold to a moderate extent, holders being firm, and prices unchanged; 40 in. cloth up to 7lbs. is in good demand, at full rates; 8 to 84bs. moderately inquired, and 9 to 10lbs. being scarce inquired at firm rates. 45 in. maintains its former position; 50 in. languid inquiry, at previous quotations; 50 in. steady in value and demand. Grey Longictohs of 36 in. by 40 continue out of inquiry, while 45 in. attracts better attention. Grey T Cloths maintain their former values; Blue end are saleable at Rs. 2-5. Grey Domestics are dull, at nominal quotations. Grey Madapollams continue in limited request, and are hardening in price. Grey Jaconets unaltered in position. Grey Mulls and Drills continue abundant, and dull of sale. Grey Printers firm in inquiry and price. Grey Cambrics in slight inquiry, prices unchanged. Bleached Goods do not yet show any symptoms of improvement. White Shirtings and Madapullams of middling to fine quality, and Jaconets of 64 reeds and upwards, meet with occasional demand at former prices. Mulls of middling to fine quality, and Books have a moderate inquiry. Lappets, Dhottes, and all other kinds remain in a dull and depressed condition. Prints, T Red Goods, and Dyed Goods hold the same unsatisfactory position both as regards value and demand. Tarns.—The market for both Mule and Water Twists has continued dull. Holders are firm, and refuse to accept lower prices; no noticeable sales have transpired. Turkey Red and Ornge Yerns are inquired for at extremely low rates, to which the holders would not submit. Green is extremely dull of sale. Quotations are nominally maintained. Metals.—The demand for Copper has revived, owing to the firmness of holders and a speculative inquiry on the part of dealers, who, being large holders themselves, are desirous of keeping up the prices. Brazers have advanced rates; a lot has been disposed of at Rs. 13-10. Quicksilver of at 18. 15-10. Cancest liver is worth 18. 30 and 20, but nothing has been done at these rates.

Exports (Bombay, July 12).—Cotton.—Since our last report, the market has relapsed to a quiet state, owing to the less favourable accounts from England. The demand has slackened very much, and prices show a decline. Hemp in langual inquiry, at reduced rates. Coffee.—Stocks of both Mocha and Malabar are extremely scarce; the former is quoted fs. 15 to 16 per maund, and the latter Rs. 9 to 9½. Pepper.—Purchuses are made to a limited extent for local consumption, at about former prices. There is a small stock. Madder Root.—Sende not to be had at market. Muscat, in small supply, is placed at Rs. 3-10. Cassia Lignea is more scarce, and worth 10 to 11 annas per lb. Guns.—There is very little doing in these. Horns.—Abundantly held at our quotations. Opium.—The last news from China, reporting a heavy decline in the prices of Malwa and Bengal drug, had completely prostrated our market, and sales were at one time made at as low as Rs. 1,330 for Malwa. Latterly prices have rallied a little.

The Amalgamation.

Fort William, June 25.— H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council, under instructions from H.M.'s Govt., is pleased to notify that, in order to obliterate, as far and as soon as possible, the distinctions between officers of H.M.'s British and Indian services, and to afford to as possible, the distinctions between officers of the M.M.'s British and Indian services, and to afford to such officers of the Indian army as may prefer the conditions of general service an opportunity of obtaining a position in the British army, H.M. has been pleased to approve that, for every vacancy caused in a line regiment by the transfer of an officer to the staff corps constituted by the Royal Warrant of the 16th of January, 1861. a transfer of an officer of corresponding rank in H.M.'s Indian army, who may be disposed to accept of such transfer, should be made to the regiment in which the vacancy takes place. Appointments of officers of the Indian army to the vacancies in H.M.'s line regiments will not, however, be made in India even provisionally; but H.E. the C. in C. in India will submit, through the Govt. of India, for the consideration of H.R.H. the Gen. C. in C., and for submission to H.M. the name, rank, date of commission, and nature of previous services of the officer whom H.E. may recommend for each vacancy.

The officers so transferred will enter H.M.'s line regiments as junior of their respective grades, as is the case with officers of the British army exchang-ing into regiments of the line, and they will be placed in all respects on the same footing as to pay, half-pay, and leave of absence, as other officers of H.M.'s British regiments.

Officers desirous now or hereafter of being transferred to line regiments are to submit their applica-tion to the C. in C. of the presidency to which they belong through the prescribed channel.

The applications from officers of the Madras and Bombay armies will be forwarded with the opinions

Colonel J. Brind, C.B.

Aut. Gen.'s Office, Simla, June 25.—Col. J. Brind, C.B., commanding 3rd brigade horse art., addressed last year, an official letter to the Adjt. gen. of the army, which compelled the C. in C., to his extreme regret, to remove him from his command. The letter did not relate in any way whatever to Sir Hugh Rose. Adjt. Gen.'s Office, Simla, June 25 .- Col. J. Brind, Hugh Rose.

Col. Brind has now addressed to the Adj. gen. of the army a communication, in which he acknowledges, fully and frankly, his very serious error, expressing his sincere regret that he should have committed such a fault, and his wish to withdraw the objectionable letter.

Col. Brind has thus made the best reparation in

Col. Brind has thus made the best reparation in his power for that error.

Col. Brind performed admirable service before Delhi, and in several actions in the late campaigns. He gave in the most trying times a brilliant example of cool courage, clever enterprize, and unflinching resolution.

Sir Hugh Rose does not wish, never did wish, that such an officer should undergo a punishment without hope and without end.

A well-timed pardon is not only an attribute, but an element of good discipline.

H.E. the C. in C. is also desirous of giving to the Bengal art. a proof of his sincere esteem; and of the gratitude which is due to the "contury service," as rilliant as useful, which they have rendered to their Queen and country.

H.E. therefore restores to his former position in the Bengal Art. Col. Brind, an officer who in the field has so often proved that he is worthy of his noble regt.

With reference to the above, Col. C. S. Reid is transferred from the 3rd to the 2nd brigade horse art., but he will continue to do duty with the command of the 3rd brigade, pending the return of Col. J. Brind, C.B., from leave of absence on m.c., or until further orders.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.,

H. W. NORMAN, Lieut. col.,

Depy. Adjt. gen. of the army.

plies to other departments is confined to the cost at which the demands are met.

4. Each medical officer should submit to the commissariat officer, on the 20th of each month, a monthly estimate (in duplicate), according to the form No. 1, of his probable demands in the ensuing month as respects quantities.

5. The commissariat officer should assign a money reliance each earth each activity and activity the significant expenses.

5. The commissariat officer should assign a money value to each article, and return the original estimate within five days after receipt to the medical officer, who will draw the supplies upon the estimate by requisition during the month, and on his responsibility alone.

6. The commissariat officer will enter the daily requisitions in an abstract according to form. He will total it at the end of each month, and having prepared a statement of the actual expenditure incurred on the estimate, will forward it to the medical officer on the 5th of the succeeding month. The medical officer, after comparing the statement with estimate, signify his approval or otherwise, and submit both the statement and estimate to the deputy inspector general of hospitals.

NATIVES OF INDIA FOR GENERAL SERVICE.

NOTWITHSTANDING the apparent injustice and positive hardship of the case we are disposed to agree with the authorities at the Waroffice as to the unfitness of the natives of India for general service. At the same time it is clearly necessary that it should be definitely stated what constitutes "a native of India," for nothing can be more vague and uncertain than the present standard, if, indeed, one can be said to exist. The mere accident of being born in India is, of course, held no disqualification as regards the children of European parents; though, as a matter of fact, an individual of European parentage, born, brought up, and educated in that country is less capable of enduring either fatigue or cold than an indigenous inhabitant of pure Asiatic origin. It should be more explicitly stated, however, what proportion of colour will be considered an insurmountable objection. What is the precise shade upon which the question of constitution depends? What amount of sallowness is consistent with the interests of Her Majesty's service? By what admixture of blood does the European degenerate into the Asiatic? How soon can the swarthy children of the sun attain the physical force and moral dignity of the palefaces of the West? The question is a delicate one, and scarcely susceptible of a solution strictly applicable to all cases. Occasional acts of injustice must inevitably occur. let the definition be what it may, but no general rule can be free from such exceptions. It does seem rather hard that Mr. W. Lyons should be told that he is not entitled to all the privileges of a British subject because his mother came of a mixed lineage, her father, however, being a European. In this instance it was probably the circumstance of his being himself born in India that turned the scale against him, for had his birthplace been anywhere in the British Isles it would have been simply ridiculous to treat him as an Indo-Briton. The case of another gentleman is still more peculiar. He describes himself as the son of a surgeon-major in the Madras Army, and as having been born in Tavoy in the Tenasserim Provinces, but as he omits to claim any share of European blood on the mother's side it may be fairly inferred that he is a genuine "half-caste." He adds, however, that he has resided for upwards of nine years in Glasgow without a day's illness of consequence; that in colour, habits, and religion he is a Briton; and that legally and physically he is as much a Scotchman as if he had been born and lived all his life in Scotland. Here again the place competitors for medical appointments. For of nativity must have had some influence, for the latter, however, there will still be a had his mother been confined in Scotland no one could have questioned his power of enduring any amount of cold and wet. A nine years' residence in Glasgow might of itself be looked upon as a tolerably good seasoning for encountering the most disagreeable climate, and yet it was quite impossible to make an exception in favour of this gentleman. Then we have a Parsee, Graduate of the Grant Medical College of Bombay, stoutly insisting upon the fitness of his race to serve in any clime, and bear the rigours of the most "stormy winter from the frozen north." "The Parsees of the present day," he truly says, " live in all parts of the world. a few are in Australia, a large number in China, many now in England, and within the last year two of them have established themselves in New York. For the last fifty years or more the Parsees have borne the severe cold winters of Canton and Shanghai (?) without the least inconvenience to their health, or risk to their life." He further asserts, that in this country they are able to follow their various occupations with better health and greater strength, both mental and physical, than they ever did in India; but, on the other hand, it must be borne in mind that these emigrant Parsees are in comparatively affluent circumstances-sufficiently so at least to avoid exposure to "the pitiless blast"-and that their pursuits are almost entirely of an indoor character. It is one thing to endure an English winter, however severe, by the side of a good coal fire, but quite another to march for hours through frost and snow, or through pelting rain and piercing winds, and yet preserve a steady nerve and untroubled apprehension for the performance of surgical operations, or even for the treatment of ordinary hospital cases. Besides, if Indo-Britons are rejected, it would never do to accept Parsees for general service, however eligible in many respects. But in simple truth the question is one of colour. It is useless to shrink from the real fact. The actual and most powerful argument against the employment of Indians, Parsees, and Indo-Britons is the prejudice against them in the minds of the soldiery. The white man has such a self-consciousness of moral superiority over his coloured brethren that the simplest private would consider himself aggrieved if handed over to the medical care of the most accomplished "nigger" in the world, for such would be his contemptuous designation for gentlemen of Asiatic or mixed lineage. Still, there must be a line drawn somewhere, though it is certainly not easy to do so. It might, perhaps, be sufficient to require that both parents should have been born and brought up in Europe, and that the candidate himself should have left India at a certain age, say twelve, without inquiring too closely into the admixture of blood. But if Indo-Britons are disqualified by their constitution from taking general service under the Crown in the medical department, they must be equally ineligible to hold military commissions. In the old native army there were many officers of mixed parentage, and unless we are greatly mistaken there are not a few such in the royal army. For the future, however, the same objection will apply to coloured candidates for commissions as to large field open in India, and Sir Charles Wood has engaged the Supreme Government to act liberally towards all who prove themselves worthy of employment. It must undoubtedly have been a great disappointment to the gentlemen who have studied under such great disadvantages to qualify themselves for the military medical service, to be told at the last moment that they were not eligible to compete, but their grievance is altogether an accidental and unavoidable one, and will not, we trust, be productive of the disagreeable consequences predicted by Dr. Senjee Pulney Andy. "I came," he says, " to England on the faith of the advertised promises of her Majesty's Government, thereby infringing the most revered laws of my country, rendering myself subject to excommunication from my relatives and friends, besides from native society. I am sorry to be obliged to add that, if this news of my disappointment should reach India, it will create a great deal of grievance and mistrust in the faith of the British Government. Such combined grievances, chiefly relating to caste, as your Government are aware, had been the cause of the late mutiny." We are willing to make every allowance for Dr. Andy's disappointment, and readily condone his bad English and even the impertinence of the last sentence, but it seems to us that he is slightly illogical in complaining of the removal of temptation to violate " the most revered laws" of his country. Neither do we quite understand what were the "combined grievances" to which we allude. Judging from the context, we conclude that the late mutiny was caused by his rendering himself subject to excommunication, and then being denied the expected fruits of his transgression. It would certainly be more logical to argue that a mistrust of the intentions of the British Government was likely to arise from such prizes being held out for the infringement of caste; but Dr. Andy was evidently "an angry man, and an angry man was he," when he penned his ill-conditioned letter to Dr. Gibson, for submission to Sir Charles Wood, and we are glad to observe that the only notice taken of his petulance was treating it with silent contempt. Dr. Andy ultimately accepted £100 in cash, and the same sum to pay his passage back to India, so that we may hope the news of his disappointment will not produce a second mutiny among his outraged countrymen.

ADMINISTRATION OF BENGAL: 1859-60.

On the 2nd of May, 1859, Mr. J. P. Grant succeeded Mr. Halliday as Lieutenant governor of Bengal, and thus became chief administrator of the provinces of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, Assam, Cachar, the Cossyah Hills, Arracan, the Chota Nagpore territory, and a small portion of Sikkim adjacent to Darjeeling. These provinces contain 253,000 square miles, producing one-third of the gross revenue of our whole Indian empire, and inhabited by more than forty millions of human beings, of whom "some are sunk in barbarism, others are far advanced in civilisation." former are governed rather "by the action of the magistrate than the formal procedure of the law;" while for the latter "is provided a body of laws based upon the principles of English jurisprudence."

CIVIL JUSTICE.—In the year under consideration, 105,585 suits were instituted in the Civil Courts, or 16,025 in excess of 1858-59. This large increase of litigation is ascribed, we know with how much of truth, to the apprehensions of the natives with regard to a more simple form of procedure that was about to be introduced. If this be so, it shows that very little trouble could have been taken to explain to them the nature of the proposed alterations, and it further exemplifies the mutual ignorance and distrust of the rulers and ruled. Suits connected with land rent there were 20,654; otherwise connected with land, 11,347; with wages, debts, &c., 70,003; with caste, religion, &c., 503; with indigo, silk, &c., 3,078. Thus nearly one third of the litigation arises out of disputes referring to land, and of this two-thirds are suits for rent, owing to the minute subdivision of tenures. It was chiefly in Bastern Bengal that these suits were originated: in the districts contiguous to Calcutta scarcely any were instituted. In the Moonsiff's Court the average duration of a suit was five months and eleven days, in the Zillah Courts six months and eleven days, and in the Court of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut one year and ten days. And we are asked to believe that a large number of suitors hastened to institute their cases before this tedious old system had expired! In the Non-Regulation Provinces, again—that is, among the comparatively less civilised tribes subjected to the more immediate action of the magistrate-there were 17,057 suits in the course of the year, but it is not stated what was their average duration, or their average value: the latter omission being equally applicable to the Regulation Provinces. In addition, moreover, to this vast amount of litigiousness we have 32,287 cases brought before the Small Cause Court of Calcutta, which takes cognisance of suits relating to property not exceeding £50 in value. The total amount contended for was £93,500, and one-half of the number of suits brought was for sums under £1. The total amount realised by fees and fines was £13,214, while the expenses of the Court did not exceed £10,414.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE.-Under this head we find that 36,369 persons were acquitted, and 67,010 convicted by the magistrates or committed to the sessions; of these 32 were sentenced to death, 4 imprisoned for life, 203 transported, and the remainder fined or imprisoned for various terms. The total number of crimes committed was 121,370, exhibiting a ratio of crimes to population of 1 to 311, but including petty assaults and miscellaneous offences of a trifling character. Of offences against the person of the highest degree of atrocity there were 600, and against property with violence 1,600. It is in the less civilised districts that murder was most rife; and in some instances it was perpetrated under very extenuating circumstances. The Coles, for example, still believe in witchcraft, and even regard it as an hereditary taint; so that " not only the reputed wizard, but every one in whose veins the wizard's blood can be traced, is regarded as a fit object for destruction." Among such utter barbarians murder is only homicide, and from their point of view quite justifiable; nor has any very long period elapsed since the imaginary crime of witchcraft would have been similarly punished in our own country. In the frontier provinces, again, there are frequent border raids, "committed by savage and uncivilised tribes, sheltered by inaccessible mountains and dense forests from our observation and revenge. At times they are impelled from their mountain fastnesses by the pangs of hunger, and the hope of plunder in the peaceful village of the plains. At times they are urged on by a murderous thirst for human blood, with the sole object of obtaining heads to place round the grave of some departed chief." different are the dacoits, or gang-robbers of Bengal, who are described as common thieves and arrant cowards, and who might easily be put down altogether if the people would cordially co-operate with the Government. A considerable decrease of land dacoitees has, however, taken place during the last few years; and instead of 520 cases, as in 1852, we have only 171 in 1859. But it has proved more difficult to suppress dacoity on the able success.

-In Bengal there are two distinct classes of police-military and civil. In 1859-60 the former consisted of 10 battalions of infantry and 3 squadrons of cavalry, besides the Sumbulpore battalion and the Kookie levy; each battalion averaging above 700 men. It is worthy of remark that five of these battalions were recruited from the lawless tribes on the eastern frontier. who are easily converted into excellent soldiers; and each battalion is composed of men of the same race, officered by a European commandant and four lieutenants, with the usual complement of native officers. The duty of the military police is to guard treasuries and gaols, to repress riots, and to punish refractory tribes on the border. With regard to the civil police, the less that is said the better. "But improvements in the police must, after all, depend upon the efficiency of the magisterial authority." However zealous they might be, the magistrates were numerically unequal to their work, although there were now 170 deputy magistrates, against 100 in 1857. marked improvement, we are told, is observable since this increase took place; but it is quite certain that there is ample room for still greater improvement.

PRISON DISCIPLINE.—The number of prisoners sent to gaol in this year was 52,068, and at the close of it 19.021 were in confinement. The total cost of maintaining those criminals was about £79,510, each prisoner averaging a little over £1 per annum. There were 16,009 prisoners condemned to labour, of whom less than one-half were employed on manufactures; but these yielded a net profit of nearly £17,400, exclusive of the press department of the Alipore Gaol. Of deaths there were 2,116, of whom 214 were above 60 years of age. In point of education the criminal population does not excel. There were 904 males fairly educated, but not a single female; 2,553 males and one female who could read and write after a fashion; and 47,258 males, with 1,352 females, wholly untaught. "The results of the year may be briefly summed up to be an apparent diminution of crime, a decrease of expenditure, a considerable increase of profitable industry, and an improvement in the sanitary state of the prisons in the Lower Provinces. The large proportion of acquittals to committals, and the complete ignorance of 93 per cent. of those accused of crimes, are the most striking general facts in the record."

REVENUE.—Land Tax.—The demands for the year amounted to £1,120,935, the collections to £3,773,523, the remissions to £24,709, and the balances to £322,702.

Customs. - The receipts on merchandise amounted to £1,366,164, and on salt to £682,757, making a gross total of £2,048,021; from which must be deducted £53,710 for charges, leaving a net revenue of £1,995,211. To this, however, must be added the receipts of the Maulmain Custom-house, which raise the net revenue to £2,003,309.

Alkarry. - The net revenue realised from spirits. drugs, and opium was £373,707, the percentage of charges on collection being slightly over 16 per cent.

- The receipts from opium sales amounted to £4,296,743, the charges to £661,457, and the net revenue to £3,635,286.

Salt .- The net revenue from the operations of the Salt Department was £1,624,059. says the report, "presses so lightly upon the community as the salt-tax, and no tax is more easily collected. Salt is the only article which experienced no fluctuation in price (in consequence of the mutiny), while the price of grain and country products generally has risen 30 or 40 per cent., or more; and so long, therefore, as the prevailing prosperity and high prices continue, there is no reason for supposing that the increase of the duty will be followed by a proportionate decrease of consumption."

Stamps.—Under this head the net receipts were £295.034.

Stationery .- The value of the stationery sent out rivers, and a small steam gun-boat is now em. from England was £19,020, and of that purchased teaching."

ployed on the most infested waters with consider- | in the country £24.843, while the net proceeds of sale were £352.

EDUCATION .- The Director of Public Instruction is aided by five inspectors and forty-seven deputy inspectors. In 1859-60 there were 289 colleges and schools in the Lower Provinces maintained by Government, attended by 18,387 scholars; and 303 aided schools, with 21,0°9 scholars; making a grand total of 592 schools and 40,366 pupils. Of female schools there were only 10, and the number of children did not exceed 367. The gross annual expenditure incurred by the State was £103,202. With regard to the Calcutta University some important changes were introduced, such as "the establishment of a new examination in arts, intermediate between matriculation and the final examination for the B.A. degree; the creation of a new and lower degree. styled Licentiate, in each of the faculties of law and civil engineering; and the institution of the degree of Doctor in the Faculty of Law." candidates who presented themselves for the Entrance Examination only 243 succeeded in passing, and of the 50 undergraduates who went up for the B.A. degree, 13. Of the 22 candidates, however, for the B.L. degree 10 were successful. It is stated that the Medical College has hitherto failed to supply qualified officers for the service of the State, owing to the large percentage of students who leave college before completing their course, in order to turn to profitable account the imperfect knowledge they have acquired. Of the 30 students who went up for the first examination for the degree of Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery 13 passed, three of whom were further entitled to University scholarships. In the Civil Engineering College there were, at the close of the year, 65 students on the rolls. The cost to Government for the preceding year was £2,504, but the professional staff was still very incomplete. The School of Industrial Art is described as being in a transition state, but considerable progress had been made in wood engraving. It is satisfactory to learn that the five Government Colleges for general education were producing good fruit, and had already benefited by the influence of the University. The English School Department of the Calcutta Madrissa was succeeding admirably, and even the Mahomedans had begun to send their sons to it. The Hooghly Madrissa, however, was in a wofully bad condition, but important reforms were about to be introduced. Certain changes proposed in the Sanscrit College having proved distasteful to the Hindoo gentry had not been carried out, and were again to be taken into consideration. The number of students was about 300. The collegiate and zillah schools are represented as the best-managed educational institutions in the country. "Their classes are yearly recruited from the vernacular schools by the admission of those students who have succeeded in gaining the scholarships attached to institutions of that class in the annual examinations held by the inspectors. One hundred and sixty of these vernacular scholarships are annually available; they are tenable in zillah schools for four years, and carry with them the privilege of free tuition, in addition to stipends of four rupees per mensem. By means of these scholarships a lad of real ability and energy who commences his education in a vernacular school may, by the exercise of industry and perseverance, push himself up through different stages into the University, and obtain the highest honours given in it, enjoying all through his career stipends and scholarships sufficient for his maintenance." On the 30th of April, 1860, there were 6,628 students on the rolls of these schools. Very little progress has been made in female education through the medium of public schools. "In a country where girls marry at the age of four or five and are mothers at thirteen or fourteen, it is not from schools that any great success in this direction can be anticipated. It has been truly observed that female education in Bengal must be brought within the penetralia of home; and there is reason to believe that it has at length gained entrance there, and takes the form of zenana

PUBLIC WORKS .- Owing to the expenditure in this department being unavoidably limited, the works executed were chiefly of a military charac ter. Considerable progress, however, was made in the construction of roads, both metalled and unmetalled, and also in improving river and canal communications previously in existence. Local funds were largely applied in making district roads to act as feeders to the railways, but no very sensible progress appears to have resulted. Under the Bengal Government there are three railways at different stages of completion :- the East India, the Eastern Bengal, and the Calcutta and South Eastern. On the first line at the end of the year there were 121 miles open from Howrah to Synthia, with a branch line, forty-five miles in length, to Raneegunge. The entire traffic on the open line returned a profit of 141 per cent. on the cost of construction, which was very high; namely, 75 miles of double line at £15,700 per mile, and 91 miles of single line at £12,000; making a total of £2,269,500. The passenger traffic yielded £87,312, and the merchandize. £148,260. The gross earnings of every kind amounted to £257,825, from which £117,424 have to be deducted for expenses of working. The number of passengers conveyed was 1,388,714, of whom 14,777 were first class, 64,176 second class, and 1,309,761 third class. In the whole year only twenty accidents occurred, four alone happening to passengers. Of the Eastern Bengal Railway it is unnecessary to say more than that a vigorous commencement was made, and the same remark will apply to the Calcutta and South Eastern.

EMIGRATION.—The total number of coolies who emigrated during the year under notice was 23,312 statute adults, of whom 15,980 proceeded to Mauritius. To Demerara there sailed 4,394; to Trinidad, 1,618; to St. Lucia, 670; and to Jamaica, 650. The rate of mortality on board the vessels bound to Mauritius was only 2 per cent.; no accounts had been received of the mortality on the other route.

TEA CULTIVATION.—At the close of 1859 there were 7,599 acres of land in Assam under cultivation for tea, the produce of which was only 1,205,689. As every acre of well cultivated land is calculated to yield six maunds of tea, the produce ought to have been upwards of three millions of pounds, had the plants arrived at maturity. In Cachar a commencement was made, and about one thousand maunds found their way to the London market; and a few hundred acres were being experimented upon among the hills of Darieeling.

THE SONTHAL PERGUNNAHS .- A marked improvement was observable in the moral as well as in the material condition of the people. Not only was there abundance of food for the inhabitants, the fruits of honest industry, but they were freed from an oppressive and humiliating system of bondage. There were two descriptions of bondsmen, the Kameotee and the Hurwahee. "A Kameotee bondsman is one who, in consideration of a sum of money, binds himself and his heirs to serve the giver of the loan until the money is repaid with interest. The Hurwahee bondsman similarly binds himself to work for the moneylender whenever his services may be required. The Kameotee bondsman generally lives with the bondholder, and is in fact his domestic servant. The Hurwahee bondsman. on the contrary, is a sort of out-door labourer, and is only employed when his services are required." But as a rule these services were always required at the very season when they were most injurious to the bondsman, who was obliged to neglect his own fields and crops in order to assist the bondholder in his cultivation. It was not until 1858 that the existence of this system of bondage became known, but since then it has been entirely abolished, and every man works in the manner most advantageous to him-

CORRESPONDENCE.

LE HOWL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." Sir. - With reference to the interesting extract from the Delhi Gazette, which I have read in your Mail of the 23rd instant, respecting the Moravian Mission to Le Howl, in the Himalaya mountains, it may not be out of place here to give you an extract from an official report I made to Government, and which was published in the "Calcutta Register" of 1822. I am happy to find my recommendation has been carried out, which I was not aware of until I read the extract above alluded to.

"From the lax state of religious feeling in the mountaineers, I am induced to imagine that a mission of the Unites Fratrum, or Moravians, as they are commonly called, would be admirably adapted for the moral and political improvement of these people; because they apply themselves in the first place to the introduction of morality, of Christianity, and the arts of comforts and civilisation, setting a powerful example in their own conduct and diligent occupations." occupations.

In one respect I think the correspondent of the Delhi Gazette has made a mistake, and in justice to the deceased, I think, I am right in noticing it. I allude to his attributing the Vocabulary and Dictionary of the Thibetan language "to a German residing at Petersburg." I beg to say it was Alexander Csoma de Koroos, of Transylvania, who found his way, under most dangerous and difficult circumstances, through Persia and Bokhara to Simla, in 1826, to whom we are indebted for, I believe, the only vocabulary and dictionary ever published of the Thibetan language. He resided for several years in a monastery in the mountain territory of Ledawke, on the borders of Chinese Tartary, where he prosecuted his studies; and in 1833 he was summoned by Government to Calcutta, where he published a few copies only of his Grammar and Dictionary, a copy of which he gave me in 1835, and I presented them to the Belfast College in 1836. Mr. Csoma considered he had traced several of the European languages into the Thibetan. When I left India he was busily engaged arranging some very interesting Thibetan records for the Asiatic Society in Calcutta, and in 1838 (I think) he made an attempt to get into Tartary through Nepaul, and died of

I hope the Delhi Gazette will favour us, at no remote period, with further accounts of this most interesting mission to Le Howl.-I am, sir, yours very obediently.

CHAS. P. KENNEDY, Late Political Agent at Soobathoo. Cheltenham, 29th July, 1861.

BEAR AND FORBEAR. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-The extract from the Calcutta Englishman, published in your journal of the 29th July, details an affair between some officers of a Queen's regiment and some villagers near Saugor, which, it is to be hoped, will undergo very strict and careful investigation.

People in England can have but a faint idea of the necessity of natives of caste refusing to permit Europeans to touch their water-pots on the one hand, and, on the other, the nuisance to an English officer, especially if dressed, of having water poured into his hands to drink. Now that India is so much garrisoned by European troops great care must be taken in such matters, however small they may at first appear. New Zealanders may, without imminent danger to the British Government, be at first invited to place themselves under its Imperial authority, and then be handed over to the tender mercies of a Legislature and Executive, the powers of which are wielded by European settlers, however dreadful to them may be the result. But this won't do to be tried upon the 170,000,000 of India; and unless the Queen's authority is supreme (I might almost say despotic) there equally over all, and the honestly Direct Cadets.—The following gentlemen passed their examination at the India-office on the 6th inst.:

—Messrs. J. D. Harding, R. Lockwood, R. Vivian, E. M. Forbes, A. Clare, H. J. Woodward, W. H. Browne, E. H. Fisher, W. Stanforth, G. G. Bird, W. S. Hose, W. Laing.

despotic) there equally over all, and the honestly impartial tone hitherto taken by the Secretary of State for India in Council, as in the indigo contary of State was rangement the Go without compromise adhered to, and the same fair and equitable.

line of conduct adopted towards all would-be white usurpers of her Majesty's authority, be they independent Europeans engaged in commerce, or be they officers and men of British regiments. headstrong in their ignorance of the customs, and contempt of the rights of their Indian fellow-subjects, we shall in this nineteenth century drift into the crimes and follies of the Spaniards in America in the days of Pizarro and Cortez.—I remain, sir, yours obediently, 31st July, 1961. A RETIRED EMPLOYE.

KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." SIR,-I observe in your issue of July 29th a statement taken from the Englishman, to the effect that Government intend giving the prize taken at Kirwee to the forces of Generals Rose, Roberts, and Whitlock.

This is a manifest injustice. The two former forces mentioned had nothing whatever to do with the surrender of Kirwee and the rebels Narrain Rao and Madho Rao. The position of the forces as we marched up-country was—Rose in the centre, Roberts on the left, and Whitlock on the right. Now, had the place taken been between Rose's and Whitlock's columns, the former might, with some show of right, have claimed a share, but as Kirwee was on the right of Whitlock's line of march, it is impossible that Sir Hugh Rose can be brought in as having in any way assisted at its capture, even by co-operation.

As to Roberts's column they have no more claim to the prize than has the force which went into Oude the following season .- Yours obediently, ONE OF WHITLOCK'S FORCE.

> HOUSE OF LORDS.-July 30. COTTON SUPPLY ASSOCIATION.

The Earl of Shaftesbury presented a petition from the Cotton Supply Association, the prayer of which was as follows :-

"That your honourable House would take into your immediate consideration the grave and important matters in this petition referred to, with a view of adopting forthwith the most efficacious measures for advancing the prosperity of British India, espe-cially including therein the rapid formation of works of irrigation and the opening up of river and canal navigation there, as thereby that country will not only be protected from famine, but be enabled to produce a permanent and an abundant supply of raw material for the cotton trade of Great Britain, and also to become in many other respects prosper-ous in herself and a source of wealth and benefit to England; and that as it is of paramount importance that English capital should be largely expended in the construction of the last-mentioned works, such encouragement and support may be given through Parliament to the East India Irrigation and Canal Company as will insure the most complete success of that undertaking, and so as to enable it to evidence the safety and the profitable character of such a mode of investment."

The noble earl then asked whether the Governorgeneral of India had been informed that the settlement and execution of a contract between the Government and the East India Irrigation and Canal Company had been left entirely and without reserve in his hands, and that the Secretary of State was prepared to sanction any arrangement the Governor-general might consider Earl DE GREY and RIPON, in reply, said Sir Charles Wood is ready to sanction any arrangements which the Government of India, after mature deliberation, may consider fair and equitable.

The Enlistment in India Bill was passed through Committee, and the Pensions, British Forces (India) Bill was read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—July 30.

Colonel SYKES begged to ask the Secretary of State for India whether there was any foundation for a report that the Museum lately belonging to the East India Company was to be broken up and dispersed; and why the practice of sending ten or more copies of the printed selections from the Records of the Indian Government to the Parliamentary Paper-office for sale had been discontinued?

Sir C. Wood stated that the collection of the Indian Museum had been removed to Fife-house, which formed a convenient place for its exhibition. With respect to the second question, he observed that since 1856 only two copies of the papers alluded to had been sent for the use of the library of the House, but he could not state the reason of the alteration in the practice.

The East India Loan Bill (No. 2) was passed through Committee.

INDIA.

Lord Monteagle presented several petitions from natives of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, Bombay, Madras, and Tanjore, representing the state of the British possessions in India, and praying for the redress of grievances. The noble lord, in a tone of voice almost wholly inaudible in the gallery, made some remarks on the financial affairs of India, and was understood to suggest that arrangements should be made for the more speedy production of official papers relating to that subject. He wished to know whether the Government would lay on the table of the House the speech which Mr. Laing lately made in the Legislative Council of India, and also when the financial accounts of the Indian Government would be published.

Earl De Grey and Ripon said that, not having had notice of the question of his noble friend, he could not undertake to produce Mr. Laing's speech. It was very undesirable that it should be made a practice to lay speeches by members of the Legislative Council before Parliament, as they ought to be encouraged to work and not to speak. The financial accounts of the Indian Government had already been circulated.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—August 5.
The East India Loan Bill (No. 2) was read a third time and passed.

INDIAN FINANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—The following figures, obtainable from the Indian Estimate for 1861-2, which has lately been received, will probably be thought to possess some interest.

Omitting the opium revenue from the presidencies of Bengal and Bombay, the following state-23. Atkinson, Edwin Felix Thomas ...

ment shows the amount and proportion of revenue raised in the eleven provinces under the Indian Government:—

The first figured column in the next statement shows the amount available from each province for general or Imperial purposes after the local expenditure for administrative purposes, public works, &c., has been deducted.

The next column shows the share of the general expenditure appropriable to each province in proportion to its revenue. The third and fourth columns show the amount of the excess or deficiency of the first as compared with the second column, or the extent to which each presidency or province pays.

The opium revenue, which is peculiar in its nature, has been deducted from the gross general charges, the details of which are given:—

Note.—Mr. Laing, by leaving about £500,000 of the amount required for public works to be provided by the local Governments, converted the above deficit into a surplus of £209,808.

The following is the detail of the total sum of the general charges in the above statement:—

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIAN ORDER OF KNIGHTHOOD .- Her Majesty has been pleased to confer the Knighthood of the new Indian Order upon Lord Combermere and Sir George Pollock—two veterans whose services in India, as those of men now living, seem scarcely credible. Lord Combermere, before he entered upon the theatre of his principal exploits in the Peninsula, served with Wellington, then Colonel Wellesley, against Tippoo Sultan, and was "especially distinguished" at the battle of Mallavelly, fought in 1799. After a long career of success in Europe he returned to India, and gained fresh honours by the siege and storm of Bhurtpore, in 1826. Sir George Pollock did not, indeed, earn his first distinction in the last century, but he served under Lord Lake at the battle of Deig and the capture of Bhurtpore, in 1805, in the first war in Nepaul, in the first war in Burmah, and in command of the army which relieved Sir R. Sale and avenged the disasters of Cabool in 1841.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF SECOND MONTHLY MAIL TO PENANG, SINGAPORE, AND CHINA.-IR CODSEquence of the urgent applications made to her Majesty's Government for the restoration of the second monthly mail service between this country and China, which was discontinued last month, it has been determined to re-establish this service. Mails for Penang, Singapore, and China will accordingly be made up in London on the morning of the 20th inst. for despatch, via Southampton, and on the evening of the 26th inst. for despatch, via Marseilles, and thenceforward the mails will be despatched twice a-month, as formerly, viz.:-On the mornings of the 4th and 20th, via Southampton; on the evenings of the 10th and 26th, via Marseilles. As the revenue derived from the correspondence conveyed by the line of packets between Point de Galle and Shanghai is insufficient to cover the cost of this double service, the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury have, by warrant, directed that the postage upon such correspondence shall be increased. All letters, therefore, for Penang, Singapore, Hong Kong, and all other parts of China, Japan, Java, the Philippine Islands, Labuan, Borneo, Siam, Sumatra, and the Moluceas will in future be chargeable with the following rates of postage, viz.:-Via Southampton, for a letter, not exceeding half ounce, 1s., above half ounce and not exceeding one ounce, 2s.; above one ounce and not exceeding two ounces, 4s.; above two ounces and not exceeding three ounces, 6s. Via Marseilles, for a letter, not exceeding quarter cence, 1s. 3d.; above quarter cunce and not exceeding half ounce, 1s. 6d.; above half ounce and not exceeding three quarters ounce, 2s. 9d.; above three-quarters ounce and not exceeding one ounce, 3s .- By command of the Postmaster-

OVERLAND EXPEDITION FROM CHINA TO INDIA -Intelligence has just been received from Captain Blakiston, of the Royal Artillery, one of an exploring party now engaged in examining the routes from China through Thibet and the passes of the Himalayas into India. The expedition started from Shanghai, and proceeded 700 miles up the Yang-tse river in the vessels of the squadron of Admiral Hope. Beyond this point they proceeded in one gunboat and a small iron steamer to Foo-chow, 140 miles above Hankow where the vessels will remain until the return of the party. Captain Blakiston is of opinion that the objects of the expedition will not be accomplished until the summer of 1862. At present the party has penetrated to a point beyond any hitherto reached by European travellers. The district around Nankin is wasted by the civil war, which has stopped all trade; but higher up the Yang-tse river there were indications of great contentment and prosperity, the stream being crowded with junks, and the adjacent country being thickly populated. Captain Blakiston has also forwarded to Mr. Whiteley, of Woolwich, cases containing birds shot on the upper reaches of the river, including the eagle, harier, cormorant, kite, grebe, pheasant, &c., which will be deposited in the Royal Artillery Institution.

MAURITIUS.—From the 1st of January, 1849, to the 31st of December, 1860, 49,916 emigrants embarked from the Mauritius for India: 40,455 were male adults, 5,657 female adults, and 3,804 children. The largest emigration took place in 1858 and the smallest in 1853. The number of ships despatched from Calcutta to Mauritius, under Ordinance 30 of 1858, from the 1st of January to the 31st of December, 1860, was 10. The number of emigrants who embarked amounted to 5,079 souls, equal to 4,529 statute adults, 2,894 of whom were male adults, 1,343 female adults, 834 boys, 250 girls, and 258 infants.

FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS SERVING IN INDIA.—The number of ships chartered by the Emigration Commissioners during the years 1859 and 1860 for the conveyance to India of soldiers' wives and families was 18. The number of emigrants who embarked amounted to 6,647, 352 of whom were male adults, 3,000 female adults, 1,680 boys, and 1,615 girls. The mortality amounted to 600viz., 1 male adult, 29 female adults, 281 boys, and 289 girls.

THE SOUTHAMPTON MAIL OF THE 20TH JULY. The contract packet Mooltan, which sailed from Southampton on the 20th ultimo with mails for India, Australia, and Mauritius, having broken down, the Mails were to be transhipped at Gibraltar to the Delta, which left Southampton on the 27th ultimo, and orders have been sent by telegraph to Suez to detain the outward-bound packets until those mails arrive.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COM PANY. - The first ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company will be held at the London Tavern on Thursday next, the 15th inst., to elect auditors and determine the amount of their remuneration, and also that of the directors and secretary, and to arrange other business matters. The directors report that Sir Charles Wood has conceded to the company that the Government are not to realise any direct profit from the sale of the water supplied for irrigation, and that the price to be paid by the Government to the company shall represent a fair charge for such water as against the parties using it. Sir Charles has also expressed his readiness to sanction any arrangement with the company which the Government of India may consider fair and equitable. The total receipts from the 6th July, 1858, to the 1st of the present month, are stated to be £45,026. 5s. 0d., and the total expenditure £3,822, exclusive of £573. 4s. 3d., paid as interest to shareholders in excess of the amount received from the sum of £40,000 invested in Government paper at 5 per cent. VENGEANCE AGAINST WITCHCRAFT.—The Coles of the Bengal Presidency, have a firm belief in witchcraft, and it is stated in a Blue-book just laid before Parliament concerning the progress and condition of India, that during the temporary suspension of authority in the troubles of 1857 they seized the opportunity of wreaking their vengeance upon the whole wizard race for among the Coles withcraft is considered an hereditary taint; and not only the reputed wizard, but every one in whose veins wizard's blood can be traced is regarded as a fit object of destruc-When these people thus reverted for a while to habits which the fear of the English Government had restrained, the destruction of human life was terrible. "Whole families," writes the magistrate of the district, "were put an end to. The destroyers in some quarters, issuing forth in the dark, and commencing with the wizard and his household, went from house to house, and before the dawn succeeded in extinguishing, as they hoped, a whole race." Father, mother, and son would be decoyed into the jungle and slain, while the younger children were mur-dered in the homestead. Murderers would go forth in the morning following different paths to make sure of their victims, and kill them almost simultaneously in different localities. With the restoration of order these atrocities, of course, ceased. Their occurrence shows how strong is the influence of tradition, and that time alone can alter the temper and ideas of a people. The Coles had been for a quarter of a century brought more immediately under the control of the Bengal Government; markets had been established, villages built, great progress made in agriculture, and violent crime everywhere repressed.

EXPORT OF RAILWAY MATERIAL TO INDIA The activity which prevailed last year in various branches of the iron trade is to some extent explained by the immense shipments made of materiel to India, on account of the vast railway works now in progress. It appears from an official return that last year no less than 234,710 tons of materials were despatched to India, of the collective value of £2,140,703, being the largest consignment made in any one year since the works were commenced. The proportion of materiel taken by each company was as follows, omitting fractions:-East India, 56,448 tons, of the value of £580,387; Madras, 38,348 tons, of the value of £296,842; Great Indian Peninsula, 25,971 tons, of the value of £236,365; Bombay, Baroda, and Central India, 32,981 tons, of the value of £335,668; Scinde, 2,056 tons, of the value of £26,582; Punjab, 24,107 tons, of the value of £241,211; Indus Steam Flotilla, 1,240 tons, of the value of £17,215; Great Southern of India, 17,139 tons, of the value of £118,574; Calcutta and South-Eastern, 6,088 tons, of the value of £74,174; Eastern Bengal, 30,338 tons, of the value of £213,686.

ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY.

HEAD OFFICES:

29, Lombard-street, LONDON; and Royal Insurance-buildings, LIVERPOOL.

BRANCH OFFICES:

Manchester, Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Dublin, Glasgow, and Edinburgh.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

"The success of the Company, even in its earliest years, received the marked attention, and elicited the surprised comments of writers best acquainted with the history of In-comments of writers best acquainted with the history of Insurance Companies.

"Fire Premiums for 1860 EQUAL the Total Fire Premiums for the SEVEN YEARS 1845 to 1851.

"Life Premiums for 1860 EXCEED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS ending 1852.

"Purchase of Annuities in 1860 LARGELY EXCEEDS the similar receipts for the first TEN YEARS—1845 to 1854.

"This progress, it is believed, is unsurpassed, considering that it applies to each of the three branches of the business."

FIRE BRANCH.

*TIRE BRANCH.

*The Fire Branch has certainly shown no exhaustion during the year 1860 of that impetus which had previously brought it to a position of the first magnitude among the Insurance Companies of the United Kingdom. The Fire Premiums in 1859 had advanced to the sum of £228,314.7s.

3d. In 1860 the amount of Fire Premiums has arrived at a sum of £362,977.19s. 11d., showing an increase of £34,663.

12s. 8d., exceeding the large advance of the preceding year; so that in two years the Fire Revenue of the Company has been enhanced by the enormous sum of £66,829.17s. 5d.

"The Parliamentary Report of Returns of Duty paid to Government for the year 1860 exhibits the augmentation of the business in a more prominent way, as it affords the means of comparison with other Companies. The Proprietors will be gratified to learn that the Increase of Duty paid by the Royal in the last year is more than double that of any other Company, either London or Provincial, whilst only one of those Companies even approaches to 50 per cent. of the advance of this Company. Our increase actually equals 30 per cent. of the other increase of the Metropolitan Offices combined, whilst of the Provincial Offices it forms upwards of 30 per cent. of the total advance of the other 28 offices established out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

**The Reports of the Company for several years have had invariably to announce a constant periodical expansion of Life Business, the new Policies of each succeeding year showing an advance over the one that had immediately preceded it. A similar result is shown in the year 1860, the Premiums on New Policies, after deducting Guarantees, being £15,079, 17s. 10d., which is an increase in that item of £1,993, 17s. 5d. above the amount received for the year 1859.

"But even this advance is small when compared with the sudden and remarkable momentum which has been given to this brauch of the business in the present year (1861).

"It was not until the commencement of the year that the public seemed to have become fully acquainted with the fact that the Royal Insurance Company had published late in the last year an account of the investigation into the assets and labilities of its Life Department, under a novel form, and in as plain and intelligible a manner as the abstruseness of the subject admitted, together with the entire statements and valuations necessary for that purpose.

"It is conjectured, from the extensive notices of this Pamphlet and its accompanying Diagrams which have appeared in the Periodicals of the day, that it has largely attracted the attention of vast numbers of persons in all parts of the United Kingdom, as well as in other parts of the world. Indeed, a most satisfactory and conclusive evidence that such is the case is afforded by the fact that the Sum Assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the present year, is actually fifty per cent, in excess of the sum assured in the corresponding months of the year 1860, although the latter amount in itself exceeded the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

"If this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company and the surface of the present year, is actually fifty per cent, in excess of the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

amount in itself exceeded the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

"If this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company would, with respect to the amount of its new business, be at once placed (at least with one or two exceptions) at the head of all the Insurance Companies doing business in this country; and the anticipations of the last Report, to the effect that the details of the Life Business then to be published would form an epoch of the Establishment, will have a speedy and very happy realisation."

GENTLEMEN.—Having received charge of the Home Agency of the Bengal Military Fund, on the resignation of Colonel Weller, I beg to offer myself for Election as the Permanent Agent, and to request the favour of your votes when the official papers are circulated.

Official papers are circulated.

That I was enabled to carry on the duties of the Agency to the recorded satisfaction of the Directors for two years, when officiating for Colonel Henderson in the years 1858 and 1859, will, I trust, be considered an assurance that my best efforts will be always devoted to the interests of the Fund, and the convenience of Subscribers and Annuitants.

Yours faithfully,

WILL. FREETH, Lieut. Colonel, Retired List, Bengal Army.

In the present Treatise the Author has endeavoured to combine what is necessary of the Philosophy of the Science of Arithmetic with the practice of the Art of Numbers.
Throughout the work he has attempted to trace the source of every rule which is given, and to investigate the reasons on which it is founded: and by means of particular examples, comprising nothing but what is common to every other example of the same kind, to attain in Arithmetic the kind of evidence which is relied upon in Geometry, or in any other demonstrative science.
A Second Appendix of Miscellaneous Questions (many of which have been taken from the Examination Papers given in the University during the last few years), has been added to the present edition of this work, which the Author considers will conduce greatly to its practical utility, especially for those who are intended for mercantile pursuits.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the sactor the norse ever man. He and he mone, or the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But athough there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired i class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing Jour hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life. July 17. 1861. Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject the takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the nogle animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet has work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of dellneation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The anthor is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 28, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

CESS OF CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, in lieu of the gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features:—

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increaved freedom of suction is supplied, a natural clasticy, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gams. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

- "We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.
- "Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hamts of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intime acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English To that gentleman is to be assigned the main Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a super-abundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.
- "The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.
- "Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.
- "The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.
- "Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

- "Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.
- "The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper pudgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same thue, unothrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.
- "These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte; she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.
- "These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted-and, as it would seem, systematically tortured-Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 80, 1861.
  - "The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta mail of the 8th of July is somewhat less barren of news interesting to the Services than has lately been the case. In the first place we are enabled to give, under the usual head, the names of about forty officers who have joined the General Staff Corps, but thus far the prospect of general service has proved more attractive for the younger men. Then we learn that Sir Charles Wood has declined to accede to the memorial of the Madras civilians, praying for the abolition of the Civil Fund and the payment of pensions at certain rates. But while rejecting this petition the Secretary of State gives his consent to the immediate retirement on an allowance of £500 a-year of such members of the service as have served twenty-five years, of which twenty-two have been passed in India. By this concession, which we understand to be a special one his new sanitarium.

and not prospective or permanent, forty-four Madras civilians will at once be permitted to return to Europe, receiving hereafter, each in his turn, the full amount of the annuity to which they may be entitled by their subscriptions. In addition to matters of more general import we have a Court Martial in the North-West Provinces on Gunner Langford, for writing seditious letters to the Mofussilite, the least reputable of the Indian journals. For this of-fence he has been very deservedly sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour, and we only regret that a similar punishment could not be inflicted on the editor of the paper that gave circulation to the gunner's unsoldierly and flagitious writings. In the Madras Presidency, again, three young officers of the Native Army have been brought to trial for man-alaughter. The facts of the case are thus related in the Athenosum :-

slaughter. The facts of the case are thus related in the Athenosum:—

"The three accused were dining together one evening, and after dinner, about eleven o'clock, they went to the stables of the host to look after a sick horse. They found the horsekeeper lying on the ground hopelessly drunk, and after ineffectually attempting to revive him by throwing cold water on his person, they determined to duck him in a neighbouring pond, which up to that time every one had believed to be very shallow. The horsekeeper was raised to his legs, and, supported by an officer on each side, was led towards the water. When near it the horsekeeper broke loose, and jumped or tumbled in. He never rose again, notwithstanding that two of the officers plunged in after the man, and did all in their power to recover the body, which was not found till next day. It was then discovered that there was a well in the pond down which the deceased must have gone, and as, according to the medical testimony, the man was seized with cramp while in the water, his melancholy fate is thus accounted for. The learned counsel who appeared for the accused admitted that in attempting to duck the man they were doing an illegal act, but contended that they were not responsible for the fatal consequence, as the man had broken loose from them and had himself jumped into the water. The Chief Justice laid down the law very carefully, and from the manner in which he summed up, it was evident that his lordship considered the evidence justified a verdict of guilty. The jury, however, seem to have adopted the view of the law which was enunciated by the prisoners' counsel, and after a deliberation of about twenty minutes, acquitted them."

The finding of the jury has been objected to,

The finding of the jury has been objected to, but it is difficult to understand how they could have arrived at any other conclusion. Had the deceased not broken away from the accused he would simply have been ducked, and brought to land comparatively sober. The jumping into the pond was his own act, and his death was clearly the result of his going head foremost down a well, the very existence of which was previously unknown. The real offence committed by the officers was no worse than a common assault.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal seems doomed to encounter unpleasant accidents in his tours into the interior. On his former visit to Parisnath his tents caught fire, and he was glad to return to the Presidency minus his wardrobe. This time his tents have been struck by lightning, and two of his servants killed, so that his Honour will probably have some doubts as to the salubrious advantages of

The Rev. James Long, of the Church Missionary Society, has addressed a long, verbose, and egotistical letter to the Friend of India, with a view to explain his connection with the translation of the Bengalee drama, entitled "Nil Darpan." His explanations are only so far satisfactory as that they confirm the truth of the French adage, "Qui s'excuse, s'accuse." It did not strike him as at all probable that the editors of the leading Calcutta papers would object to being compared with Judas Iscariot, or to being accused of taking bribes. His object was simply to let the European community know what the natives thought of them, and also to afford to the world at large some idea of the character of the literature of Bengal at the present day. And yet he admits that he cut out many filthy and obscene passages, thus destroying whatever was really characteristic; and he adds that it was entirely through inadvertence that he allowed certain coarse allusions to remain that are an insult to his fellowcountrymen.

Sir Charles Wood's Retirement Scheme will be found elsewhere. It is undoubtedly liberal so far as it goes, but it will certainly cause grievous disappointment to many old officers who would gladly have retired from a service that has lost all attractions for them, could they have looked for something more than the regulation allowance. It will be seen that only regimental lieutenant-colonels and majors will benefit by this scheme, unless their numbers fall short of three hundred, in which case they will be supplemented by senior regimental captains on £120 a-year in addition to the pension of their rank. Nothing is said about doubling the £50 bonus originally proposed, but we trust that the Secretary of State will adopt the Governor-general's suggestion on this subject. The offer of an additional £100 a-year would almost certainly break up the entire Invalid Establishment, and prove a considerable saving to the State.

THE CHANCES OF ANOTHER REVOLT. The Temple of Janus is shut. At this moment there is not a soldier in the pay of the Indian Government engaged in fighting. For the first time since we became masters of the Peshawur Valley there is not a frontier tribe with whom we are at enmity. Neither the Kookees on the far east, nor the Mahsood Wuzeerees on the far west, were sufficiently punished; but the former are quiet, and the latter are suing for peace. We cannot point to any border tribe, however obscure, nor to any rebels in the dense jungles of Oude or of Central India, who require the attention of even the police. Up to 1857 the empire was in the process of growth, and there was never a day in its history when it was not in active collision with some principality or robber When it had attained its full stature it was forced to fight for supremacy with the supporters of the dynasty which it supplanted Christian was pitted against Mahomedan, Calcutta against Delhi, and the result was the unquestioned establishment of the sovereign of Great Britain as the Padshah of India. The humiliation of the Mussulman was so complete, the victory of the British was so thorough, and by many Asiatic Powers so unexpected, that there is now a peace throughout India, profound, complete, unprecedented. Not merely is the fear of our power upon all our subjects and feudatories, but the same of our prowess in crushing the mutiny, increased by our success in humiliating the potentate who rules middle Asia from Pekin, has gone forth into all eastern lands. So overflowing are our military resources that we have conquered China, crushed for the time the outbreak in New Zealand, and are ready to send an army to occupy the Lebanon or the valley of the Nile.

This state of peace is so unusual that by some it cannot be believed, while others, on whom the events of 1857 have stamped the impress of nervous excitement, distrust the calm, turn to old native prophecies, and uneasily anticipate a storm of which the existing lull is only the natural preliminary. For the past month the journals have been filled with rumours of coming For the past month the evil. of disturbances on the frontier, of discontent in certain native corps, of reviving nationalities and creeds, of the coming men and the coming mutiny. Englishmen in India have lived so intensely during the last four years, that a cessation of excitement is to them a portent of approaching evil. India rests after the sorrows of 1857 and the toils of 1858, but a heavy nightmare still broods over her, and hideous dreams take the place of the terrible realities of the past; hence the rumours and the gloomy forebodings which are more the fruit of sad recollections than of actual dangers, of political inactivity than of present evil. That the peace should last long is impossible in a country ruled as India is, containing so many combustible materials and fringed by such savage and fiery tribes. But that the vague uneasiness and military turbulence, which always exist in Asiatic countries however they may be governed, should at an early period assume the form of a rebellion of a creed or a nationality, as rumour declares, is only sufficiently probable to make the authorities careful in removing every motive to discontent, and in imposing all legitimate checks on the dangerous classes.

Whence is immediate danger likely to arise Not from the mass of the people, the tillers of the soil. For centuries have they been ruled by successive conquerors, but they have never changed for better or worse, knowing only one duty-the payment of the proper share of the produce of their fields to the ruler for the time being. That they have not improved under our administration, that in fact we have never penetrated so low as they are, their passive position in 1857 testifies. Nor have we reason to fear their feudal lords whose power we limited or altogether extinguished up to 1857. That danger is over. These chiefs had then their chance and not a man of them was equal to the opportunity. We have mean-while corrected our mistake so far that any change of sovereign would not now be advantageous to them, while in the absence of the Mogul and the Mahratta houses, they want associations to which to appeal, a centre round which to summon followers to conquest. It is in our own power to remove the only source of danger from which we have hitherto sufferedour native mercenaries. If from a false security or because of a temporary difficulty in providing for Indian officers whose claims a quarter of a million sterling would meet, we allow the sepoy army once more to grow in numbers and in disorganisation, then we deserve to lose India, for we prove ourselves unfit to govern it. Meanwhile. with the prospect of a war in Syria or Egypt, an army of 140,000 men may be tolerated if we bind them in the fetters of an iron discipline. Neither from the mass of the people, nor from their feudal lords, nor from our sepoy army need we fear serious danger, if we exercise ordinary precaution and confer the blessing of a Government at once wise and firm.

But there are two sources of political evil which it becomes us to provide against by special means the Mahomedans and the Sikhs. Fortunately they are antagonistic to each other. Both are distinguished from every other class and creed in India by the fact that they possess organisation, that they have all the elements of nationality that they are fanatically devoted to a creed which they recognise the duty of propagating at the edge of the sword, and that they look forward to a prophet yet to come who is to give them political and religious supremacy. The Mapolitical and religious supremacy. homedans were thoroughly defeated in 1857 and would probably have submitted in sullen silence for the next quarter of a century. But long before that period elapses the Mussulman power in Europe must cease, and the fading of the crescent from St. Sophia will be the signal for an outburst of Mahomedan hate and fanaticism paralleled only by the days when the prophet led his hosts to universal conquest and unbroken victory. For that outburst the English in India must be prepared. It is now hatching at Mecca, it will be all the more terrible as the probable precursor of the final extinction of the creed of the Koran. Sikhs, with the natural exaggeration of an oriental race, over-rate their services to the British. They saw us at our worst, they fought our battles. They look upon themselves as Sutcha Padshads, as the true kings, not in the sense of their old Gooroos-kings who ruled by wisdom and persuasion only, but kings who are destined to be the veritable rulers of all India. They value their English masters for having helped to destroy the Mahomedan power so long their rival, but they look upon the time as approaching, if not near at hand, when the English dynasty shall give way to that of the Khalsa. They submit now as the ensign or the captain does to his colonel when in the field, but only because they look forward to the day as certain to come when they, too, shall command where now they obev.

Meanwhile there is no foundation for the current notion that a Sikh rebellion is imminent. The disbanded troops have been received quietly into a population enriched by the plunder and the military pay of the past four years, and by the growing prosperity caused by high prices. The native officers who would not have been content to sink to their original level find themselves masters of land free from even State demands, a dear privilege among an agricultural and land-loving race. The Ranee Chunda did attempt to weave some imbecile intrigues, but she is now gone, and the universal belief in the Punjab is that her son threw her images into the Ganges, and that she dresses like a "Mem Sahiba." Wandering faqueers still scatter false prophecies which are only the expression of hopes, and point to those which have been already fulfilled, such as Hodson's exposure of the bodies of the King's two sons and grandson in front of the Delhi Kotwallee, where the Sikh Gooroo, Tej Bahadur, was slaughtered; and the present famine. The last prophecy, whose authors now enjoy the reward of their skill in the Andamans.

Englishwomen in their houses and the Khalsa he supreme. We may postpone rumour for at least two years!

If Sikhs and Mussulmans can never amalgamate for one common end, then we may dismiss all fear of even a temporarily successful revolt. We may yet have to grapple with each separately, but we have done that before when we had less warning. If, however, we allow a native army with a powerful Sikh element again to grow we refuse to garrison our colonies with Sikh and Mussulman regiments, and thus to take hostages for the quiet of their co-religionists while we drain off the turbulence of the military classes so as to utilise it elsewhere-if our English army is to be reduced as it was before 1857 to meet so-called imperial necessities in Europe-and if we ourselves, living in the midst of an alien population, refuse to arm ourselves like our brethren at home and in the colonies, then we are unworthy of the terrible stewardship which, for the highest purposes, has been entrusted to us .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE "NIL DARPAN" SCANDAL.—The Landholders' and Commercial Association of Calcutta resolved at their last meeting that legal proceedings for the publication of the "Nil Darpan" be proceeded with as counsel may direct. An amendment by Mr. J. W. B. Money, that it be put to the vote separately as to which parties shall be prosecuted, was not agreed to. Would it not be the wiser course to let the matter drop altogether? Enough has been said and done to prevent the recurrence of such another act of folly FAMINE RELIEF .- Mr. Evans, the Secretary of the Delhi Famine Relief Committee, furnishes the Lahore Committee with a clear statement of the manner in which relief is applied in and around Delhi. Cooked food is given to the inmates of the asylums, many of whom are quite unable to cook for themselves, or have no materials to cook with. Men get five cakes weighing nearly a seer with a little dall, nursing women the same, and other women four cakes. people are "fed up" till they are able to work or to return to their villages. Ten thousand are so fed daily in Delhi, and about the same number in the district. Grain and flour are supplied to people that have the means of cooking. Money is given to persons of respectability reduced to poverty, but ashamed to be seen seeking charity. One thousand rupees per month is thus spent. The monthly allowances vary from five to fifteen rupees for each family. Money is also given to the better class of widows who come to the Delhi The fourth mode of relief is Gate Asylum. employment. In the city alone five thousand persons are at work daily. Expressions of gratitude towards the Government and the Christian community are common among the relieved.

Delhi, June 23 .- The shops under and about several mosques in the city are being let, and will bring in a handsome sum of money. The steps of the Jumma Musjid have lately been crowded by Mahomedans, as was the case in days of yore. I hope the mosque itself will not be given back; but should not be at all surprised if the present Viceroy were to crown his benevolent career by this "act of grace." How little his Excellency knows the feelings of all Mahomedans and many Hindoos towards Christians! Better that the "coming man" should see and judge for himself of the policy of restoring this hotbed of fanaticism. But there can be no doubt about it, the Mahomedan star, crescent I should say, is in the ascendant. Fancy the person called Nawab Ahmud Ali Khan, the person so intimately connected with the King of Oude's family, the man who was sent in bound from Kurnal, soon after Delhi was retaken by the British troops - fancy this man purchasing houses in all directions, and being talked of as a burra ameer! What would the brave Nicholson have said to this? Would he not have thought his eyes deceived him into the belief of guns being mounted on the roof of the Nawab's house, when he led his columns into the beleaguered city? was to the effect that in 1863 the Sikhs will keep is well that he did not live to see these days. The centre pathway in the Chandney Chowk is nearly finished, and the natives have been directed to keep to it and out of the way of carriages. The order has, to a certain extent, been observed, but it is a new thing, and when they find that they ought to keep to it, be sure that they will shun it like beef and bacon. The pillars, to mark the boundary of the military and civil lines, are not very ornamental affairs, they very much resemble "desk seals" on end, and do not give one a very elevated idea of the taste of the Executive who raised them. But, perhaps, they are more for use than ornament, in which case we will leave them alone.—Englishman.

CHITTAGONG, June 25.-The station is now well nigh empty, and in the absence of commissioner, judge, and salt agent, it may easily be imagined that public business is not proceeding with railroad speed. Great and deep is the disgust, annoyance, and inconvenience which have here been created by the late measure of the Finance Committee in suddenly suspending all drafts from the Treasury. It is not exaggerating to say that heavy loss, and even ruin, will be inflicted on many by this sudden and arbitrary measure. Persons who depended on Treasury drafts to enable them to meet mercantile engagements, pay up life insurance policies, and such such like matters, have suddenly found themselves unable to meet their engagements. Had there been a paper currency, or had the suspension of drafts been held in abeyance until such currency came into play, nothing could have been said; but, as it is, persons of all classes are, without warning, placed in a most awkward and annoying position.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has declared a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

BABOO RAMAPROSAD ROY, of the Bengal Sudder Bar, has been appointed to officiate as Legal Remembrancer; and Mr. C. J. Mackenzie as Secretary to the Calcutta Income-tax Commission.

THE RAJAH OF COOCH BEHAR.—From Rungpore we (Englishman) learn that the dispute between the Rajah of Cooch Behar and the Government, about the boundary line, remains still unsettled. The Rajah refuses to recognise the decision of the Special Commissioner deputed to settle it, and stands upon his dignity, refusing to accept the decision and then to appeal to the Government. He asserts that, as an independent ruler, he has nothing to do with accepting and appealing; that the claim of the Government is an unjust one, and the decision of the Special Commissioner in no way binding upon him. And so the matter rests for the present.

CAWNFORE, June 26 .- On the morning of the 24th a special train left this for Etawah on a trial trip. Mr. C. B. Thornhill, the commissioner of this division, came from Allahabad to accompany the train; with him were Major Hodson and Captain de Bourbell, the consulting engineer to Government, Mr. G. Sibley, chief engineer, and other officers of the East India Railway Company, and gentlemen interested in the progress of the railway. The result of the examination of the different works and stations on the line was very satisfactory, and there is no doubt that the line will be in full working order and open to the public on the 1st of July. Several of the stations are not as yet completed, but ample accommodation is provided for the carrying out of the traffic arrangements. The railway telegraph arrangements to Etawah are completed, and offices are now open at all the principal stations between that place and Patna. The telegraph line is not yet completed between Patna and Rajmahal, but I understand it will not be long delayed, so that the East India Railway telegraph will soon be working from Calcutta to Etawah and Agra, passing through all the great stations at Rajmahal, Bhagulpore, Monghyr, Patna, Buxar, Benares, Mirzapore, Allahabad, Cawnpore, &c., &c.

THE DISEANDED SEPOYS.—The difference of temper and spirit with which the native soldiers who have been reduced by the disbandment, and sent to their homes, have accepted their fate, is curious and instructive. The Sikhs have, as a general rule, taken the parting gratuity cheerfully, and gone their way, saying that, should the "Sirkar" require their services again at any future time, they would be glad to come back from their village and ploughs and fight for the Govern-ment. The Mussulmans have taken the gratuity thankfully and respectfully also, and gone to their homes, apparently not much caring either way. But the poorbeah corps of the late Bengal army, which have been disbanded, evinced profound chagrin and depression; especially, as we hear, the 73rd N.I., of which the native officers and the men were much surprised to hear of their destiny. They, like the other N.I. corps who behaved badly or equivocally in the days of our trouble, have ever since nursed the thought, begotten of the wish, that all had been forgotten and forgiven; but a just Government, quick to reward and slow to punish, has undeceived them, and we hope the lesson will tell. We believe that all those soldiers who have now been disbanded would return under our standard, and to-morrow, if wanted, especially the Sikhs, who love the profession of arms .- Englishman.

JUBBULPORE, June 27.—There is little sickness at present amongst the European troops. The men of the Queen's regiment stationed here are a remarkably well-behaved set of men. band enliven us every Friday evening, and under their new band master have improved much; the 29th Punjabees have also a very good band, and play out every Tuesday. Mr. Blackwell, the manager of the Nerbudda Coal Company, is here for the rains. I hear he has been very successful in discovering a fine vein of coal, about twelve feet from the surface. The suspension of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company's works in these parts for a year, in consequence of the death of both the contractors, will postpone dividends to the shareholders of this coal company in England longer than may be agreeable; but there is no doubt but that the investment will eventually be a most profitable one. Captain Impey, the chief engineer, with two other officers, are still out in the jungles, although it must be anything but pleasant under canvas in such heavy wet. Who, twenty years ago, would have thought of remaining out in camp after the 1st of April? Yet the thing appears quite common now, and I am certain that at least fifty European officers, railway engineers, revenue surveyors, geologists, contractors, have been out all the hot season in tents in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, and I do not see that they suffer in health from it, unless those given to "pegs."-Englishman.

Rajshahye.—A petition has been forwarded to the Government from a number of ryots, setting forth that they are utterly ruined by the manner in which their zemindars have misled them into refusing to grow indigo. These ryots declare that the zemindars promised that if they refused advances from the planter the zemindars themselves would make them advances for the cultivation of their crops; that they have not only not done this, but now demand a cess for having saved them from the clutches of the indigo The ryots have, therefore, lost the planters. support of the factories, which was their sole reliance, to enable them to get through their season; and represent themselves as suffering from the oppression of their native superiors, who, having reduced them to starvation, are now submitting them to an operation very much like an attempt at skinning flints. There will be many such petitions and much such suffering, which will make itself apparent without the re fracting medium of commissioners' reports.

Forget and Forgive.—Almost the whole of the dispossessed Punjabee, Oude and Northern rebel leaders, who have not been transported to the Andamans, are petitioning the Home Government for restoration to lands and houses. The Secretary of State has forwarded their petitions to the Governor-general, who has granted the prayer for release and restoration of their estates to nine of them, the only exception being Sarworce Sing, whose conduct during the rebellion was notorious for his bad faith and treachery to the British Government, and for whose apprehensions a reversel of Re. 5 000 was offered.

JEYPOOR.—A private letter from Jeypoor, dated 22nd June, gives a wretched account of the present state of things in the Raipootana States. The rajahs and chiefs are altogether lawless, and rule with the strong hand, after the old fashion of the days before the British rule in India, which they do not seem to recognise the existence of; getting together their robber bands in great force and attacking each other whenever they fancy themselves strong enough to make sure of success and consequent plunder. Some of them are possessed of and turn to good account their heavy guns. The agent of the Supreme Government is powerless among such lawlessness; the suttee and such inhuman rites are frequent. and no great pains taken to conceal them; and the Government mails are often plundered in their passage through those districts. Altogether, their condition strongly recals the history of the old Mahrattas; and will render a closer attention necessary some of these days .- Englishman, LUCKNOW .- From a letter lately received from Lucknow we (Englishman) gather that the inhabitants of that station have come to confusion over a church. It appears that in 1858 Government sanctioned the construction of a church in the civil lines of that station at a cost of Rs. 30,000, and estimates and plans were called for. These were sent in, and Sir R. Montgomery, the then chief commissioner, selected one prepared by Major Hutchinson, and roughly estimated at Rs. 30,000. The executive engineer, Major Watson, stated at the time that, in his opinion, a building on the proposed plan would cost at least Rs. 60,000; but as the opinion did not suit, it seems, it was not attended to. The church, which is not yet finished, has already cost Rs. 54,711, and they want 5,000 more to finish it. The Governor-general has expressed himself as considerably surprised that the original sanction for 30,000 has been treated as a mere nothing, and sees no reason why the Chief Commissioner should have neglected to carry out the orders for properly detailed plans and estimates, by which alone the expense could have been confined within the sanctioned limits. However, the committee are to have the extra Rs. 5,000, especially as two of the items the money is required for are a chowkeydar's house and lamps, things which, in the present "spiritually" dark state of Oude, are certainly absolutely essential to a church. But should any more funds be required the Governorgeneral has intimated his intention not to sanction any more grants from the public funds, so that if the Lucknow community wish to carry out their scheme, they will have to pay from their private purses for their attempt at ecclesiastical architecture.

THE Ex-King of Oude.-There has been a correspondence going on, and a reference to Government, about the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts over his ex-Majesty of Oude. The agent, Major Herbert, was required by the Civil Court of the twenty-four pergunnahs to take the deposition of his Majesty in a case before it. Major Herbert took the King's deposition accordingly, but without administering the prescribed oath or obtaining his signature to it. The deposition being returned to the agent in order to its being formally attested on oath, and signed, his Majesty declined to take the oath, claiming that he was beyond the jurisdiction of the law under which Mr. Lautour, the Sessions Judge, would enforce his deposition. The matter was accordingly referred to the Government for orders; and the decision of the Governor-general in council was, that all witnesses, whether low or great, must be examined according to the terms of the law; the ex-King not being, any more than any other person, exempted from declaring upon oath.

East Indian Railway. — The Englishman speaks of the result of a trial train which started from Howrah to Bhagulpore, on the East Indian Railway, on the 25th June. The train started from Howrah at 5.15 a.m., and reached Teenpahar junction at 11.45 a.m., accomplishing that portion of the distance in little more than six hours. Making a short stay at Teenpahar junction, the train proceeded to Maharajpore (distance 14 miles), the line the whole way skirting the base of a magnificent range of hills. Sahebgunge (10 miles) was next passed, then Searmaree, situate opposite to Carrighola ghat; then Colgong, 15 miles from Searmare. From Colgong to Ghoga station the line traverses steep embankments, which have been constructed to prevent its being subject to the inundations of the Ganges, which here overflows the country to a considerable extent. From Ghoga to Bhaugulpore the line is constructed in a similar manner. The whole distance from Howrah to Bhaugulpore, 264 miles, was accomplished in little more than nine hours. This is a great triumph to the progress of the railway in India, and we hope soon to hear that the entire line has been opened to the public.

PROVISIONAL CAVALRY DEPOT .- The English man states that it is the intention of Government to establish at Barrackpore what is to be called a provisional cavalry depot, for the reception of the cavalry recruits coming out from England for the new dragoon regiments, late of the company's service; and an officer has arrived at the Presidency from up-country to take the command. Government has acted unwisely in selling off all its river steamers and troop-boats, by which soldiers could be sent up-country in large numbers during the rainy season, when the weather on the river is very cool and agreeable, instead of making depots of men newly arrived in India at Dum-Dum, Barrackpore, and Chinsurah. There are plenty of writers upon military hygeine in India, but very few administrators in that line.

PORT BLAIR.—A convict who was lately married escaped with his wife at night from Viper Island. Both were, in all probability, killed by the aborigines, as the clothing the woman had in wear, and some of the provisions they took with them, were found a week later in possession of the natives. Jealousy on the part of the male is said to have been the cause of the desertion. The conduct of the whole of the females is good. The women have been employed grinding wheat and making baskets. As it is necessary to employ them under cover, there is scarcely any other employment the superintendent can give them. The paucity of marriages has arisen mainly from the fact of the superintendent having been compelled to discourage them, pending the orders of Government as to marriage of term convicts with females sentenced to imprisonment for life, and also the release of the political offenders now in course. It was fortunate that our superintendent did so, as many aspirants for matrimony have been released, or are term convicts. The number of applicants for wives was above sixty. One female, who arrived from Allipore, died on March last of scurvy and dysentery. In this, the only case of death that has yet occurred, it is clear the female must have been in bad health on arrival. The hospital for the naval brigade is to be abolished, as there are at present only one or two patients in the hospital. Our superintendent has suggested to the commissariat officers to dispense with the services of the present establishment .- Englishman.

A MERITED SENTENCE.—Gunner Langford, who was recently tried by court martial at Meerut for writing letters to the Mofussilite newspaper reflecting on the condition and discipline of the Indian army, has been found guilty of the charges which were brought against him, and sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for twelve calendar months.

BRIGADIER GENERAL SHOWERS, C. B., Commanding the presidency division, left Calcutta by steam on Saturday morning, June 29th, to inspect the troops at Berhampore. Shortly after his return to the Presidency, about the middle of July, he will start on his eastern tour of inspection, including Dacca, and all the Assam military stations as high as Debroghur. There will still remain several military stations within the presidency division to be inspected, but their turn will come in the cold weather.

MR. J. H. RIVET CARNAC, C. S., has been ap pointed temporarily to officiate as member and secretary to the Board of Commissioners under Act 32 of 1860, for the Presidency town of Calcutta.

-The Angami Nagas lately attacked Nowgong .the village of Deking Goojah and killed a man, wounded several, and a child was carried away captive. The British authorities have offered a reward for the release of the captive, and the agent has suggested to Government the expediency of placing the Angami Nagas' country under interdict from all communication with British territory. This low country is full of water, and scarcely a single day passes without some showers of rain.

THE PUNJAB.—The steamer Assyria has arrived at Mittankote, having completed the actual survey of the Upper Indus. Lieutenant Foster, her commander, has been relieved by Lieutenant Whish. The Supreme Government has advised the Maharajah of Puttiala to prohibit his police from passing prisoners over the frontier into our territory. The Sccretary of State for India has sanctioned the establishment of a Leper Asylum at Dhurmsala.

SONTHAL DISTRICT.—We learn from the Sonthal district that, owing to the constant recurrence of disturbances among the tribes, the Government have ordered the removal of the head quarters of the districts of the Sonthal Pergunnahs to Doomku. It is evident that, besides the disturbances arising out of their starvation and distress, the sources of disaffection are by no means eradicated. The pecple have lately held their festival, or dushara, which, in fact, is their worship of the snake; and, as is usual, many have lost their lives from snake-bites during its celebration.

SIKKIM, June 23.—We are making great strides in progression, social and political, in this out-of-the-way corner of the world. One good sign of the times is the independent line of action taken by the new Rajah, under the advice of Cheeboo Lama, the inveterate enemy of the old Dewan. This has greatly disgusted the old Rajah, but of that the young one takes no heed. He is working very hard-for a Rajah-at the English tongue, and aspires to a knowledge of English literature; the language he is working at with the declared intention of visiting the Viceroy before his departure from India. He is hardly sufficiently up in the language to hit off so well as he might have done a name for the place where the Honourable A. Eden pitched his tent, and which he has called in the Envoy's honour, Eden Haut—he should have called it "Paradise Forsaken." What is more important s, that Mr. Steven, an Eurasian, has opened a shop here.

Mr. Joseph Goodeve was sworn in on the 24th June, and took his seat as Registrar and Accountant General of the Supreme Court, vice Mr. Walter Morgan, proceeded to Europe on sick

THE REVEREND JAMES LONG has published a long letter in the Friend of India, in which he gives a full explanation of all the circumstances attending the translation of the Nil Darpan, and confesses that the whole proceeded from an error of judgment.

Exports (Calcutta, July 8).—We are again unable to announce those changes in this market which the expected, but still absent, enlarged supplies of produce from the interior it was thought would ere this have brought about. We believe that questions are originated as to how far these supplies will fulfil the representations of them; it is even presumed the dealers may so feed the market as to maintain those high prices which foed and unsound transactions for months past have established, through the large profits made by the dealers. A very short time will set this question at rest. The heavy rains have no doubt retarded the loading and despatching of the boats in their usual manner. Meanwhile prices here have been steadily maintained under fair and signity increased purchases for export. The business done would undoubtedly have been larger but for the obstacles to it. Salt-petre at lower, and Sugar and Jute have been freely taken at late prices. Hides also have met sale freely at old rates. Raw Silk, Piece Goods, Castor Oil, and Saffower have been neglected. In Lac Dys, Skellac, and Linseed more doing.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, July 3).—The somewhat quiet feeling during the early part of the fortnight has given place to more animation, the only check to which is the continued depressing influence exercised by money disturbances, arising from opium prospects and speculations amongst the busaar dealers. The Mirzapore advices are encouraging; the rivers are open, stocks in the North-West light, and parcels on the way not a tithe of expected requirements; the season of full demand is on; accounts of the prospects of agriculture are good—in fact, every feature of the market is in favour of a brisk, and we hope steady, trade. At present the improvement is confined to Grey Goods, but with the inquiries made by dealers and the firmness of importers, it is expected to be general shortly for all those fabrics most in request at this season. Stocks on the spot are heavy, and imports have augmented, but we do not think the quantities warehoused will be found excessive when the full tide of demand fairly makes. Bleached Goods and also Printed Collons do not at present evidence an improvement, but this is looked for. Mule Twist has maintained its late advantage. The Salt and Coal trades continue dull and unsatisfactory. Beer very favourable, and in strong contrast to the depression of last year induced by the deluge thrown on the market.

NEILGHERRY JAIL.-The Neilgherry Star. weekly paper, has risen out of the ashes of its predecessor, the Chronicle. The new paper says the smaller prison for European convicts is nearly ready. It is thus described:-" The prison is constructed for thirty-six convicts, each having a separate cell opening into a spacious and lofty corridor, and heated, we believe, by air warmed in contact with hot-water pipes. The cells are, with some modifications, on the plan of those in the modern English prisons. The front of the building consists of comfortable quarters for the jailor, an entrance-hall, office, guard-room, sur-gery, store-room and kitchen. The jailor's servants and offices are placed in a detached building. The cost of the whole will be about half a lac of rupees which is about the cost of a similar prison with equal accommodation in England." A site for the large European Penitentiary, which was promised to be finished before the mutiny, has at last been selected. Till that is ready, there will be no sufficient accommodation for European convicts.

THE MADRAS VOLUNTEERS, a body numbering some 600 men, are in difficulties. They did not distinguish themselves at the review on 24th May, and some of the local press made merry with their mistakes. Colonel Silver, their most efficient commandant, resigned his office, believing it to be the desire of the corps that he should do so. The officers have held a meeting, have denounced the statements in the papers as "wholly without foundation in fact," and have earnestly requested Colonel Silver to withdraw his resignation.

MADRAS CONSTABULARY .- The Madras Times considers the new constabulary of the presidency a signal failure, and by no means an improvement on their predecessors. The new force is criminal and venal, and their European officers are so badly treated by the superintendent, Mr. Robinson, that they are resigning their appointments in large numbers. Allowing that the picture is over-drawn, we expect that for the next five years there will be similar complaints all over India. A new system is not introduced in a day, and always rouses the supporters of the old plan and The constabulary all conservatives against it. consists largely of the men of the old force, the officers are new to their duties, and it will take years till thorough drill and discipline begin to tell, and a new race of policemen arise. - Friend of India.

RANGOON.-The Commissioner, Colonel Phayre, recently summoned the townspeople to meet him, to consider the new scheme for a municipality. The latter objected to be saddled with sundry amounts with which the Government proposed to debit the municipal funds on account of certain public works which they, the townspeople, considered unnecessary, though constructed at a great expence. The Commissioner in reply to these objections said that all the money which had been expended in Rangoon, had been spent by honourable men, and he believed that the full value of the money so spent had been received.

THE INAM COMMISSION.—From Mr. Taylor's Progress Report for the month of May last, we extract the following:—"The number of cases decided by the deputy collectors during the month, or from the 28th of April to the 1st of June, a period of five weeks, was 17,114, which raises the total number of cases decided, from the commencement of the undertaking to the end of May, to 1,65,242. Besides these, 6,388 cases of village service Inams were recorded during the month, making a total to the end of May of 41,093. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of May was 1,29,682, of which 18,824 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character, 71,560 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars, 36,656 were personal grants, enfranchised compulsorily, and 2,642 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds which had reached the hands of the Inamdars up to the end of last month, was 64,651. The total amount of quit rent payable to Government in addition to the former Jodi is Rupees 218,851. The amount paid in redemption of the quit-rent is Rupees 8.955.8.0. The combined quit-rent annually payable to Government for the future, upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders, amounts to Rupees 353,578. Of the number of personal grants confirmed during the month under report, 162 were cases of Jangikattubadi and Kavaligar Inams, which being added to the number of this class of Inams disposed of up to last month, raises the total number of police Inams enfranchised to 1,500, assessed at Rupees 43,553, and charged with a future quit-rent of Rupees 24,369.

NAGPORE .- A Sebundy corps is about to be raised for service in the Godavery districts. The authorities are just now at loggerheads about the disposal of the arms collected from the people in 1857; one party want to build a church out of the proceeds, and the other side say this will create a bad feeling among the natives, and that the European made arms should be kept, the rest sold, and the proceeds devoted to local improve-ments. The Hinging Haut, which was burnt down some time since, is to be rebuilt at the expense of Government, and be rented out to the HYDERABAD .- June 22 .- After all, Salar Jung has defeated all his enemies, and is now restored to his full powers, and his position is stronger than before. The Robillas and Arabs are again exceedingly troublesome in the assigned districts. The Bombay Government proposed some time since to stop the transit of Arabs through Bombay to the interior; and especially with reference to the Nizam's dominions, in which the Arabs are employed in great numbers; by prohibiting the landing of Arabs and their passage through British territory. The Government of India refused to sanction this proposal, doubting the necessity for any such legislative enactment more stringent in its provisions than the one now in existence. The Bombay Government are now again, and with great reason, urging the necessity of further legislation in this direction.

SILLAR .- The Bombay Saturday Review complains that Mr. Sillar, deputed at the request of the local Government by the Chamber of Commerce to visit the cotton districts of the Presidency, after waiting in vain for the appointment of an engineer officer as his colleague, set off alone on his travels. But when he reached the cotton districts, he found that no arrangements had been made to supply him with information, that collectors and engineers had no intention whatever of escorting him about the country, and that, in short, he had been sent on a wild goose chase. To save his own reputation he at once returned to Bomhay.

THE COTTON CROP OF SIND for 1860-1 is 217,570 maunds of raw, and 51,996 maunds of clean cotton. In consequence of the scarcity of rain, only 91,599 beegahs were under cultivation, against 96,033 the previous year. The Kurrachee European firms have begun this season to load cotton direct for England.

AMENITIES OF THE NATIVE BENCH .stated by the Bombay papers that the third judge of the Small Cause Court at Bombay said to a solicitor in open court: "You are telling a lie Mr. Khunderao, and I will punish you for that." The acting Chief Judge Dr. Reid, observed that "he did not think such language becoming a judge, and very improper when used to gentlemen practising in this Court." The third judge is a Parsee, named Manockjee Cursetjee, who in former years used to scribble doggerel verses, and was called by his friends "the Byron of the East" July 4. THE INDIAN FLAX COMPANY (Limited), which was established a year ago for the purpose of encouraging the culture of flax in the Punjab, has begun operations at Sealkote. The Sindian had seen a specimen of linen made from flax grown by the company, which, though somewhat coarse, was stout and serviceable. Two Europeans are now at Sealkote, with the object of instructing the natives in the growth of the flax and of making advances to the peasantry on the security of their land or crops.

Bombay Newspapers.—Another rose has fallen from the chaplet of Bombay. The Telegraph and Courier is no more. Its last number appeared on Saturday last. The Times of India has swallowed it up, and for the future it is to be "amalgamated" with that journal. This will leave but two dailies in Bombay, the Times and Gazette. Mr. Craig, who conducted the now defunct journal, proceeds to Melbourne as correspondent of the Times. It cannot be denied but that the Times is under most energetic management, and spares no expense in its endeavours to meet the public wants.—Poona Observer, July 2.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, June 28.—The London mail of May 10 arrived here on the 23rd inst. By this mail we learn the appalling news from America.

During the past fortnight nothing has occurred to ruffle the perfect smoothness of cur relations with China and Japan. It is remarkable that we should hear of no steps, either successful or otherwise, having been taken to apprehend the murderers of the late Mr. Heusken, Secretary to the American Legation; with the return of Mr. Alcook this matter seems, contrary to the just expectations of many, to have been entirely hushed up.

The intelligence from Pekin is confined to the announcement that a very good understanding prevails between the Chinese representative and those of foreign nations. It is to be hoped that Mr. Bruce will form such relations with the Chinese authorities as shall not be affected by the withdrawal of troops from Tien-tsin when that event takes place; the high ability required for establishing such a permanent basis of friendship is not to be overlooked, and we can only earnestly hope that Mr. Bruce will be found equal to his very eminent and difficult position.

From New-Chwang, the newly-opened port in Manchuria, accounts have been received, describing it as surrounded by a low, flat, swampy country, without a blade of grass, where cattle are difficult to be procured, and fruit scarce. In other respects the prospects of this port are not encouraging.

From Tien-tsin we learn that the Prussian Consul has been carrying on some negotiations with Tsunghow. We believe that Baron Eulenberg wanted to go to Pekin, but could not arrange matters with the official at Tien-tsin: he should have made his application at head-quarters. The trade in native junks at this port is said to have been quite paralysed by the civil commotions in the Southern provinces, and particularly by the fall of Socohow. The prospects of a brisk foreign trade springing up here are still as lively as ever. Mr. Mongan, the Acting-Consul, has established Custom House Regulations.

By the last accounts from Cheefoo everything was dull, house-rent high, and the people very extortionate, which simply means as anxious to get large profits as we are ourselves whenever we can command the market. The climate is reported to be pleasant, 70 degrees being the maximum temperature.

The Yang-tsze River all above Nankin has risen so considerably that all the low grounds around Hankow seemed to be under water, and the inhabitants of the city were beginning to get alarmed for their own safety; the current of the river had increased in force, and good anchorage for ships was becoming difficult to obtain. There was some activity being shown in native trade, but no demand existed for foreign imports. The rebels still persevere in desultory efforts to capture Chinkiang.

The principal news from Shanghai relates to the breaking up of what was termed the "Chinese Foreign Legion," a force composed of Europeans whose love of a vagabond life or distaste for the restrictions of discipline had prompted their desertion from the army, the navy, and the merchant service of the countries they belonged to. The Imperialists increased the number of these men by a bribe of 33 dols. per month and rations, besides what they might plunder from the conquered Apart, however, from the offence of desertion, they violated an ordinance established six years ago in anticipation of such a possibility as has actually taken place. The neutrality Ordinance of 1855 forbids our subjects to serve in either of the armies who are carrying on the domestic war in China. This legion was brought to its end through a daring but ill-managed exploit of recent occurrence. On the 11th of May last this band, who by various causes were reduced to seventy, made a night attack upon Tsing-poo, in which, owing to the failure of great assistance promised by their Chinese brethren in arms, they were completely worsted. One hundred dollars each was to have rewarded their success, but after fighting one hour and forty minutes their attempt became hopeless. At dawn, twenty-three of the European assailants were hors de combat, along with five Chinamen. The following, from the North China Herald, describes matters after the repulse:-

"They buried three of the dead, viz., Boyer (Acteon), Shaw and Foley (merchantmen), the only funeral service being a few rounds of musketry and a handful of clay cast by each upon the grave of their dead comrades. The wounded were sent to Soon Kong. All were more or less hurt—a drummer (Acteon), Street (R.A.), Darby, Peters, and Brown, dangerously. They saw nothing of the twenty gun-boats and 9,000 men who were to have co-operated with them until they met them on their return about three miles from the city. After this affair they were directed by their captain not to land at Shanghai, but to proceed to Woosung, where vessels would be provided for them as quarters, and to return in six weeks, during which time their pay should continue.

"Most of them, however, fell into the hands of the parties in search of them, and have been handed over to their Consuls, of whom the British alone has brought any of them to trial.

"The first time an expedition was sent up the river to try and capture these men a courier had been despatched to warn them of the approach of a gun-boat, when they were got into heavy marching order and marched off to a kind of hiding-place within the yamuns of some of the city authorities, under the assurance from Ward that they should never be captured by the British if China was large enough to hold them, for he would march them away over the hills first.

"The road to their hiding-place led through many obscure and intricate passages, and from their lair they actually witnessed the interview between the searching party and the blue button mandarin, who coolly told them that no foreigners had been in the city.

"The force is now disbanded. Some have probably suffered capital punishment at the hands of the Chinese, some have fallen in action, some are expiating their offences against our laws in common jails, and some few have escaped, it is to be hoped, with sufficient examples before them never to again engage in such an illegitimate mode of earning a livelihood as enrolling themselves in such disreputable ranks as those of a 'Chinese Foreign Legion."

Piracy and murder have been common of late in the neighbourhood of Shanghai, and serious annoyance has been felt from the numerous attacks which have been made upon individuals travelling into the country for the purchase of silk—one purchaser was robbed of four thousand dollars, and others have suffered in a smaller degree. A gunboat has been ordered to proceed up the river and cruize in certain localities which were becoming notorious for daring boat piracies. This state of matters is attributed to the rebellion, and the proximity of both armies to Shanghai; stragglers and deserters are continually falling away from the ranks they belong to, and engaging in the most lawless pursuits.

It may be stated that the four gentlemen who formed the overland party from Canton to Hankow, returning by way of Shanghai, paid a visit to Nankin. They found the Rev. Mr. Roberts in his dwelling there, in excellent health and full Chinese costume. The church which the Teen Wang was said to be going to build for him has not been begun yet, but the chief permits him to address his audiences in the open air, which he says he is accordingly in the habit of doing.

The only item of news from Ningpo is that the Foreign Customs Collectorate gives utter dissatisfaction to the Chinese merchants, many of whom having vessels which fly the British flag come under its regulations. They are escaping the delay and trouble, by removing their trade into native bottoms. Heavy floods have been reported in the vicinity of Hangchow, and many dead bodies, along with much debris, have been floated down the river past Ningpo.

In anticipation of our removing the troops from Canton about October the native authorities there are taking measures for defending the city on their own account, and have been lately purchasing cannon and ammunition here and at Macao.

In local matters we go on as usual. A site has at last been obtained for the Sailors' Home; it is situated near West Point, being distant about a mile and a half from the Post-office. It is not the best that could be proposed, but it is a good site, and the committee after a great deal of inquiry and pains have determined to build on it as the best to be had. The Governor has granted the site at a nominal rent. The Chamber of Commerce is now quite established, and shows every sign of coming prosperity.

In consequence of the disturbance which took place in the colony a couple of months ago between the Toong-koon and Nam-hoi people, and which originated in the gambling houses, the respectable shopkeepers of the colony petitioned the Governor to adopt some more active measures for the suppression of those dens of iniquity than had lately been attempted, offering to co operate and render assistance themselves in any measures his Excellency might think fit to adopt. Notwithstanding the powers vested in the police, the prosecution of a gaming-house keeper was a rare occurrence, whilst the existence of a vast number of these places, where persons resorted daily and nightly for the purposes of gaming, was notorious, and seemed to be known to everybody else but the police. It was more than suspected that members of this body were extensively bribed to connive at the existence of the evil. Indeed, upon no other ground could this supineness be accounted for. Greatly to the credit of his Excellency, he at once threw off all red-tapeism, and directed Mr. Jarman, the Acting-Superintendent, to communicate with the petitioners, and with their aid to do what appeared to him best calculated to secure the objects in view, and, in particular, to discover, if possible, if the police were implicated—to find out who the guilty officers were, and bring them to trial. The Chinese shopkeepers gave ready and willing aid-some welldevised plans were laid, which were completely successful, the results of which have been the subjects of investigation at the Police Court for the last fortnight, and are still unfinished. They shew a deep complicity on the part of some members of the force with the keepers of the gaminghouses. Fourteen persons have been committed to take their trial at the next sessions, one of these being no less a person than the Governor's comprador; other cases are under investigation -one detective, Akum, has hanged himself; another (the most active man in the Chinese force) Akun, has made himself scarce; the head European Inspector has been "wanted" for some days, but is not forthcoming; one Chinese interpreter of the Police Court had urgent business which necessitated his going home; another suddenly vacated his appointment and left the

As soon as the police branch of the question has been finished, the shopkeepers will co-operate with the police in suppression of the gaminghouses themselves, and it is to be hoped that the same success will attend their exertions then as they have met with in the more difficult one of establishing the corruption of the police. The shopkeepers have engaged the valuable assistance of Mr. Pollard in the prosecution of the offenders, and they have also engaged the services of Mr. Caldwell to communicate their wishes to Mr. Pollard. and to check the interpretation at the police court; the latter service was certainly much needed, two of the Government interpreters having absconded since the fact of the corruption of the police has been disclosed in the evidence .- Overland China Mail.

JAVA, June 29 .- The intelligence from Banjermassing is to the effect that the column under Major Schuak, sent out against Antasarie, had reached the post at Mengkatim after forcing its way through a very large body of rebels, with whom it had a series of engagements for five days. The labouring classes in the residency of Tagal are very averse to the system of forced labour and small wages prevailing there, and some 600 of them complained, in a body, to the resident. The only answer vouchsafed was a flogging to the spokesmen. The continued rains-a very unusual thing during the east monsoon-have been very disadvantageous to the sugar cultivators, causing the cane remaining on the fields to rot, and preventing the drying of the cane trash, which is extensively burned in the furnaces The state of the rice crop in Java is not unfavourable, except in Grobogan, where the crop has almost entirely failed. In Bagelan a very sad condition of things prevails, for the second crops planted after the inundations have been ruined or damaged by new floods. A famine in that quarter would have been inevitable but for the energetic measures adopted by the resident, on his own responsibility, to avert it. It is hoped that what he has done will prevent any great suffering.

SIAM .- His Majesty the First King of Siam has communicated to the Siamese Consul at Singapore that a fleet of Siamese steamers will leave Bangkok on the 10th of July, and visit the different dependencies of the kingdom in the Gulf of Siam, coming on to Singapore, from whence it will proceed to Kedah and the Siamese possessions to the north of Pinang. His Ma-jesty's second son Prince Krom Mun Visuunarth Nibhadhoon, his fifth son (a boy of six years of age), and his lordship Chauphya Sri Suri Wongs Samuh Phra Kralahome, will accompany the expedition. The fleet may be expected at Singapore about the end of the month.

COTTON CULTIVATION AT PINANG .rican gentleman, from the Southern States, has come to Pinang to see if land can be found in Province Wellesley available for cotton cultivation. The Governor has desired that every aid and facility may be afforded him by the local authorities. It has been supposed that the climate is too rainy for cotton, the succession of tracts of wet and dry weather causing the pods to open irregularly and exposing them to mildew. The same objection, however, was made to coffee cultivation in the Straits, yet we find that in Ceylon the ripening of the berries is spread over as long a period as it is here, where the true spoiler of the harvest is the civet, not the rain.

From officiating civil paymaster, No. 5, dated

May 6, 1861.

Observations.—On reviewing this case, H.E. the Governor gen. in Council observes that the facts appear to have been overlooked or misunderstood both in this department and by the officers under the Financial Department. The real state of the case is as follows

2. When Major Chesney held the post of officiating principal of the Civil Engineering College, he was appointed to the substantive post of controller and auditor (now controller and examiner) of Public Works Accounts in Bengal, in succession to Captain Dickens, and from Jan. 26 to Dec. 21, 1860, he per-

Dickens, and from Jan. 26 to Dec. 21, 1860, he performed the duties of both offices.

3. Major Chesney drew a staff salary of 650 rupees a month as officiating principal, and, on being appointed to the substantive charge of the Bengal Account Office, he was told he was entitled, for the present, to draw such portion of his predecessor's (in the account office) staff salary in addition to his salary as officiating principal as the civil auditor might consider admissible under the circumstances. stances stances.

4. The civil auditor appears to have understood that Major Chesney was appointed to act as controller and auditor, and that his staff appointment was that of principal of the Civil Engineering College, and he suggested that he should "draw the pay of his staff appointment in full, and, in addition thereto, a moiety of the staff salary of Captain Dickens as "officer in charge of the Central Office of Accounts," to the extent of 150 rupees per mensem. This suggestion was approved in the Financial Department, and was passed on through this office to show that it is so.

This suggestion was approved in the Financial Department, and was passed on through this office to the Bengal Government.

5. Major Chesney appealed against this decision, referring to Financial Resolution of March 16, 1860, which rules that an "officer" holding a permanent appointment, who is called upon to perform the duties of another or second office (not subordinate to his own), shall receive a moiety of the salary of the appointment in which he is officiating, in addition to the full salary of his own appointment, provided that no extra expense be entailed on Government. It was declared, however, in the Financial Department, that this resolution is only applicable to uncovenanted servants. This is perhaps the case, though there is nothing in the resolution itself to show that it is so.

6. When a further appeal from Major Chesney was forwarded to the Government of India in this departtorwarded to the Government of India in this department, the case was referred to the Controller of Military Finance for his view of it. This officer appears to have understood that Major Chesney held two officiating appointments, but stated, notwithstanding, that a military officer similarly situated would, under the military rules, have been allowed the full staff pay of his own appointment, and a moiety of the staff pay of the absentee, under Section XXXII., paragraph 19, page 329, of the Pay Code.* Code.

7. The letter from this department, No. 1,381, dated April 27, 1861, to the Government of Bengal, issued after the receipt of the above opinion, claiming for Major Chesney full salary as principal, and half salary of controller and examiner, under financial resolution of March 16, 1860, appears to have been written under a double error—viz., that the been written under a double error—viz., that the resolution is applicable to other than uncovenanted servants, and that the principalship was Major Chesney's substantive appointment.

8. Mr. Sandemann's reply to it corrects one of the errors in stating that the resolution of March 16, 1860, is not applicable to covenanted servants, and therefore he maintains that Major Chesney's claim to the additional allowance, while "acting" as controller and examiner, is inadmissible under the ruling of the Governmer of India in the Financial Department, dated Juy 19, 1860. It is not known in the department was ruling is referred to here.

* When staff officers are directed to officiate in other than When staff officers are directed to officiate in other than their permanent appointments, and perform the duties of both situations, they will be permitted to draw the authorised salaries and office allowances annexed to their permanent appointments, in addition to a mosety of the salary of the situation they may be selected temporarily to fill, together with the office allowances attached, with exception to horse allowance and house rent (or any corresponding allowance), which are admissible in one capacity only.

9. But on the general merits of the present case, as it really stands, the Governor-General in Council observes the there appears to be a distinct rule in such cases applicable to military appointments, and an equaly distinct and identical rule applicable to uncovalanted civil appointments, and that there surely ought to be some rule or principle applicable to will appointments held by military officers.

10. It is true that it is perhaps not possible that, a such a case, the duties of both offices can be perfectly performed, but this is just as applicable to feetly performed, but this is just as applicable to the incumbents of military or uncovenanted appoint ments; and the union must certainly, in the case of a conscientious officer entail very severe work.

Ordered, that the correspondence now read, and the above explanations and remarks, be forwarded to the Financial Department, with a request that the point may be re-considered.

Salary and Allowances of Officers in Civil Employ.

Financial Dept., Fort William, June 25 .- With re the foregoing extract, and to the circumstance that the allowances of military officers in civil employ are now generally regulated, not in accordance with the civil rules as they used to be, but in accordance with the military rules, the Governor-General in with the military rules, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to resolve that, in modification of the orders passed in this department on March 8, 1860, No. 1,748, it be ruled for the future that a amilitary officer in civil employ, holding a permanent appointment, who is called upon to perform the duties of another or second office, shall be allowed to receive a moiety of the salary of the appointment in which he is officiating, in addition to the full salary of his own appointment, provided that no extra expense be entailed on Government.—By order,

C. Hugh Lushington, Secy. to the Govt. of India.

The Establishment of Heavy Batteries.

Military Dep., Fort William, June 28.—No. 568.— The establishment for each of the heavy batteries authorised for the Bengal presidency, will be as fol-

The battery with its stores, establishments, draft equipments, and cattle will in like manner as with light field batteries, be under the officer commanding who will be responsible for its complete condition for immediate service.

No contract for contingent allowance for the guns, carriages, carts, saddlery or harness, will be issued for these batteries; but all repairs will be effected in accordance with the Govt. G.O., No. 1,192, of Aug. 13, 1858.

The following allowances are sanctioned:

To the comdg. officer.—Command allowance Rs. 250 per mensem.

To each officer attached to the battery.—Horse allowance as in light field batteries.

On occasion of change of quarters, the batteries will move complete in every respect, unless otherwise ordered. All mahouts, elephant coolies, and drivers will be enlisted as fighting men, and placed on the same footing as syce drivers of light field batteries.

H.E. the C. in C. is requested to issue the necessary subsidary orders for completing the organisation of these batteries:— DETAIL OF ORGANISATION OF HEAVY BATTERIES

Civil Annuity Fund.

Fort St. George, July 9.—The following despatch from the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India, is published for general information:—

India-office, London, June 7, 1861.

Financial, No. 45.

Sir,—I have considered in Council the Memorial signed by eighty-six members of your covenanted civil service, which was forwarded with your financial letter, dated Feb. 24, 1860, No. 2, and the further Memorial from a large number of the members of the same service, transmitted with your letter dated May 8, 1860, No. 2

May 8, 1860, No. 9.

2. In the former of those Memorials it is represented that the Civil Service Annuity Fund has failed to answer the purposes for which it was founded, and the Memorialists request that the fundamental is the property of the control of the co nounded, and the Memorialists request that the fund may be abolished, and that pensions, according to length of service, may be granted in lieu thereof.

3. You agree with the Memorialists as to the disadvantageous working of the Annuity Fund, and its failure to accomplish the objects for which it was established, and although you do not support the prayer of the Memorialists to the full extent, you recommend that, as regards the present members of the Civil Service, the subscriptions standing to their credit in the accounts of the Fund should be returned to them, and that to those who might be compelled to retire by certified ill health pensions should be granted according to the following scale:—

After 10 years' actual service, £150 per annum.

" 10 20 250 400 and that after twenty-five years' actual service a covenanted civil servant be allowed to retire on a pension of £600 per annum, irrespective of all conditions.

4. The Memorial, signed by sixty members of your civil service, and transmitted with your letter No. 9, of 1860, deprecates the requirements of a service of twenty-five years in order to qualify for the proposed pension of £600, and prays that twenty-two proposed pension of £500, and prays that twenty-two years' actual service may be admitted as a qualification for that pension, or that a pension of £500 be granted after twenty-two years' residence, the higher pension of £600 being obtainable after twenty-five years' service.

5. The prayer of this Memorial is not supported by your Govt.; and with reference to your former re-commendation, you do not consider that the pro-posed rules should be made compulsory, but that all civil servants now on the establishment should be allowed the option either of accepting the new rules or of adhering to those now in force.

6. On the establishment of the civil service and nuity fund, in the year 1825, it was contemplated that the grant of four annuities annually from the Madras fund would enable subscribers, eligible by twenty-five years' service, including twenty-two years' residence in India, to obtain annuities on their retirement.

7. It is represented by the Memorialists that there were, at the date of their Memorial, forty-three servants on the Madras establishment who had served vants on the Madras establishment who had served the time necessary to entitle them to an annuity, of whom ten had served thirty years in India, eight had served twenty-eight years, and twenty-five upwards of twenty-five years, and that one civil servaut, hav-ing served the full time, had resigned the service, and was waiting his turn for the annuity in England; that there were, consequently, forty-four gen-tlemen qualified for the annuities; and that at the rate of four annually provided by the fund, eleven years must elapse "before the whole of those now entitled by length of service to retire can obtain any retiring pension."

8. I do not consider that the abolition of the Civil Service Annuity Fund would be an advantage either to the servants or to the State, and I must, therefore, decline to comply with the prayer of those Memorials.

9. At the same time I admit that the circumstance reported by the memorialists call for some remedy and I consider that the most suitable mode of meetand I consider that the most suitable mode of meeting the present excess in the number of claimants of annuities will be to allow to civil servants who have completed the prescribed period of twenty-five years' service, and twenty-two years' residence, the option of retiring immediately on £500 per annum, that amount being the portion of the annuity granted by the Government, they subsequently receiving in turn the full amount of annuity to which their subscription may entitle them.

the man amount of annuty to which their subscription may entitle them.

10. I accordingly authorise your publishing a notification to that effect.—I have, &c., C. Wood.

The groups have been formed with reference to the established number of lieut. cols. of infantry in the several presidencies, as they stand for succession to col's. allowance

Any number of lieut. cols. in excess of that establishment in consequence of the promotion of lieut. cols. to be maj. gens., will receive the pension of the last group.

MAJORS

MAJORS.

The regimental majors of cavalry and infantry of each presidency will be thrown together into one list, according to regimental seniority, and will be divided into four groups as nearly equal as possible. It is to be clearly understood that the annuity granted to each officer will be that due to his position in the nominal rolls above specified; and that no change whatever in that position, or in the annuity assigned to him, will be admitted as a consequence of any casualty that may occur, or become known at the Adjutant general's office after the 1st

Anown at the Adjutant general's office after the 1st October, 1861.

All retirements under this scheme will date from the 31st December next, and the promotions arising therefrom will take effect from the 1st January, 1862. The promotions will be carried out on the following principle: the names (printed in italies) of such of the lieut. colonels as retire under the conditions of the lieut. such of the lieut. colonels as retire under the conditions now offered, will remain on the list for the purpose of regulating the succession to colonel and to colonel's allowance: thus, should the senior regimental lieut. colonel at either presidency retire on the annuity now to be offered, his name will remain on the list until his death, or until a casualty shall occur among the regimental colonels, in either of which cases his name will be removed, no promotion being made in his room. On another casualty occurring among the regimental colonels, should the name then at the head of the list of lieut. colonels be that of an officer who has not accepted the annuity, he will succeed, as usual, to the color nel's allowance, and promotions will be made in succession.

The promotion in succession to the lieut. colonels who retire under this scheme will be made in the proportion of one to every two of such attements; on the other hand, every vacant created among the majors will be followed by promotion in the usual course.

Should the number of regimental field officers retiring on case terms fall short of 300 in the three presidencies, the Government of India will be authorised to offer annuities of £120 per annum, in usual course. addition to the pensions to which they may be entitled, to so many of the regimental captains of the titted to so many or the regiments captains of the three presidencies as may suffice to make up that number, the offer to them to be made in succession, according to length of service, reckoning from date of first commission, and to be confined to those of, or above, twenty-five years' service.

The regimental lieut. cols. and majors of the or above, twenty-nve years service.

The regimental lieut. cols. and majors of the cavalry and infantry who have elected for service with the new line regiments, or in the staff corps, will have the option of retiring upon the terms now offered. It is to be distinctly understood that this is offered. It is to be distinctly understood that this a final arrangement, and that no further proposals connected with schemes for the retirement of officers of the Indian service will be entertained.

Officers of the Indian armies on furlough in this country desirous of retiring from the service on the terms now offered should address their applications to the Secy. to Govt., in the military department of the presidency to which they belong.

NOTICE.

India-office, August 12, 1861.—In consequence of some misapprehensions being understood to exist as to the interpretation of the 98th para. of the G.O. of the Gov. gen. of India, dated 10th April last, quoted below, it is notified for general information that, upon a reconsideration of the order, and of the instructions upon which it was based, her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council has pointed out to the Govt. of India that all officers whom that Govt. may not consider fit for employment are to be dealt with under clause 7 of the staff corps warrant, but that another rule must be laid down and followed in the case of officers who are perfectly fit for employment, but who, from circumstances of one kind or another, may be out of employment; for example, those who, in consequence of having overstayed the prescribed limit of absence, with retention of appointment, may find themselves, on their return stayed the prescribed limit of absence, with retention of appointment, may find themselves, on their return to India, out of employment.

Such officers, on their return to India, will be placed on the rate of pay specified for their respective ranks in the staff warrant, for officers while required to remain in India, and they will retain this rate of pay for a year, before the expiration of which period it is expected an opportunity will have arisen for placing them in some suitable appointment. Should no opportunity occur within the year of placing a perfectly qualified officer, returning from furlough in a situation suited to him, the Govts. of India will be authorised to continue the Indian rate of pay until a suitable opening can be found for his employment. Officers will not be placed on halfpay except under the operation of one or other of the two clauses 7 and 10 of the staff corps warrant. The Govt. of India have been directed to modify the The Govt. of India have been directed to modify the 98th paragraph of the general order accordingly.

RYOTS AND RENT.

THE Official Reports of Mr. Morris, one of the Special Commissioners to the indigo districts, fully confirm the remarks we ventured to make some little time ago on the anti-rent paying movement that is going on in Lower lengal. Mr. Morris distinctly asserts the existuce of a combined agitation on the part of a small body of seditious, because idle and dissolut ruffians. These men are called by the natives "mmittee-wallahs," so quick are they in picking up words and symbols of a free and civilised community without at all understanding or appreciating their was purport. The ryots themselves, if unmolested, would be quite willing-at least in the northern and north-eastern portions of the Jessore district -to pay their rents, and even in many cases to resume the cultivation of indigo; but they are deterred from doing so by the threats and violence of the "Committee" men. On several occasions the villagers exhibited to the Commissioner the marks of the blows which they had received when attempting to return to the employment of the adjacent factories, and they demanded protection for themselves and families while endeavouring to fulfil their engagements. It is much to be regretted that the mutual relations of planters and ryots should have been conducted on such a lax and unbusiness like system. It is admitted that so long as indigo was regularly supplied there was very little pressure exercised with regard to the payment of rent, and it is not impossible that the natives may have really imagined that the arrears would never be called for. This expectation, moreover, would probably have been justified by the event, had it not been for the disputes that so unfortunately broke out in 1860, and in which all parties were greatly in fault, not excluding the Government itself. A better feeling, however, is now beginning to revive, and if sufficient protection be afforded to the well-disposed portion of the agricultural population, there is every reason to anticipate an early cessation of the estrangement that has already proved so prejudicial to both the employers and the employed. It says but little, indeed, for the vigour of the British administration that in the districts nearest to the capital city of India, and which were the first to come under British rule, it should be necessary to depute special magistrates to collect rents for individual settlers, and to protect the honest and industrious from the brutality of a handful of disreputable scoundrels. It is certainly not to be wondered at that respectable Europeans should hesitate to place themselves at the mercy of mob law, which their own Government is too feeble, or too prejudiced, to suppress with a strong hand.

THE Bengal Government has published a summary of the reports on the cultivation of cotton received from the Commissioners of the Lower Provinces, and a more feeble and unsatisfactory document has seldom come under our notice. It is perfectly evident, however, that the Manchester manufacturers must not look to Bengal to supply any deficiency of their raw material through the rupture in the United States. At present there is a very small quantity of cotton grown in those provinces in excess of what is required for local consumption. Nor is it reasonable to expect that while such low prices rule at Liverpool, additional land will be brought under a cultivation less profitable than almost any other crop. According to Dr. Campbell, whose report alone displays an intelligent and practical knowledge of the subject under inquiry, the value of good clean cotton is nearly as high in Calcutta as in Liverpool, and consequently no margin is left for the risk and expenses of shipment. It is almost superfluous to add that, in any case, before a real export trade in this particular produce could be established in Bengal, great improvements would be necessary in the internal communications of the country. Passable roads have yet to be made in even the most important districts, and a large sum of money would have to be expended on the construction of bridges across rivers and nullahs. But when all this was done, there would still lack sufficient motives to induce the natives to cultivate cotton of a description to suit the Home market. The Lieutenant-Governor. indeed, is of opinion, that "beyond any doubt an indefinite rise of price would draw from them (the Lower Provinces) an unlimited supply of Indian short staple cotton;" but this is really a childish way of answering the proposed question. An "indefinite rise of price" is one of those indefinite expressions of which no one but an Indian official would ever dream of making use. What the Government of India, and the manufacturing community of Great Britain desire to know is simply what quantity of cotton is now produced, what facilities there exist for an increased cultivation, and at what price it can be delivered in Liverpool. In reply to these plain questions we find Mr. Grant instructing his junior secretary to maunder about indefinite rises of price, and finally admitting that he can give no information as to "how much the price must rise before the great tracts of country above-named would supply any sort of cotton for export, and what new cotton lands in India and elsewhere would be stimulated into production by a gradual rise of prices." If this be so, of what value are those minute and voluminous reports which Indian officials are so fond of elaborating, and for which they are perpetually receiving the thanks of their local superiors? We suspect that, as a general rule, they are of very little greater utility than a schoolboy's theme. They may evince industry and conscientiousness on the part of the compiler, but they seldom convey much reliable statistical information, and in sound practical suggestions they are for the most part altogether wanting. Here is an instance in point. After a hundred years of undisputed possession of the Bengal provinces, the Government shows itself wholly ignorant on the subject of a staple article of COTTON CULTIVATION IN BENGAL. | produce, and even after receiving the special reports of the officers in charge of districts is unable to form any opinion as to the capabilities of those provinces. The only point on which all are agreed is as to the badness of the roads and the absence of bridges. Even cart roads have yet to be made, and with regard to water carriage nothing seems to be known. though some of the commissioners appear to have a vague notion that there are, or ought to be if the maps are correct, certain navigable rivers somewhere near at hand. "It is a favourable feature," continues the Lieutenant Governor's amanueusis, "in regard to all the places last mentioned (in Cuttack), that the surface of the country is such that a good metalled road can be constructed anywhere at a moderate cost." Then, in the name of common sense, why was it not constructed years ago? Is it only now for the first time that the Bengal Government is becoming conscious of the advantage of quick and safe means of transport? It is enough to make one despair of the future prosperity of India to come across such a paragraph as that above quoted. It is, in truth, a most unfavourable feature that the Government should discover ground for exultation in the fact that a good road can be made where it could and should have been made half a century ago. Again, in the hill country of Chittagong it is stated that there are many facilities for the cultivation of cotton, if only there were men to engage in that or any other pursuit. There is abundance of good land, but there is no population, and altogether the circumstances of those hill tracts are said to be so exceptional that the Lieutenant-Governor intends "to make a special proposal regarding them to the Government of India." But is it only now that the local Government has made the notable discovery that it was ruling over an unpeopled province, otherwise capable of producing any quantity of food and clothing for the use of its subjects? It is lamentable to observe such ignorance and apathy, for of what conceivable use is a local governor if not to acquire and utilise local information? The Board of Revenue, however, seem more awake than the Lieutenant-Governor to the real nature of the wants of Bengal. They acknowledge that "the future development of the trade must be left to the exertions of private enterprise;" but they add, "it would perhaps subserve the objects of the policy initiated by his Excellency the Governor-General if an early and liberal settlement be at once come to of the long-pending question of the tenure on which waste lands are to be obtained by European settlers." On that point there cannot be two opinions. It is the one thing necessary for the introduction of British capital, intelligence, and industry. Until this question be finally and liberally solved it is useless to expect any further development of the economic resources of India.

Awas-i-Hind; or, A Voice from he Ganges: being a Solution of the Tue Source of Christianity. By an Indian Officer. Lon-

It is really wonderful that any respectable publisher should have conseited to bring out such a book, as profane as t is feeble, and as badly executed as it was wrongly conceived. This Indian Officer traces the true source of Christianity to certain falulous histories, as he regards them, which the civilised world has been content to accept as tidings of a great truth. According to his view—borrowed from Strauss, Evanson, and such like writers—the Evangelists were impostors, who had not even sense enough to agree with one another as to their main facts. But it is idle to waste words on such a silly and shallow performance, which we only notice at all in order to warn our readers against purchasing or perusing it.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3, 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the manes of all statious, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-ecquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and leasy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided. has been avoided.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE learn from the Bombay Mail of the 27th of July, that the three new Bills relating to India, which were carried through Parliament during the late Session, are favourably regarded by the natives of India, at least, by the few who pay attention to such subjects. It is of more importance, however, to note the deficiency of revenue anticipated for the current year. At a meeting of the Legislative Council, held on the 13th of July, Sir Bartle Frere stated that the net revenue from opium would probably be £1,200,000 less than had been calculated by Mr. Laing when preparing his Budget. In the first place the price of the drug had fallen from over Rs. 2,000 to little more than Rs. 1.400 per chest, though fortunately Mr. Laing had based his statement on the medium price of Rs. 1,748. The difference, however, between even this moderate estimate and the actual value would occasion a loss to Government of £685,000 on the Bengal side alone. To this must be added about £265,000 deficiency in the duty levied in the Bombay Presidency, making a total deduction from the estimates of £950,000. Nor is this the full measure of the miscalculation that has taken place. Owing to the enhanced price of labour the Government has been compelled group. There can be no difficulty with regard to pay five instead of four rupees per seer in to lieutenant-colonels of cavalry, unless any advances to opium cultivators, causing an increased charge of £250,000. It thus appears that in this one item alone Mr. Laing was in fault to the extent of £1,200,000. Besides this there were omissions in charges of postage and other matters, making an aggregate of £348,000, so that in order to realise Mr. Laing's hopes of a balanced Budget next year it will be necessary either to impose new taxes, or effect reductions, to the amount of £1,548,000. It is tolerably manifest by this time that Mr. Laing's financial statement is very nearly as worthless and unreliable as that made by his ill-fated predeces sor. We may mention, by the way, that Mr. Laing's health is so far restored that he proposes to return to Calcutta in October next, with the intention of remaining there until March, 1862.

The aspect of affairs in Lower Bengal is not encouraging, except in the fact that the ryots now complain of having been deceived by the native zemindars, who promised to make them advances for the cultivation of their crops on the condition of their refusal to grow indigo. Now that the planters are completely estranged, the zemindars treat the ryots with contempt, and even demand of them a cess for having saved them from their former employers. Terrible floods are also spoken of as having destroyed much valuable property.

It is expected that nearly two hundred officers, in addition to those whose names appeared in our last issue, will elect for the Staff Corps, though many are "pending the news of the reception at home of the retiring scheme of the Amalgamation Commission, and its results as regards pensions for retiring officers." In the following page we give a long series of questions and answers referring to the amalgamation scheme, which have been published by the Indian Government apparently for the charitable purpose of rendering confusion worse confounded, and of adding to the almost hopeless perplexity of officers seeking for information. In the matter of obscurity, however, the Home Government must be allowed to bear away the palm. On all sides we hear anxious inquiries as to the constitution of the groups and divisions alluded to in Sir Charles Wood's retirement scheme. It is impossible within the space at our disposal to give the explanations that should have accompanied the official document, but a few general directions may not be unacceptable to those who are still unable to find their peculiar casualties should occur previous to the 1st of October. The same can hardly be said of the lieutenant-colonels of infantry. The first eight groups, however, in the Bengal column, provide for the forty senior regimental lieutenantcolonels as they stand for succession to colonels' allowances, and the same number are provided for in the last four groups. For instance, if no changes take place before the date abovenamed, Lieutenant-colonels Macdonald, Grant, Shuldham, Butler, and Sewell will form the first group, and be entitled to £550 per annum in addition to their pensions, and so on in succession. In the Madras Army, again, the first group will consist of Lieutenant-colonels Thorpe, Holl, and Hewetson; and in the Bombay Army of Lieutenant-colonels Stuart and Le Mesurier. The regimental majors of both cavalry and infantry in each presidency will be mixed up together according to seniority, and then divided into four nearly equal classes, or groups. It is clearly impossible for any officer to foresee exactly to what division he will belong. There is no alternative but to wait patiently until the Indian Government is in a position to make a definite statement on the subject, which will probably be towards the latter part of October. Every regimental field officer in the three Presidencies will then be informed of the amount to which he will be entitled in addition to his pension, provided he signify his acceptance prior to the 15th of December, so that officers at home are likely to be run rather close, unless permitted to communicate their answer to the Military Department of the India-office.

AMALGAMATION.

EXPLANATION OF DOUBTFUL POINTS IN THE AMALGAMATION ORDER OF 10TH APRIL

Fort William, July 9, 1861. -No. 598 of 1861. Inquiries having been received from various quarters respecting the intended operation of some of the provisions of the General Order No. 332. dated the 10th of April last, His Excellency the Governor-general of India in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the subjoined Questions having a general application, with the Answers given to them by Government. Further Questions, with their Answers, will be published in subsequent Gazettes :-

Question 1. [Paragraphs 16 and 17.] If a Soldier (of either limited or unlimited service) elects to remain in the Indian Service, will he, at the expiration of his present term of contract, be permitted to re-enlist for Indian Service?

Answer 1. No. Henceforward no enlistment or re-enlistment for the Indian Service will be legal. But Soldiers who have elected for the Indian Service, and are men of good character, will be allowed, by the Commander-in-Chief, to volunteer for General Service at the expiration of their present term of contract, and to re-enlist into the Royal Artillery and Regiments of the Line serving in India.

- Q. 2. [Paragraph 19.] Will the Non-Commissioned Officers of the Public Works Department. and of the Corps of Sappers, be eligible, as heretofore, for the grade of Warrant Officer?
- A. 2. Yes. The openings which have hitherto existed for them will still continue.
- Q. 8. [Paragraph 19.] Will Staff Non-Commissioned Officers of Garrisons, Native Infantry Regiments, &c., who elect for General Service, be permitted to retain their present appointmenta?
- A. 3. The order makes no change. These men, however, are under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief.
- Q. 4. [Paragraphs 23, 72.] Does an Officer, who avails himself of the privilege of remaining on Staff employ without joining the Staff Corps, draw his Regimental Pay and Allowances when on leave, or, in other words, does he retain his present footing?
- A. 4. Yes. The 23rd paragraph lays down that " the pledge that due regard shall be paid to the rights and claims of the Officers of her Majesty's Indian Forces shall be scrupulously adhered to." The conditions of service of Officers electing for Indian Service will therefore in no way be altered.
- Q. 5. [Paragraph 50.] Officers being allowed until the 1st October next to decide on their acceptance of £50 bonus, sanctioned by General Order by the Governor General, 8th March, 1861, No. 79, it is presumed that they are allowed up to the same date to give in their election of either General or Local Service, or the Staff Corps? An authoritative decision on this point is much required.
- A. 5. Yes; but they are further allowed, till the 21st of October inclusive, to elect for General or Local Service, or for the Staff Corps.
- Q. 6. [Paragraph 50.] An Officer is permanent Second in Command, and Acting Commandant of an Irregular Corps. Will it be necessary for him to join the Staff Corps before he can become permanent Commandant?
- A. 6. No; it rests with the Commander-in-Chief or with the Government. Officers not joining the Staff Corps "will continue to be available, as heretofore, for their present duty, or for any other duty to which they may be appointed by Government."
- Q. 7. [Paragraph 50.] If an Ensign signifies ALLE 10ts with to volunteer for General Service, and pater he has done so, but before he is nominated to a British Regiment, a vacancy occurs among claim to Off-reckonings and Colonel's allowance? General, Brigade Major, Brigade Quarter-Ma &c., to a Brigade or Division in the Field, do go towards the periods of Staff employ, quartant?

- the Lieutenants in one of the present Regiments of Native Infantry, would he, by having volunteered, forfeit his claim to the vacant Lieutenancy, supposing him to be the Senior applicant?
- A. 7. An Ensign will not be debarred the benefits of intermediate Regimental promotion under existing regulations, occurring up to the date of his transfer to one of the new Line Regiments.
- Q. 8. [Paragraphs 50, 58.] If an Officer volunteers for General Service, does he thereby cease to derive any benefit from casualties occurring in his present Regiment, subsequent to his volunteering, but before he is provided for in a British Regiment?
- A. 8. No; volunteering beyond the requirements of the new Line Regiment will not make any difference in the position of Officers.
- Q. 9. [Paragraph 50.] An officer having vo lunteered for General Service in the Line, will he, in the event of his service not being required in any Regiment of the Line, be then in the same position as before he volunteered; or does he, by merely volunteering, surrender his former position in the Indian Army, and render himself amenable to the Staff Corps Rules?
- A. 9. He remains in his former position un altered. He has nothing to do with the Staff Corps.
- Q. 10. [Paragraph 50.] How does the Amalgamation Order affect Officers belonging to the European Veterans? This question is asked more especially with reference to those employed in Staff situations, such as Ordnance Appointments, Riding Masters, &c., and who have not been transferred to the Veterans, in consequence of their disqualification for active service, but who, as effective men, have been granted Commissions in the Veterons, and draw Infantry rates of pay. If they are to be allowed to volunteer for General Service, and do so, what duties will they be liable to perform?
- A. 10. Officers of any description on the Veteran Establishment are not expected to volunteer, and there is no employment known to be accessible to them if they were to volunteer. There will be no alteration in their present position.
- Q. 11. [Paragraphs 52, 53.] Are the substantive Lieutenent-Colonels of the three Local Corps to be invited to join their representative Line Regiments? There are now two to each Local Corps. The Establishment of the new Line Corps has only one Lieutenant-Colonel.
- A. 11. Lieutenant-Colonels may volunteer, with the chance of being employed in the new Line Regiments or not. But there will be only one Lieutenant-Colonel in each new Line Corps.
- Q. 12. [Paragraphs 52, 53.] In the event of the Senior Captain of a Local European Corps, say 2nd European Light Infantry, not volunteer ing for Line Service, and the Second Captain availing himself of the invitation to join the 105th, will the latter be posted to the 105th as Senior Captain?
- A. 12. This depends on the number and rank of all the Officers who may volunteer.
- Q. 13. [Paragraphs 52, 53, 55.] Will Officers volunteering for General Service be put into the new Corps of the Line according to dates of present Regimental Commissions, or will Brevets count for rank in those Corps?
- A. 13. They will be placed in the new Corps of the Line according to dates of present Regimental Commissions, but Brevet Rank will not be taken into account.
- Q. 14. If their services are not required by Government for new Line Corps, are Officers, volunteers for General Service, liable to be posted to any other Corps, and if so, will they enter as Juniors of their rank?
- A. 14. Such Officers will not be liable to be posted to any other Corps.
- Q. 15. [Paragraph 52.] A Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel commands a Regiment of Madras

- A. 15. His election for General Service, should he be accepted, will disconnect him from the Indian Service, and he will forego all claim to Colonel's allowance in the Indian Line.
- Q. 16. [Paragraph 52.] Will the officers who join the new line corps enjoy, while in India, the same pay and allowances in every respect as those who elect to continue on their present conditions?
- A. 16. They will receive the rates of pay and allowances now enjoyed by officers of British Regiments in India.
- Q. 17. [Paragraph 55.] In the event of either of the new Line Regiments being ordered Home, are any of the Officers who have accepted the invitation to join it liable to be placed on half-pay. consequent on the Regiment being reduced to the strength of the Home Establishment?
- A. 17. They will be subject to the conditions of Her Majesty's Line Service. The strength of Infantry Regiments on the Home Establishment is at present the same as that of the new Line Regiments in India; in the Cavalry Service the Home Establishment is less by one Troop than the strength of a Regiment in India.
- Q. 18. [Paragraph 56.] How and when is a Major of one of the new Line Regiments to obtain promotion to Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel, and from that to Regimental Colonel?
- A. 18. "In the promotion to the Field Officers the fitness and efficiency of Officers will be taken into account." As regards Regimental Colonels, no instructions have been received by
- Q. 19. [Paragraphs 67, 68, 69, 72, 73, and 75.1 These paragraphs, taken in connection with each other, seem to imply that the admission of those Officers now on Staff employ into the Staff Corps is not a matter of election by themselves, but dependent on their selection by Government. Is it 80?
- A. 19. Officers now on the Staff are allowed to apply for admission, but admission will be given to those Officers only who may be considered by the Governments under which they are serving to be in all respects fit for the Staff Corps.
- Q. 20. [Paragraphs 68, 69.] Are the Officers Commanding the European Infantry and Native Infantry Depots, and the Depots at Landour, Wellington, Aboo, Khandalla, &c., and the Adjutants and Quarter-Masters of the same, to be considered to have been on Staff duty while so employed?
- A. 20. Depot Staff Officers are not on permanent Staff employ, and therefore are not entitled, as such, to enter the Staff Corps. But in the event of their subsequently obtaining admission into the Staff Corps they will be entitled to count as Staff Service the time passed as Depot Staff Officers.
- Q. 21. [Paragraph 69.] Can an Officer now on Staff employ, and who formerly served as Adjutant to a Regiment no longer existing, count as service, under paragraph 69, in the Staff Corps, the period which he passed in that appointment?
  - A. 21. Yes.
- Q. 22. [Paragraph 69.] Are Officers holding the appointments of Line Adjutant or Station Staff Officer, as also Cantonment Magistrates in charge of Bazaars, who, under present rules, vacate their appointments on the removal of their Regiments from the Station where they are serving, eligible for the Staff Corps?
- A. 22. Appointments held during the period a Regiment may remain at a Station can only be considered temporary employment. But in Bengal, Cantonment Joint Magistrates are permanent Staff Officers, and are not necessarily selected from Corps at the Station.
- Q. 28. [Paragraphs 69, 87.]. It is concluded that such appointments as Assistant Adjutant-General, Brigade Major, Brigade Quarter-Master, &c., to a Brigade or Division in the Field, do not go towards the periods of Staff employ, qualify-

Digitized by GOGIE

- A. 23. Such appointments do not of themselves qualify for admission into the Staff Corps; but if Officers holding such appointments should eventually obtain admission into the Staff Corps they will be entitled to count as Staff Service the time passed in such appointments.
- Q. 24. [Paragraphs 69, 73, 75.] In what rank would an Artillery Officer of thirty-one years' service, a Captain on the 18th February, but promoted from that date by the Amalgamation Order to Lieutenant-Colonel, but who may wish to join the Staff Corps within six months, be transferred to that Corps?
- A. 24. If he be on the Staff, and be approved by Government, he will go in as Lieutenant Colonel, but he will rank in the Staff Corps with other Lieutenant-Colonels according to their previous relative rank.
- Q. 25. [Paragraph 69.] Will the service of an Officer doing duty with the Arracan Battalion count for promotion in the Staff Corps, service of that nature with the Arracan Battalion having always been looked upon as a permanent appointment.
- A. 25. In paragraph 69 it is provided that "Officers doing duty with Irregulars and Local regiments will not be regarded as being now on Staff employ." But Officers doing duty and receiving pay as such, and being permanently appointed, will be considered as on Staff employ.
- Q. 26. [Paragraphs 69, 84, and 87.] Will an Officer who has held an acting appointment on a full vacancy, for example that of Acting Adjutant or Acting Quartermaster of his own or any other Corps, be considered to have performed service qualifying for promotion under the Staff Warrant, for such period as he may have been so employed?
- A. 26. No; such an officer can only be deemed temporarily employed, unless he be eventually appointed to the vacant situation. In that case the period of his acting in the full vacancy will reckon as service qualifying for promotion.
- Q. 27. [Paragraphs 69, 84, and 87.] Is an Officer who has been doing duty with the Sappers and Miners to be considered to have been on Staff employ while so doing duty?
- A. 27. These Officers are permanently appointed, in the same manner as Officers permanently doing duty with Irregular Corps; and service passed with the Sappers and Miners will count as Staff Service.
- Q. 28. [Paragraph 72.] Can any Officer, under paragraph 72, avail himself of Furlough without losing his appointment?
- A. 28. Yes, under the limitations of the new Furlough Regulations. His privileges are unaffected by any portion of this Order.
- Q. 29. [Paragraph 72.] An Officer, Senior Lieutenant in his Cadre, holds the Adjutancy of an Irregular Corps, and elects to remain as he is, without joining the Staff Corps. On his becoming Captain, will he lose his Adjutancy?
  - A. 29. He will lose his Adjutancy.
- Q. 30. [Paragraph 74.] Whether Officers, now on the Staff, volunteering and being selected for the new Line Regiments, will be allowed to retain their Staff appointments under Rule 74?
- A. 30. Yes, if the Commander-in-Chief can spare them.
- Q. 31. [Paragraphs 74, 84, 85, and 90.] Can a Staff Officer, more than one year on the Staff, get on the Staff Corps, if promoted to Major before its formation; and if so, will be join as Lieu tenant-Colonel, having been twenty-six years in the Service, with thirteen years on the Staff?
- A. 31. He may join the Staff Corps any time before the 21st October next, but he must enter the Staff Corps in the Regimental Rank held by him on the 18th of February, 1861.
- Q. 32. [Paragraph 75.] Does paragraph 75 apply to British Officers only? Is it supposed to be applicable to both British and Local Officers?
  - A. 32. To both Services.

- Q. 33. [Paragraph 76.] Are the appointments of Inspectors of Musketry liable to the provisions of paragraph 76 in the same way as Army Staff or Brigade Majors, limiting their service in Department to five years?
- A. 33. No. The offices the tenure of which is limited are expressly named in the margin of paragraph 76.
- Q. 34. [Paragraph 76.] Do the five years count from date of permanent appointment to a Department?
- A. 34. From the date of permanent appointment.
- Q. 35. [Paragraph 77.] Will an Officer having, on the 10th April, 1861, been five or seven years in his present appointment in the Adjutant-General's Department, say Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General of a Division, have to vacate before the 10th April, 1863?
- A. 35. No. He may serve two years in the Department from the date of the publication of the
- Q. 36. [Paragraph 77.] An Officer having, on the 10th April, 1861, been two years Deputy Adjutant-General of the Army, and previous to his appointment as such, been Assistant Adjutant-General of the Army for five years, his service in the Department having been continuous, can he hold his appointment as Deputy Adjutant General until the 10th April, 1866? If not, on what date will his tenure of appointment as Deputy Adjutant-General expire?
- A. 36. He is entitled to two years at any rate. The question has been reserved to the Secretary of State, whether the five years' tenure reckons from date of actual appointment or from that of joining a Department.
- Q: 37. [Paragraph 78.] Is the period of six months, within which Officers must communicate their decision as to entering the Staff Corps, to be reckoned, in the Madras Presidency, from date of Publication of the General Order by the Governor-general at Fort William, or at Fort Saint George, or at the Station where the Officer electing to join the Staff Corps may be serving?
- A. 37. From the date of promulgation of the General Order in Calcutta, i.e., the 22nd April, 1861.
- Q. 38. [Paragraph 78.] With reference to paragraph 78, are Officers on the Staff obliged at once to declare whether they desire to join the Staff Corps, with the option of correcting their election within six months?
- A. 38. It is not necessary that an Officer should send his decision in to the Adjutant-general's Office before the 21st October, 1861, but it must reach the Adjutant-general's Office by that date. The decision once announced in General Orders cannot be cancelled.
- Q. 39. [Paragraph 74.] An Officer on the staff belonging to one of the present European regiments having accepted the invitation to join his representative line corps, can he not have the benefit of paragraph 74, the same as any other officer of a British regiment,* i.e., elect within six months to join the staff corps, and be eligible for promotion under the promotions of the Royal Warrant?
  - A. 39. Yes.
- Q. 40. [Paras. 82, 84, 85, 87.] Will an Officer who has held a Staff appointment on probation, for example, in the Commissariat Department or the Madras Police, be considered to have performed service qualifying for prom. under the Staff Warrant, for such period as he may have been so employed?
- A. 40. If an Officer on probation be eventually confirmed permanently in the Commissariat or other Department, he will count the period of probation as permanent service.
- Q. 41. [Paragraph 84.] Does the time an Officer of the Staff Corps may be on leave, in or out of India, count towards the period required to be served in the Staff Corps for promotion?
  - A. 41. Yes.
    - Vide Paragraphs 74 and 89.

- Q. 42. To qualify an Officer in the Staff Corps for promotion, after 12 or 20 years' service, from what date is the term of years reckoned,—from date of first Commission, or date of arrival in country?
  - A. 42. From date of first Commission.
- Q. 43. [Paragraphs 84-85.] A Brevet-Colonel of Infantry enters the Staff Corps as Captain, and receives at once the rank of Major in that Corps. He inquires whether, having served 32 years in the country, of which 26 have been on Staff employ, he would in accordance with Staff Corps Rules be promoted two years hence to a Lieute-nant-Colonelcy, and five years later to a Brevet-Colonelcy—a rank which he already possesses; and asks whether there is not something anomalous in such an arrangement?
- A. 43. A Brevet Colonel so situated would enter the Staff Corps as Captain, be promoted at once to Major, and at the end of two years to Lieutenant-Colonel. According to the date of his promotion to Lieutenant-Colonel his eventual position with respect to Colonel's allowance would be determined. It is therefore necessary that he should go through all these grades.
- Q. 44. [Paragraph 84.] Will "Brevet Colonels" of the Staff Corps, after five years' service therein as substantive Lieutenant-Colonels, be permitted to reside in England on 25s. per diem, as provided for Colonels of Artillery in paragraph 29, pending their admission to the benefits of the "Colonel's allowance?"
  - A. 41. No.
- Q. 45. [Paragraph 85.] Will a substantive Lieutenant-Colonel, and Brevet Colonel joining the Staff Corps on its formation, to be eligible to "get one step of rank" on transfer to the Staff Corps; i.e., will be be promoted to substantive "Colonel" or "Major-General?"
- A. 45. There is no such rank in the Staff Corps as substantive Colonel. No instructions have been received regarding promotion to Major General in the Staff Corps.
- Q. 46. [Paragraph 87.] Service in the Crimea having been allowed to count as service in India towards retirement it has been asked whether Staff employ during such Crimean Service will be allowed to go towards the qualifying period for promotion under the Staff Warrant?
- A. 46. Staff service in the Crimea is not Staff service in India, neither is it permanent. On these grounds it cannot reckon for promotion in the Staff Corps.
- Q. 47. [Paragraph 93.] Officers of the Staff Corps obtaining leave in India, whether on private affairs or sick certificates, will, it is presumed, continue to draw Indian rates of pay?
- A. 33. Yes; the proportion of pay which they will draw will be the same, but Staff Corps pay will be substituted for former pay.
- Q. 48. [Paragraph 93.] Can an Indian Officer who has joined the Staff Corps retire on the pay of the rank he has attained in the Cadre of his old Regiment, after 22 years' service, under the Regulations of 1796? For example, I shall probably be a Regimental Major after about 22 years' service in India—if I join the Staff Corps, could I retire on a Major's pension after 22 years' service (provided I had attained that rank in the Cadre of my old Regiment), or must I serve 24 years in India?
- A. 48. An Officer in the Staff Corps can retire after 22 years' service, under the 30th and 32nd paragraphs of the new Furlough Rules. Government have referred this point, and this construction of it will be acted upon pending further instructions. With regard to the allusion made to standing in the Cadre of an Officer's old Regiment, it is observed that, on joining the Staff Corps, an Officer disconnects himself entirely from his old Regiment, and his place in it has no relation to the pension he becomes entitled to.
- Q. 49. Should a Major of upwards of 22 years' service retire before the 1st October next, can he claim, in addition to the Major's pension, the extra pension of £50 per annum, offered by the Secretary of State?

- A. 49. Yes. If he have served 22 years in India, of which not more than 2 years may have been passed on leave, he may retire before the 1st October next, on the pension of his actual rank, and will be entitled to the extra pension of £50 in addition.
- Q. 50. [Paragraph 93.] Will an Officer of the Staff Corps after 22 years' service, of which 6 have been on the Staff (either on full or on half pay), be entitled to Major's pension?
- A. 50. He will receive the pension of his substantive rank, if the whole service have been on full pay; if not, the half-pay service will be deducted; and, to entitle him to the pension of his rank, he will be required to make up the deducted portion.
- Q. 51. [Paragraph 93.] Can Officers of the Staff Corps take 20 months' leave on private affairs, retaining their appointments?
- A. 51. Yes. Such is the rule laid down in the 93rd paragraph of the General Order. But a reference has been made to the Secretary of State on this point.
- Q. 52. Are the above twenty months referred to available in one indulgence, or are they the aggregate of sundry short leaves?
- A. 52. The leave may be in one period, or it may be the aggregate of sundry short leaves, subject to the conditions of the new Furlough Rules; vide paragraph 20 of the same.
- Q. 53. [Paragraph 93.] Does paragraph 93 apply exclusively to Furlough, or to all leaves (irrespective of privilege leave), whether in or out of India, and does it not count for service for retiring pension?
- A. 53. It applies to Furlough only, and such Furlough is subject to the conditions of the new Furlough Rules.
- Q. 54. [Paragraph 93.] Is the substantive rank of Officers in the Staff Corps to be considered to be their only Regimental rank, the Staff Corps being their only Regiment?
- A. 54. Yes; the Staff Corps is their only Regiment, so to speak; but the term is an incorrect one.
- Q. 55. Is Sick Furlough to England to count against the five years' tenure of appointment in those Departments in which the tenure is so limited?
- A. 55. Yes; an Officer is borne on the strength of the Staff whilst on Furlough, and draws Staff Pay for a portion of the time. As the time passed on Furlough counts for service pension, it must necessarily count for Staff Service also, and be reckoned within the period of five years.
- Q. 56. [Paragraph 93.] Is it compulsory, with reference to the latter part of paragraph 93, on all Officers joining the Staff Corps to select the new Furlough Regulations, or is this intended merely for British Officers joining the Staff Corps? And are Indian Officers allowed the option of selecting the old or new Furlough Regulations, as guaranteed to them by General Order by the Governor-General, No. 1,150 of 17th November, 1854?
- A. 56. All will be under the new Furlough Regulations. No option is allowed to an Officer who may join the Staff Corps. He must accept the new Rules as one of the conditions of joining that Corps.
- Q. 57. [Paragraph 93.] Can an Officer of the Staff Corps proceed to Europe on leave on private affairs (retaining his appointment) as often as his service can be dispensed with, or does this privilege refer to leave on private affairs in India only?
- A. 57. Officers of the Staff Corps will be under the new Furlough Rules, except as to the increase of twenty months, explained in the General Order. These Rules prescribe periods of service to be performed in India at intervals between Furloughs.
- Q. 58. [Paragraph 94.] What number of "Colonel's allowances" will be appropriated to the Madras Staff Corps, and from what date will they become available?

- A. 58. This question is under the consideration of her Majesty's Government.
- Q. 59. [Paragraph 96 to 98.] Should an Officer be placed on the half pay list, or be unemployed, under the paragraphs 96 to 99 of the General Order, will his time thus passed in India count towards retiring pension?
- A. 59. If on the half pay list, no; as no half pay service counts for pension; but Officers in the staff corps, though not actually employed, will be allowed to reckon their service during such period towards promotion and pension.
- Q. 60. [Paragraph 98.] With reference to the latter part of paragraph 98, will an Officer placed on half-pay and entitled to pension be obliged to take it, or has he the option of doing so or not?
- A. 60. An officer entitled to pension, whom it may be proposed to place on half-pay, will have the option of taking his pension.
- Q. 61. [Paragraphs 98-99.] If Officers of the Staff Corps are unemployed, merely owing to there being no available appointment for them, but not owing to unfitness or other cause, which might induce Government "to decline to employ them in any capacity," will they come under paragraph 99, or are they liable to paragraph 98, there being no limit as to the period for which Indian rates of pay can be drawn in the Royal Warrant, Clause 8?
- A. 61. Employment of some kind will be given to all qualified and deserving Officers of the Staff Corps, whenever opportunity may offer. Paragraph 98 has no application whatever to Officers whom Government consider fit for employment, though at the moment it may not be practicable to employ them suitably. The pay of such officers is provided for in paragraph 99.
- Q. 62. [Paragraph 98.] Does the period an Officer may be placed on half-pay count towards retiring pension and qualification for promotion?

  A. 62. No.
- Q. 63. Is it intended by this paragraph (98) of the General Order to authorize the placing of an unemployed Officer on half-pay in such wise as to prevent his completing his term of service for Pension?
- A. 63. No. Paragraph 98 applies exclusively to Officers whom Government consider "unfit to employ in any capacity."
- Q. 64. [Paragraph 101.] Will Military appointments with Native Troops (such as the Punjab Irregular Force, which is under the direct orders of the Civil Administration of Government,) be considered a Civil Branch of the Army, thus debarring such Officers as may be serving on the Punjab Frontier, although performing strictly Military duties, from all exercise of Command, &c.?
- A. 64. Military appointments with Native Troops under the Civil Administration, such as the Punjab Irregular Force, are not Civil appointments. Command has hitherto been exercised by Officers in such appointments, and the order makes no change.
- Q. 65. [Paragraph 103.] Must a Lieutenant-Colonel joining the Staff Corps serve two years from the 18th February, 1861, to qualify him for the superior grade under the provision of Clause 100 of the Amalgamation Order, or five years, counting from the original date of his substantive rank?
- A. 65. Five years, counting from the original date of his substantive rank, provided he has been on the Staff the whole period; if not, five years from the date from which he as Lieutenant-Colonel held Staff employ.—Vide paragraph 85 of the General Order.
- Q. 66. Does an Officer promoted to a Majority in the Staff Corps, and retiring on a Captain's pension, receive a step in rank on retirement, i. e., does he retire as Lieutenant-Colonel?
- A. 66. Yes. All Officers retiring on full pension get a step in rank. No change has been ordered in this respect.

- Q. 67. In the event of a Regimental Captain and Brevet Lieutenant colonel joining the Staff Corps, will his future conditions of service in the said Staff Corps vitiate his present right to succeed to a Brevet Colonelcy, after exercising a five years' command under the provisions of her Majesty's Royal Warrant of the 14th October, 1858?

  A. 67. No.
- Q. 68. Is an Officer of the Veteran Establishment, who may retire before the 1st October next, entitled to the extra pension of £50 per annum?
- A. 68. Yes; these Officers are entitled to retiring pension, and therefore to all its privileges.
- Q. 69. [Paragraph 100.] As Staff Officer who is admitted into the Staff Corps, and who is entitled to his promotion, say from Captain to Major, from 18th February, 1861, will, it is supposed, be entitled to the difference between Captain's and Major's pay and allowances in addition to his Staff salary retrospectively from the above date?
- A. 69. An Officer is always entitled to the pay of his substantive rank from the date of such rank. It is provided in the 100th paragraph of the General Order, that "the pay and allowances to be established for the several Staff appointments, in all Departments of Staff employ, will be announced in a subsequent Notification, and meanwhile the Staff salary and other allowances of all appointments will remain unchanged."
- Q. 70. The order allowing an addition of £50 to pension on retirement being limited to retirements which may take place before the 1st October, 1861, will this extra pension be allowed to Officers who may on the 1st October next have still a few months to serve, to entitle them to a higher pension, provided they notify before the 1st October their intention to retire, on completing the fixed periods of service?
- A. 70. The extra £50 requires absolute retirement on the 1st of October; and no relaxation can be made but by the Secretary of State.
- Q. 71. General Order by the Governor-General in Council, No. 156, of 1861, provides for the benefits of Lord Clive's Fund being continued to the widows of Soldiers who elect for "General Service," but no allusion is made to personal benefits to themselves; and the cases of Officers, Warrant Officers, and their Widows, are omitted altogether, with reference to their claims on Lord Clive's Fund. A decision on these points is requested.
- A. 71. Government have referred the question of Lord Clive's Fund to the Secretary of State; and will administer the benefits of the Fund meanwhile as heretofore.
- Q. 72. Will the election by an Officer of "General Service" debar him from the benefit of the £50 bonus sanctioned by G. O. G., March 8, 1861, No. 79?
- A. 72. No; the offer was made to all Officers of the Indian Army.
- Q. 73. Should the option be given to young Officers of the General List, who entered the service subsequently to November, 1859, to volunteer for General or Local Service, or the Staff Corps; one young Officer having stated that, from the terms of the Declaration made by him at the India-house, he did not consider that he had any choice in the matter?
- A. 73. There is nothing in the declaration made by these young Officers at the India-office to compel them to elect for General Service. The option must be given to them in common with other young Officers of the Indian Army.

K.S.I., THE NEW ORDER OF KNIGHT-HOOD.

Enthusiastic archæologists have professed to trace the existence of Orders of Knighthood and of heraldic ceremonial back to Egypt, where Pharoah invested the patriarch Joseph with a ring, a silken robe, and a chain of gold; and to Babylon, where King Nebuchadnezzar employed a herald to summon all the people of Asia to the worship of his golden image. However that may be, there is no doubt that the custom of a sovereign ruler, or a chief decorating with khilluts the men whom he delights to honour, is as old as the Pharoahs, and has been common throughout the East from the earliest ages. Asia has never progressed beyond that feudalism from which Europe began to emerge only in the sixteenth century, and of which, except in Russia, it is now altogether free. To the feudal stage of human progress Orders of Knighthood, in their original signification, emphatically belong, and therefore it is that they are so well suited for Asiatic society at the present time. From the eleventh to the fifteenth century of European history the noble received from his Sovereign a "fee" of land, in return for which he was bound to perform certain military duties. At one time it was necessary in England to pass a law to compel all such feeholders to enter the Order of Knighthood, so that they might prove their fitness to take the field at the Sovereign's summons. What was originally military in its origin had added to it the sanctions of religion which were heightened by the Crusades, and the graces of chivalry and poetry when the various Orders began to lose their original meaning. As early as 1343, when Edward III. instituted the highest of English honours, the Order of the Garter, this change of meaning took place. Little more than half a century later Henry IV. created the Order of the Bath, a decoration not confined, as that of the Garter has been since the time of Henry VIII., to peers, but open to all servants of the Crown, to which class, how-ever, it is strictly limited. The absence of any such honour for distinguished men, especially in the walks of literature and science, not in that service, was so keenly felt in the time of Queen Anne, that her Majesty would have established the Order of Minerva, with the silver owl among its insignia, but for the ridicule with which the proposal was received by the public of that day. Queen Victoria has been more wish and fortunate than her ancestor. As George III. met the various claims for distinction which arose on the close of the war in 1815 by extending the Order of the Bath and dividing it into the three classes of Grand Cross, Knights Commanders and Knights Companions, so the Queen has established the Victoria Cross to reward distinguished valour in all classes however lowly. And as her reign has been rendered illustrious by the re-conquest and complete submission of India to her power, so she has signalised her assumption of the dignity of Empress of India by establishing "the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India." few sovereigns has been granted a reign so long and so adorned at once by the triumphs of war and the arts of peace. To no subjugated nation besides India has been given a sovereign whose sway is so mild yet firm, whose mercy is so gracious yet wise. The people who attempted to exchange her Government for anarchy, and massacred her children in cold blood, England now rescues from the death of starvation. chiefs who shook off their allegiance to her power while they abstained from outraging humanity. England has guaranteed for ever in the peaceable possession of their ancestral estates. The princes who came to her help in the hour of conflict England now proposes to honour with the highest dignities. In the new Order, English in its origin and insignia though it be, every Indian chief will see a meaning which it does not possess for Englishmen who belong to another stage as well as a different zone of civilisation. Their feudal ambition will be aroused, their oriental imagination gratified, and their keen regard for their own izzut-a word which is untranslateable in a western tongue and which "personal dignity" only half expresses-will be excited. Asia has already two similar orders in that of the Turkish "Crescent" and the Persian "Lion and Sun." They have but little knowledge of history and but little sympathy with those feelings which are the most frequent springs of human action, who do not see in the Star of India the germs of a future order relatively as distinguished and influential as the Garter, and politically far more efficacious.

The new Order should have been created in 1858, when Her Majesty first assumed the Government of India. Henceforth the Chapter will be held only on the anniversary of that occasion. The first installation will accordingly take place on 1st November next, when the Viceroy, as Grand Master, will create the first knights. Excluding extra knights who must be of royal blood, and honorary knights who will be foreign princes, the whole number will be twenty-Of these fifteen shall be natives of India. While the honour will be by no means hereditary and will be conferred always for distinguished loyalty or influence, it will generally embrace the representatives of the most noble houses in India. As a distinguishing feature of the Order it is not to be confined, like the Garter, to the nobility. but may be employed to reward such political services as those of the Nizam's minister. Salar Jung, and such literary attainments as those of the Calcutta Rajahs, Kalikrishna Bahadoor and Rhadakant Dev. A cautious and sparing selection, on the two grounds of distinguished loyalty and high position, will be required to convince every chief that the former is more important than the latter. The creation of the Order must render necessary the appointment of an official similar to the Earl Marshal of England, which office is hereditary in the Duke of Norfolk's family, under whose direction all great public ceremonies are arranged. Since the days of Sir H. Elliott the Government of India has been sadly deficient in this respect, as was painfully evident at the last Durbar in Government House. Now that we have changed the position of our nobles and feudatories, strict attention to genealogy, rank, and precedence becomes a necessity of our policy. What the Earl Marshal and Herald's College does in England, a Persian department attached to the Foreign Office, but of a very superior character to that which manages the toshakanna at present, ought to be established. Lord Canning would have better secured his object in establishing this Order, in which he has shown so much personal interest, had he accompanied the Royal notification by an imposing proclamation and by the publication of the statutes. Whether a second order bearing to the Star the same relation that the Bath bears to the Garter in England, will be created, depends on the issue of the present experiment. It should be distinctly understood, however, that Englishmen in India while content to give dignity to those decorations by sharing them with their native fellow-subjects, look for the true reward of distinguished services to such honours as are open to all their countrymen. To the natives of India K.S.I. is all valuable. To the Englishman it is a local reward, and must not shut him out from K.C.B.

At a time when their Sovereign is showing the nobles of India a new merk of her favour, they should remember that knighthood has its responsibilities, not merely in feudal loyalty and service, but in the exercise of those virtues which Spencer sums up in the line—"He loved simple truth and steadfast honesty."—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Honorary Native Magistrates.—A circular has been issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to the Commissioner of the Calcutta police, and to all district commissioners, desiring them to nominate a certain number of respectable natives in their respective divisions whom they consider competent to hold the offices of Honorary Magistrates, which are shortly to be created, both at the Presidency and the Mofussil. A list of the nominees, consisting of about fifty names for the town of Calcutta, has already been sent up by Mr. Wauchope.

OPTUM.—At the Calcutta opium sale on the 9th July the following prices were offered:

Chests. Average. Proceeds.

CAPTAIN SMYTH'S EXPEDITION.—The official letter to the Bengal Asiatic Society, asking them for information and advice to help Captain Smyth's Mission to Central Asia, describes it as "a small scientific expedition into the little known territories of Chinese Tartary beyond our Himalayan frontier. The expedition will probably be directed towards Ladak, the country north-east of Ladak, and that between Ladak and Lhassa." Information is asked as to geography and topography, especially the identification of the traditional Kailas of the Hindus and the measurement of its height; 2, Ethnology, especially the tribe on the borders of Kumaon or Bussahir who differ from both Bhooteas and Tartars; 3, History and Antiquities, especially the monasteries of the larger towns which possess translations into Thibetan of Sanscrit MSS., if not the original works; also inscriptions, coins, and the currency of the Thibetan States; 4, Zoology; 5, Geology, especially the magnificent crystals, borax lakes and sulphur mines; and, lastly, Botany. We regret to learn that there is some doubt if the King of Burmah will allow an English Mission to explore the route to Yunan via Bamo, as recommended by Colonel Phayre.

BANK OF BENGAL .- The accounts of the Bank of Bengal for the half-year ending 29th June show an income of Rs. 632,942 and an expendiditure of Rs. 104,451, leaving a net profit of Rs. 528,491. After adding a sum from the reserve fund and deducting Income-tax there is a sum of Rs. 535,000 available for division, which is equal to 10 per cent. per annum. During the half-year the sum of money was abundant and its value remarkably steady. On the 24th January the loan rates of interest were raised from 4% and 5 to 5 and 6 per cent. On the 3rd of April a further rise of one per cent. took place; since then there has been no change. The famine caused an unusual stagnation in trade. This successful result during a period of considerable difficulty is most creditable to the secretary.

PUBLIC RECORDS .- The committee appointed to calendar the records of the Imperial and Bengal Governments have fixed on a plan of procedure which has received the approval of Government. The earliest records in Calcutta date from 1748, seven years before Plassey. The committee's labours are to extend to 1833, a period of 85 years. The records of that time amount to some 18,000 volumes and 8,000 bundles. They intend to draw up an index in three parts:general Calendar of the principal contents of all valuable papers in all Public Offices in Calcutta, arranged indiscriminately in the order of chronological sequence; an Index to the Calendar arranged alphabetically according to the leading words or special subjects of the papers, and a Key to the Index. The Key will enable inquirers to find information under the four divisions of Domestic Affairs, Foreign Relations, Proceedings in England, and Trade, and under sub-divisions of these including all the subjects or special headings entered in the Index. We are glad to see that Lord Canning has negatived the proposal of the committee to make over valuable duplicates to such public institutions as the Public Library. The British Museum has found the evil of this. and it will be unnecessary when one great Muniment Room is provided as proposed.

CENTRAL ASIA.—We see from the Delhi Gazette that the Vakeel sent by the Shah of Kokan see ask the Indian Government for assistance in the shape of troops, has really arrived at Peshawur on his fruitless mission. He has been received by the Deputy Commissioner and has had a residence assigned to him. The last news from Kokan received by the Ameer of Cabul was to the effect that Yarkund, Kashghur, Uksoo, Aila, and Khotun, have been made over to the Russians by the Emperor of China. Preparations are going on for the cantoning of the Russian troops in them.

Chumparun, July 5.—Indigo prospects are very gloomy, as we had (at least here) seventeen inches of rain during the latter part of June. It is now blowing great guns, and clouds are passing over our heads at racing speed, as if mischief was brewing somewhere; but no rain falls at present. Paddy and Indian corn looking up.

BAULEAH, July 10 .-- You will be no doubt grieved to hear that this pretty little station is doomed to disappear very shortly. The Ganges has cut away the banks; and our main road, with its beautiful avenue of fine trees, two miles long, will soon be carried away. The public buildings are all in danger, also the private residences; one in particular, occupied by our collector, is likely to disappear next month. The billiard room has been pulled down already, and the table now graces the Annundanath library, much to the disgust of the reading residents and the educated natives. The Government appointed engineers to take steps to save the station. They studded the banks with thousands of bamboos, such flimsy breakwaters. that no sooner did the winds blow and the river rise, than the whole disappeared, and may now be in the Bay of Bengal.

Indian Photographs.—The Englishman states that the Home Government have called for photographic likenesses of representative members of each of the various tribes of Bengal, the Punjab, North-Western Provinces, Oude, Nepaul, Darjeeling, Pegu, Tenasserim, Singapore, Nagpore, Rajpootana, Madras and Bombay. The gallery required for the exhibition of these portraits will need to be a large one if members of all the tribes are to be depicted, and it will serve to give our countrymen in England some idea of the varied population and the extent of country contained in our Indian empire, a country embracing almost all the phases of climate, and a population differing, in almost every district, in language, dress, and peculiar customs. For instance, in Bengal we have the Koolin Brahmins, the Mookerjees, Chatterjees, Bannerjees and Gangoolys, the tribes of the Rajmahal Hills, the Southals, three or four different tribes on the south-west frontier, and as many on the north-east. Then in Cuttack we have the Oorias and the Brahmins of Juggernuath and Gyah. Then there are the tribes who accompanied the Koolin Brahmins into Bengal, the Ghose, Bose, Dutt, and Mittra. Again, in the Punjaub we have various tribes of Hindoos; Sikhs, Cashmere Pundits, Rajpoots of the Kangra Hills, and many Then come the different races of Oude. others. Pegu, Tenasserim, Rajpootana, and more than a hundred others. Altogether, including Madras, Bombay, and Singapore, the population of the Indian empire is constituted of upwards of two hundred and seventy distinct tribes, all of whom differ considerably in many points. There is no doubt that the study of these numerous phases of human nature will be full of interest; and it is to be hoped the idea will be properly carried out. The photographs should be large enough to represent all the peculiar characteristics of the costumes worn by the tribes: and, where practicable, women should be represented as well as men, to make the thing perfect. A written description should accompany each representation, giving minute details of the origin of the tribe, its present characteristics, and its general habits. Should all these requisites be carefully attended to, the photographic-gallery of her Majesty's Indian subjects will be by no means the least interesting object in the coming Exhibition.

COLONEL G. CAMPBELL, C.B.—Government has sanctioned the payment of Rs. 22,600, as compensation to Colonel G. Campbell, C.B., for his losses during the mutiny.

MAHARAJAH JUNG BAHADOOR, on the receipt of a letter from the Government respecting the Great Exhibition of 1862, has issued orders that no mere duplicates of contributions of 1851 are to be allowed, but only things strictly new are to be sent in. The Soubadar, whom we reported as having been arrested at Kamroop, for seditious operations among the tribes, was really sent from Nepaul to purchase elephants, but of course with no such commission as that which he is said to have made his chief business. He has been ordered to be sent in for trial at Nepaul.

FEROZE SHAH.—It is stated that strict search having been made for Feroze Shah, who was some time since seen in the Jeypore territory, it has been ascertained that he succeeded in passing into Persia, accompanied by nine followers only.

ALLAHABAD, July 7.—The last four or five days we have had incessant rain, one-half of the station being literally under water. Indeed, we have not had so heavy a fall for many years; by my rain gauge twelve inches having fallen since the 1st. Considerable damage has been done to old buildings, and there is scarcely a house that does not leak; some have even come down, and this, too, in the new station of Cannington. I am told an excellent crop of indigo is expected this neason, both in this and in the Robilcund district. Since the first of the month a comet has been visible nightly.

PESHAWUR.—On the 1st July a very heavy storm of rain visited Peshawur, succeeded by a succession of floods of unexampled violence. The stream which runs near the city became a roaring torrent, overflowed its banks, and overtopped the bridge, which was completely submerged, sweeping away the causeway leading to it, whence it rushed into the centre of the city, where the Kotwallee was surrounded by water to the height of 41 feet! Numerous houses in the city have fallen in, and whole villages in the neighbourhood are entirely washed away. The loss of property has been immense, for the approach of the torrent was so rapid that there was barely time, in many cases, to do more than save life. The whole country to the cast and north of the city is under water, though it has sensibly subsided, and some time must necessarily ensue before a correct estimate of the extent of the destruction can be arrived at. So terrible a visitation has never before occurred in the memory of the oldest inhabitants of Peshawur, and a long period must elapse before its effects will cease to be felt. The loss of property and of revenue will prove very great, and the quantity of grain which has been washed away must add to the general distress. The exertions of Captain Coxe, the Deputy-commissioner, in directing measures to preserve life and property during and after the storm and flood, were most commendable, and that officer mentions with approbation the activity and energy displayed by the Kotwal, Surfuraz Khan, and the Commissariat Gomastha, Kashi Nath. Subsequent accounts from Peshawur describe the devastation in the district as exceeding what was first anticipated .- Lahore Chronicle.

MARINE DEPARTMENT .- The changes in the Marine Department have been completed, and confirmed by the order of the Governor-General in Council of the 12th July, in conformity with the resolution of May 15th, published in the Gazette. From Friday last, then, the office of Superintendent of Marine is abolished, and Captain Rennie becomes the Controller of Marine Affairs and Secretary to the Government of India in the Marine Department; Captain Reddie officiating during his absence in Europe. The dockyards and inland fleets are now transferred to the Government of India; the Master Attendant's office, the pilot establishment, and all purely local establishments remaining under the Government of Bengal, with which the head of those establishments is placed in direct communication. Under this arrangement all Bombay and Bengal Marine affairs; the control of all matters relating to Indian ports under the various local Governments; the employment of Government vessels; engagement of transports for troops; river navigation, and other matters requiring reference to the Indian Government, will be through the new Secretary of the Marine Department, instead of through the Home and Military Departments.

SOLDIERS' SAVINGS.—It is an interesting fact that the sum at credit of the various European regiments in India, in the Savings' Bank when it was transferred to the Military Accountant was Rs. 14,86,884.

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—There has been so much sickness among the boys at the Lawrence Asylum, that they have been removed from the asylum into the hospital, and Government has ordered a tank to be constructed, and certain improvements carried out, which, it is hoped, will prevent the continued unhealthiness, from which all the inmates of the asylum have suffered.

they were opposed by an immense ill-armed rabble, they destroyed the three fortified towns or villages of Piskak, Itkichu, and Ashtak. This fact I have from a Noghu Tatar from the Government of Perm, who is now with me, and who was in those regions when this circumstance took hoped, will prevent the continued unhealthiness, from which all the inmates of the asylum have suffered.

JUBBULPORE, July 2.—Captain Foote, of the Hoshungabad Police, has had a narrow escape. He had occasion to punish his orderly in camp for cheating, or taking things without paying for them. The fellow waited till Foote was asleep, and then fired at his head, and bolted. Fortunately, he missed his aim. Of course none of his comrades are able to catch him.

Burdwan, July 10 .- The late downpour of rain has caused the Damoodar to rise considerably, and great injury has ensued, especially on the left bank. It has swept away a village near Rajahrampoor opposite to Jamalpoor, and what has become of the inhabitants we as yet know nothing. Some were found dead on the spot, and others were seen floating away down the river on their thatched roofs. I should be sorry to question the wisdom and experience of the engineers who suggested the removal of the embankment on the left bank of the Damoodar ; but it is the general opinion here that the course which has benefited the railway has been the cause of all this destruction and loss of life. I will write you more on this subject and let you know how many lives have been lost in an area of about 100 acres, owing to the removal of this embankment.

THE NORTH WEST.—A letter from the heart of the famine tract (Etawah, 11th July), published in the Delhi Gazette, contains the following gratifying news:—"The prospects of the season are, I am thankful to say, very favourable: for the last eight days we have had an incessant downpour, and last night it was especially heavy. The country around is flooded, but still this is preferable to the arid plains we have been accustomed to gaze on. The appearance of the fields, when not under water, reminds one of the grassy plains of Bengal, affords great relief to the eye, and makes the heart thrill with pleasure."

Mr. Atherton, a retired Bengal civilian, recently obtained land on favourable terms in the Kangra Valley, and settled as a tea planter. His sudden determination to give up his property and leave India led to the belief that he could not submit to Government interference. The Hills states that Mr. Atherton sold his estate at hirly times its original cost. He may have had some other unpleasant difference of opinion with the Government, but none connected with land tenure.

Cashmere.—A letter from Cashmere, dated 15th June, informs us that the Maharajah of Cashmere is at present occupied with arrangements for the marriage of one of his daughters to the son of Ram Singh, the rebel leader, who, when he escaped pursuit, took refuge in his territory. The Maharajah has had excellent sport of late, having killed numbers of tigers and other large game. He has lately engaged the services of European engravers for the purpose of engraving the treaty between himself and the British Government on plates of silver. All the European visitors who have recently been into Cashmere have now returned to their duties at Jummoo and elsewhere.

N.W. Frontier.—The position of Russia in its southernmost Asiatic territories is very similar to that of the British Government up here. There is no apparent desire on their part to extend anything except commercial influence beyond its present boundary, but it is often provoked to retributive incursions into the territories of its Mahomedan neighbours by the raids of roving tribes. Thus the Kokanees, last winter, came down in the vicinity of Kapal in Russian territory, and burned a great deal of grain and fodder which the Russians had collected. Hence, about five months ago, a Russian force of about 800 men entered the Kokan territory, and though they were opposed by an immense ill-armed rabble, they destroyed the three fortified towns or villages of Piskak, Itkichu, and Ashtak. This fact I have from a Noghu Tatar from the Government of Perm, who is now with me, and who was in those regions when this circumstance took place. The Russians having accomplished their Gazette.

HYDERABAD.-In continuation of our Hyderabad correspondence, up to June 25th, we (Englishman) have intelligence of a very serious dacoity, attended with murder, in Berar; and as the dacoity band kept the whole neighbourhood in disorder, a detachment of cavalry had been sent to apprehend or disperse them. Orders have been issued by the Nizam's Government for the immediate transfer of talooks yielding a clear revenue of thirty-two lakhs to the British Government, with an undertaking that, should there be any deficiency from the stated revenue, it shall be made good by the Nizam. The whole of the matters connected with the recent treaty have now been finally settled. The Resident has been empowered by the Nizam to confer magisterial powers on European officials within the limits of the railway enclosures, in all cases where British interests are concerned. The H. Battery Royal Artillery have departed from Hydrabad, for Masulipatam, whence they will embark for England.—June 26.—The discussion between the Nizam and his minister may now be said to have terminated happily. His Highness, since his declaration to his minister of his satisfaction with his conduct, has continued to behave graciously to him. On the occasion of the Eed he presented him with nine pieces of jewellery, the largest number that is bestowed on such occasions, as a khilut, of the value of fifty thousand rupees; and yesterday the dispute was finally adjusted by his Highness transferring to the charge of the minister, for the use of the public Government, the whole of the restored districts. Out of the revenues of these, I believe, his Highness reserves for the privy purse the sum of six lakhs of rupees a-year.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY have acted with wisdom in declining to concur with the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in urging on Government the division of the Diocese of Madras. The number of clergy in the whole Presidency is only 152, the division by a line drawn east and west would cause the bishopric of Madras to be shorn of its chief missionary fields in Tinnevelly, Travancore and Tanjore; and the increased facilities for travelling will render the superintendence of the missions by the Bishop of Madras more easy than ever. The society, too, look on the time as fast approaching when the Native Church in Southern India will be ripe for a native bishopric. India wants more missionaries and chaplains. Till she is well supplied with them bishops are an expensive luxury.

THE POH PAH MOUNFAIN .- A contributor to the Rangoon Gazette gives an account of a visit to the Poh Pah Mountain, in Burmah. It abounds with animals and birds of all kinds. On the bare summit there are several springs that eject torrents of water all the year round. Tigers are very numerous and savage, and to guard against them some singular precautions are adopted by the natives. Warm water thrown on the ground must not while cooling be stepped over; the wooden spoon or rice-stirrer must never be placed in a vertical position; two covers of a rice-pot must never be put over each other; two earnings must not be worn; and the branch of a tree must never be seized and the body raised thereby from the ground. Should any of these rules be violated, it is believed that the offender will invariably be carried off by a tiger.

THE GODAVERY.—It is understood, says the Madras Athenœum, "That the Supreme Government have sanctioned an outlay of five lakhs of rupees, for the improvement of the Godavery navigation, and that the works will be commenced forthwith, under the superintendence of Sir Arthur Cotton."

Loss or two Pilot Boats .- In consequence of orders received from the Master Attendant on the 21st July, four pilots, Messrs. Ingle, W. Anderson, H. Anderson, and Sculthorpe, proceeded in three pilot boats to lead the ships out of the harbour proceeding to sea. After having left the ships off the outer light vessel, they were returning into the harbour, when they met with strong wind and rain during the gale. One of the boats in which were twelve lascars and two pilots, Messrs. H. Anderson and Sculthorpe, were missed; and the other two boats reached Mudwan in safety; from there Messrs. Ingle and Anderson came to Bombay in a fisherman's boat and reported the circumstances to their superior officer. Accordingly Mr. Price, assistant to the master attendant, on the 22nd sent Mr. Goward, senior pilot, in H.M.'s steamer Goolanar in search of the missing boat, and to bring down the two other boats which are lying near Mudwan. She returned on the following day, and we regret exceedingly to state that of the three pilot boats which were in distress on their way back to our harbour, two are believed to have gone to pieces, and Captain Timmings, of the ship Attila, Mr. Anderson, junior, pilot, a young Parsee dubash, and eight lascars, are all drowned. The hands saved are Messrs. Anderson, senior, Sculthorpe, and Ingle, pilots, and the crews of two of the pilot boats. The bodies of Mr. Anderson, pilot, Captain Timmings, and the Parsee boy, have been picked up; those of the rest are still missing .- Bombay Gazette.

SHIPWRECK .- The Bombay Gazette records the total wreck off Aulibaugh, on the 16th of July, of the British ship Louisiana, 1,264 tons, Captain Cleaver, belonging to Charles Sanders, Esquire, of Liverpool. The Louisiana left Liverpool on the 2nd April, 1861, with a cargo consisting chiefly of iron for railways, and other general cargo. In the afternoon of the 16th, while about a mile off Aulibaugh, she encountered a severe gale and heavy sea, and lost her rudder, which completely disabled her, and in consequence she was drifted on a rock, where she became a complete wreck. The captain, officers, and men endeavoured to lower two light boats, but in this attempt five men and two boats were unfortnnately lost. The master very wisely prepared two large rafts to save them in the event of the ship breaking up during the night. In the morning of the 17th they succeeded in getting one life boat to shore with seven men, who were safely landed at Aulibaugh. The surfboat was also lowered, and the remainder of the crew were then brought on shore. The Mamlutdar of Aulibaugh took the Captain and crew to the Fort, where they have been comfortably provided for. The next morning the vessel went to pieces and altogether disappeared, the beach being strewed with the broken pieces of the wreck and the remains of the cargo. The Captain has arrived in Bombay, travelling partly by land and partly by sea. The men are still at Aulibaugh. Three officers and twenty seamen belonging to the late ship Louissiana have also arrived at Bombay in a country craft. They have all been safely lodged in the Sailors' Home, and through the exertions of Mr. Maidment, all their wants have been attended to.

SEDASHEWGHUR.—As there has been a good deal of discussion of late regarding the merits of Sedashewghur as a harbour of refuge on the Western Coast, we are glad to learn that its usefulness has now been placed beyond question. During the recent bad weather, the Indian Navy ship Euphrates, Lieutenant Williams commanding, was four days off Bombay without being able to make the harbour. Finding it necessary to seek shelter, the officer commanding ran his ship for Sedashewghur, and succeeded in entering that port, and obtaining quiet anchorage, without difficulty. After this, we shall probably hear nothing more about the impossibility of entering Sedashewghur during the south-west monsoon.

SUICIDE BY MR. W. J. TURQUAND, C.S .- POONA, July 12 .- Mr. William James Turquand, of the Bombay Civil Service, shot himself this morning. It is believed that Mr. Turquand was suffering from mental affliction; and indications of insanity were lately observable in his demeanour. Mr. Turquand had been under suspension for the last two years for insubordination, and was put on Dewanee allowance. He was a valuable servant of Government, and had proved himself very useful at times. He was a perfect master of the history of the Southern Maratha Country, and of the present Sirdars of the Deccan. The last appointment from which he was suspended was that of collector of Rutnagherry. He arrived in India in the year 1838. The Poona Observer gives the following account of this lamentable event :-- "The unfortunate gentleman, who had been living retired for some time in his cottage at Parbutty, had been latterly in a depressed state of mind from various causes, particularly with respect to the rumoured abolition of the Civil Service, and there is very little doubt but that the secluded life he had latterly led had induced a morbid and unnatural state of mental excitability. Yesterday morning, at about half-past eight, a servant hearing a crash in the direction of his master's room, proceeded thither to find the cause, and there saw Mr. Turquand stretched at full length weltering in his blood, his brains scattered about the floor, and a doublebarrelled gun lying by his side with one barrel discharged. Information was immediately given to the police authorities, and an inquest was held by Mr. Kemball, the first assistant to the collector of Poons, in the course of the day, and a jury of the following gentlemen:—Captain Francis, Captain Griffiths, Captain White, Captain Waddington and Captain Harpur. A paper was produced written by the deceased and found on the table of the room, and addressed to Sapoorjee, his Parsee servant, directing him to bury him in his garden, and ordering some private papers to be sent home by a personal friend, named therein, to England. After a full inquiry the decision arrived at was that the lamented gentleman had put an end to his life whilst in a state of temporary insanity. His remains were fixed to be interred in the cemetery this morning at six o'clock."

BLOWN AWAY FROM A GUN.-While H.Ma's I.N. steamer Semiramis was at Zansibar, firing a salute for some native chief, a man by the name of Wilson was blown away from a gun under the following circumstances, so far as we have learned. Wilson had struck home the cartridge with the rammer, which he had not drawn from the gun. The cartridge was pricked, and Wilson again bent down and seized the rammer, when Clarke, the gunner, immediately knocked the cap, and the unfortunate man was blown away overboard. His body was shortly after recovered by some seamen who were in a barge when the accident occurred. Clarke, when asked by the captain if he saw the gun's muzzle clear before firing, replied, "I did not look." Clarke was placed under arrest, and will shortly be tried by a navy court martial.

THE FOUZDAR OF AHMEDARAD was recently rewarded with a medal for his exertions in assisting in the capture of the late chief of Nurgoond. This chief murdered Mr. Manson, political agent in the Southern Mahratta country, and was taken by Mr. Frank Souter, then superintendent of police in Belgaum.

REDUCTION IN THE DOCKYARD .- The late order of the Government for reducing the dockyard establishment is now being carried out. A large number of the artificers and workmen have been informed that their services will not be required from the 1st August. It is said that the Government will abstain from building any more ships for some time to come.

THE MOHURRUM.—The Mohurrum has passed off with perfect quietness, notwithstanding the rumours of anticipated breaches of the peace by the votaries of Mahomed. These rumours, whether there were any foundation for them or not, put Mr. Forjett ill at ease for the two or three closing days of the festival.

BOMBAY GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY .- At the annual meeting of the Bombay Geographical Society, the Hon. W. E. Frere, Captain Barker, I.N., and Dr. Leith, were elected Vive Presidents. The society numbers one hundred and two members.

ZANZIBAR.—The Semiramis, I.N., Commander Worsley, which returned to Bombay from Zanzibar on the 17th July, after a very stormy passage of sixteen days, brings news that Syed Majdid, the ruler of Zanzibar, was at the date of her departure (the 1st July) dangerously ill, and that all hope of his recovery had been abandoned. If his illness has had a fatal result, this prince has not lived long to enjoy his dignities. The Semiramis conveyed to him the result of the reference made to the English Government concerning the disputes between himself and his brother and Suzerain, the Sultan-"Sultan," and not "Imaum" is now his correct title-of Muscat. The terms of the arrangement recommended by the Government of Bombay, and sanctioned by the Governorgeneral in Council, were, we understand, that Syed Majdid should retain Zanzibar, on condition of paying a tribute of 40,000 dollars a-year to his brother with two years tribute in arrears. The Zanzibar Prince declared that, if such were the will of the English Government, of course he must accede to it .- The French are still pursuing their old game of encroachment on the African coast; and there appears to be anything but good feeling between the consuls and the naval officers of the French and English squadrons. The latest claim made by our gallant allies is said to be to the protection of the whole island of Madagascar. Bombay Saturday Review.

RAILWAY ENTERPRISE .- In consequence of the growing demand for cotton, the Peninsular railway is being pushed on fast. The great Bhore Ghat works, on which £621,010 has been already spent, will be finished by the end of the year, and the Thull Ghat in May, 1863. The line beyond the latter will be opened other 85 miles to Chalesgaum next month, and thence for 74 miles to Bhosawul where the Nagpore junction is to be by the end of the year. The completion of the Nagpore line as far as Omrawuttee 134 miles, is promised from 1st June, 1863, and then we shall be in the very heart of the great cotton country. The distance to Nagpore is 128 miles farther. The Bombay, Baroda, and Central India railway has made considerable progress during the past year. There are now 993 miles open for traffic, on the Bombay extension line; 40 more will be completed during the present year, and the remaining few miles about June, 1863. On the Ahmedabad line, 34 miles from Doorla to Mehmoodabad with a break at the Mhyee river, will be ready by November; and 133 miles from Mehmoodabad to Ahmedabad, and the Mhyee viaduct probably by June, 1862. The past year, 1860-61, shows an increase of 70 miles of open line. The receipts from passengers were Rs. 61,033, and from goods Rs. 5,314. The total working expenditure was Rs. 46,558, and the net revenue Rs. 19,790, being equivalent to little more than a half per cent. per annum. The Bombay journals contain a report of the operations of the Sind Railway for the year ending 1st of May, 1861. The line was opened on the 13th of May, three years after its commencement. It is 112 miles long. All that remains to be done is the extension of the line to Keeamaree, the seaport of Kurrachee, three miles; and a branch of three miles from the workshops to Ghizrce. The expenditure has been at the rate of £12,000 a mile.

IMPORTS (Bombay, July 27),—Cotton Piece Goods.—Grey Shirtings of 40 in., excepting cloths of 8 to 84lbs., have been in steady demand at former rates; 45 in. and 50 and 54 in. reman much the same as before. Grey Longcloths are very dull. Grey Domestics dull as before. Drills are moderately inquired. T. Cloths in moderate request at former rates, Grey Madapollams quiet, but held firmly. In Grey Jaconets, Mulls, and Printers there is very little doing. Bleached goods remain in an unsatisfactory position as before, without inquires. Printed and Coloured goods remain much the same; the transactions are very small. Turkey Red Goods without any change of importance; few inquiries are making for Mulls and Dimity; sales have transpired in Cambrics, Prints, and Scarls. Jarns.—A very limited business has been done in Cotton Twist at former prices, owing to the firmness of lolders; No. 20 has declined in value in consequence of the heavy supplies of the local mills. Coloured and T Red Yarn have been more inquired after, but at reduced prices. Metals—The ers; No. 20 has declined in value in consequence of the heavy supplies of the local mills. Coloured and T Red Yarn have been more inquired after, but at reduced prices. Metals—The market has become quiet. The demand for Copper has become more duil, and the prices have receded. Yellow Metal is also duil. In Iron, English Bars, Hoop, Sheet, and Round Nail Rods are duil and lower in value; Swedish Bars are steady both in inquiry and value. Steel is largely held and dull of sale. Lead, Spetter, and Quicksilver are duil. The Plates in moderate inquiry.

EXPORTS (Bombay, July 27).—Cotton.—Since our last report a fair steady demand has prevailed in the market at former prices, and slightly higher than those even for superior qualities. Holders, with their scanty stocks, continue firm. Disceds.—Owing to the scarcity of stocks of both Liusced and Rapeseed, the holders continue firm, and not-withstanding the unfavourable advices from home the prices are a little dearer. Sesame and other seeds are out of stock. Madder Root.—Muscat, which only is available in the market, can be had at our quotations. Hemp duil. Itory is largely shipped by natives; stocks are much reduced. Opium.—The low prices ruling have stimulated demand.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, July 17 .- During the past fortnight the exports of our staple have not been on the extensive scale we anticipated. They do not, in fact, exceed 24,549 cwts., of which 18,347 are plantation and 6,202 native. Our total exports of both kinds are now more than 1,000 cwts. in excess of those for the corresponding period of last season, the figures being 560,000 cwts. against 559,000. The proportions are different, however. for while last season showed 413,000 cwts. of plantation kind, we have now 433,000, with only 127,000 native against 145,000 for last season.

The prospects for next season continue very gloomy. Our usual average yield on plantations is 51 cwts. an acre. It is pretty certain that in season 1861-62 the 90,000 acres of plantations will not yield more than four cwts. an acre all round, or say 360,000 cwts., instead of 460,000 to 500,000, which ought to have been the outturn had the seasons continued propitious. The yield per acre on the 30,000 acres held by natives will probably be still less; say 140,000 cwts. for the whole acreage, or 500,000 cwts. of both kinds, instead of the 700,000 on which we might have fairly calculated, but for the occurrence of two abnormal seasons. While such is the position of planting matters, mercantile affairs are little less gloomy in their aspect. For a score of years, we believe, Colombo has never been so deluged with unsaleable goods. The Chetty merchants and the Moorish traders are equally unable to buy fresh goods, while many of them require time to fulfil their engagements. The rice crops and the coffee crops of the natives having both failed, they are unable to buy or to pay for what they have bought. While such is the state of matters, vessel after vessel continues to arrive with fresh consignments, especially of cotton goods, some of which are being passed through the Colombo Custom House at valuations 30 per cent. below the usual average. Including cargo by the Cornwallis, just arrived, we hear that one firm, which has dealt largely and profitably in piece goods for the last two years, has at this moment more than £100,000 worth of cotton goods in the market. Other firms have goods in less proportion: £20,000, £15,000, and so on. As far as cotton goods are concerned, there can be no doubt that if their holders can only wait, better times will come. But it must not be forgot ten that our market is limited, even after allowing for all that the adjacent ports of Southern India can take off our hands. The trade has been overdone. Crops have suffered from unfavourable seasons, and the result is something like a commercial and financial crisis; not likely, however, to lead to much more than temporary embarrassment. Discount con planks of houses, clothes, and furniture, and Charles Wood's late Retirement Order.

With the certanty of short crops the planters have a prospect of being embarrassed by an overinflux of labour; and many of them feel inclined now to ask that the Pearl should be taken off the line between Colombo and Tuticoreen and restored to her original purpose of keeping up regular communication between the various ports of the island.

With regret we record the death of Mr. J. A. Carey, a planter, from apoplexy.

The health of the country is fairly good, but our friends up country are complaining grievously of excessive rain, which will not let the young berries mature.

Opinions must differ, however, for we observe that the compiler of the Ceylon Price Current reports that "there has been an abundance of rain throughout the country, favourable for growing crops, and in many quarters a further blossom is expected."

The same writer states that the "new Kandy crop of native coffee promises to be abundant." All the accounts which have reached us are of a precisely contrary tendency.

Amongst the passengers who leave the island by the steamer which carries this mail is Dr. Chapman, the Bishop of the Anglican Church. A contemporary states that an address signed by 800 members of the Church, over which he has borne so uneasy a rule, was presented to the Bishop .- Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA .- We take from the Singapore Free Fress the following account of the seaquake that devastated Simo, one of the Batu group, on the West Coast of Sumatra, on the 9th March last:- "Simo before the occurrence had thirteen campongs or villages, four of which, however, although they bore the names of former campongs, only consisted of a single hut, the rest of the houses having been from time to time removed to the other campongs. Besides these campongs there were huts here and there, inhabited by persons who watched the cocoanut trees and by swineherds. Previous to the disaster of the 9th of March there were on the island 120 houses and a population of 1,045; on this unlucky day ninety-six houses were destroyed, and 675 of the inhabitants, besides 103 temporary residents, lost their lives. The water ran up to the east of the campong Simo, but spared this campong, which is a little elevated, and being the farthest limit of the inundation the water appears to have lost much of its force there. Proceeding westwards, the traces of the storm-wave were more and more visible in the cocoanut trees torn up and broken, thrown together in masses, and in the bent jungle. Along the whole space swept by the water, being the entire circumference of the almost square island, with the exception of the east point, this devastation was more or less apparent for a hundred to a thousand paces from the shore, and in some places even much further inland. On the south and east side the shore was inundated and two houses with their inmates carried away, but only a few cocoanut trees were uprooted; at Lubu Lalafa, only, on the east side. the water seems to have been stronger, where, in a small plantation of 4,000 trees, only six remain. This difference in the force with which the water operated is probably to be accounted for in that the sea ran heaviest where it met with most opposition from the rocks. Of the campongs nothing more is to be distinguished than the stones here and there, on which the Batu islander places the posts of his house, or which serve as seats in the gatherings in the campongs, and the wells which are found near each campong. On some places were great piles of trunks of trees, beams and amongst them the bodies of the dead, which had not yet been removed, some in a state of decomposition, others completely stripped of the flesh by the vultures, dogs, and swine, of which last many were also drowned, but a number still wandered in the jungle. These skeletons and bodies presented a dismal sight, and rendered the atmosphere intolerable. On the place where the campong Gundia stood, on the west side of the island, there was one of these heaps, in which seven corpses were visible, and there must have been many more under it, judging by the smell. Amongst the seven bodies was that of a woman, nearly stripped of the flesh, but recognisable by her dress; she lay with the face on the ground, the extended right arm pressed down by a beam, the left arm drawn up, with the hand clutched in the ground. She was apparently trying to escape, but was caught by the falling beam. In some places broken skulls and skeletons were found, with the different parts scattered about. Orders were given to collect the bones and bodies together as soon as possible, and bury them. This is not the usual practice of the Batu islanders, who place the bodies of the dead in a well-closed chest on an elevated place under a roof, generally near the shore. It may be reckoned fortunate that most of the bodies were carried into the sea, because otherwise the tainted state of the atmosphere would probably have produced a contagious pestilence amongst the remaining population. The sea appears to have been most violent between the campongs Simo, Babaniregé, and Lakao, on the west side of the island, where the greatest number of persons perished. According to the account of a survivor of the campong Babaniregé, an earthquake was felt at the fall of the evening, shortly before the inundation. All the inhabitants then assembled, by order of the panghulu, on the open space in the middle of the campong, but a moment afterwards they tried to make their escape from thence, as they dreaded the fall of the houses, which were already tottering. They were driven back, however, by a rush of water, which approached from the back of the campong. Running back from this, they were overwhelmed by another terrific wave, which, out of 282 persons, swept off 206. The informant lost his wife and three children, and was himself, with other persons, swept into the jungle inland, where they were caught by the trees or managed to hold on. According to the account of this man, as well as others, two waves met each other at this point and wrought a frightful destruction. Large masses of rock were carried from the sea for 100 to 200 paces inland. A colossal old jawi-jawi tree, which formerly stood on the bay, lay with its roots and branches broken and twisted about 200 paces from the shore. The water appears to have retired with so much force that everything, except the heaps above mentioned, must have been swept into the sea. According to the accounts of persons belonging to other campongs, who escaped death, although with the loss of their relatives and property, soon after the earthquake very heavy reports were heard, like distant cannon shots, on which they observed at a great distance in the sea a wave approaching, that, according to their description, was of the height of a full-grown cocoanut tree, and which dashed with furious force on the island. Some saved themselves by an immediate flight, the rest were overtaken by the water and swept away, except such as were caught by the jungle, or possessed presence of mind and strength enough to hold on to trees. Three such waves succeeded each other. Some wonderful escapes took place. A child about a year old was found, two days after the disaster, in the top of a cocoanut tree twelve to fifteen feet in height. Although covered with wounds and suffering from fever, it was still alive. Another child was found alive on the breast of its dead

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE.

July 10.-Notification.-With reference to the general question of travelling allowance to the officers removed from one station to another, it was ruled, on Sept. 10, 1858, that the usual rate of eight annas per mile, in the case of covenanted civil servants, and four annas a mile in the case of uncovenanted civil servants, shall be allowed, for the distance travelled, to all officers who are forced to travel on the public service; but not to those who are removed from one place to another on promotion or at their own request.

It was subsequently decided, on March 11, 1859.

It was subsequently decided, on march 11, 1600, in respect to assistant commissioners in the Punjab, that those officers, whether covenanted or uncovenanted, and whether drawing 400 or 700 rupees a month, should all alike be allowed, when on duty under canvas in the interior of their districts, to draw 5 rupees per diem.

The Punjab Government now recommends, with reference to the case of Mr. O. Wood, assistant com-missioner, who had been transferred from Delhi to Missioner, who had been transferred from Delhi to Kurnal, and who had preferred a claim to travelling allowance at eight annas a mile, instead of four annas, the rate prescribed in the rule of Sept. 10, 1858, for the uncovenanted service generally, that all assistant commissioners, whether covenanted or uncovenanted, should be allowed the same rate of travelling allowance viz. aight annae a mile uncovenanted, should be allowed the same rate of travelling allowance, viz., eight annas a mile.

With this recommendation H.E. the Governor in Council is pleased to comply, and he accordingly resolves, in modification of so much of the Resolution of Sept. 10, 1858, as is applicable to assistant commissioners of the uncovenanted service, that officers of that grade in the territory of the Punjab shall, like assistant commissioners of the covenanted service, he allowed to draw travelling allowance at service, be allowed to draw travelling allowance at eight annas a mile when transferred from one station to another, except when such transfer is made on promotion or at their own request.

The New System of Finance.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Fort William, June 24.—Extract from the proceds. of the Govt. of India, in the Financial Dept., dated Read again the undermentioned papers on the subject of the new system of Budget, Audit, and Account :-

Letter from the Budget and Audit Committee, No. 6. dated 27th Oct., 1860.

Financial Resolution, No. 11,300, dated 14th Nov.

Letter from the Budget and Audit Committee, No. 10, dated 18th Jan., 1860. Financial Resolution, No. 852, dated 26th idem.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that, in para. 57 of the Budget and Audit Committee's Report, No. 6, of the 27th Oct., 1860, the dates fixed for the preparation of the several Returns were the following:-

The Departmental Budget Estimates to reach the Local Civil Auditors (Accountants) by the 1st Jan.

The Local Civil Auditors (Accountants) by the 1st Jan.

The Local Civil Auditors (Accountants) to close their several Budget Estimates, so as to reach the Local Govts. by the 15th Jan.

The Local Govts. to examine the Budget Estimates and send them in to the Financial Department of the Court of India on the 1st Feb.

and send them in to the Financial Department of the Govt. of India, on the 1st Feb.

The Local Civil Auditors (Accountants) to forward, direct to the Financial Department of the Govt. of India, their Estimates of cash requirements on the 1st Feb.

2. It was also proposed in the same Report that the Military and Naval Estimates should be prepared and forwarded, under orders of the Military Finance prep. to Eur.

Gen. List.—Ens. W. T. A. Thain, fr. May 31, to Department, to the Deputy Auditors-General at Madras and Bombay, who should incorporate them with the Civil Estimates in one General Statement for the Presidency, and that such General Statement should the Civil Estimates in one General Statement for the Presidency, and that such General Statement should be sent through the Local Government to the Financial Department of the Government of India, by which department it was intended that the Military and Naval portions of the Estimates should be sent for report to the Military Finance Department.

3. The Governor-General in Council also observes that, in para. 48 of the Budget and Audit Committee's Report, No. 10, of the 18th January, 1861, the Budget and Audit Committee repeated their opinion that this last-mentioned course should be followed; but instead of the combined Military and Naval Estimates being forwarded, after revision, direct to the Govt. of India by the Military Finance Department, they considered that it should be forwarded by that Department to the Auditor-General. In like manner they thought that the Civil Estimates of all the Presidencies and Administrations should be forwarded by the Financial Department of the Govt. of India to the Chief of the Civil Finance Department for revision, and when the Estimates of the two Departments have respectively thus been revised, that the whole should be consolidated into one General Abstract Estimate by the Auditor-General of India, for submission to the Financial Department of the Govt. stract Estimate by the Auditor-General of India, for submission to the Financial Department of the Govt. of India.

4. It will certainly, H.E. in Council thinks, be desirable, as time goes on, that the Chiefs of the Civil and Military Finance Departments should review the Budgets as they are received. There will, doubtless, be information at their command in connection with be information at their command in connection with the detailed expenditure of the several Presidencies, which will not be available elsewhere, and they will, in consequence, be able to offer a better opinion as to the heads under which reductions may be feasible in the expenditure of the several Departments of the several Governments than can be looked for from any other Officers. But it will be indispensible, in order to enable the Chiefs of the Departments to effect their revisions of the Estimates in proper time, that the Budget Estimates should be delivered on earlier dates than those mentioned above: and H.E. that the Budget Estimates should be delivered on earlier dates than those mentioned above; and H.E. in Council believes that it will also be advisable to rescind that part of the prescribed practice which provides for the consolidation, by the Auditor-General, of the whole of the Budgets into "one General Abstract Estimate" for submission to the Financial Department. Department.

Complaints have been received from more than one Local Deputy Auditor that sufficient time is not one Local Deputy Auditor that staticient time is not now allowed to compile their Budget Estimates from the Departmental Estimates. It has also been urged that 15 days are not more than sufficient for a proper revision of the Returns of the Local Deputy Auditors revision of the Returns of the Local Deputy Auditors by the Local Governments, and as, after the Estimates have been received in this Department from the Local Governments, they will have to be reviewed by the Chiefs of the Civil and Military Finance Departments before they are brought to be finally disposed of by the Govt. of India in the Financial Department, it is essential, H.E. in Council thinks, that the dates for the delivery of the Estimates should be changed. And, on a reconsideration of the question, he accordingly directs that the following dates be changed. And, on treconsideration of the quession, he accordingly directs that the following dates be observed in the place of those prescribed in para. 57 of the Budget and Audit Committee's Report, No. 6, of the 27th Oct.—

Departmental Budget Estimates to reach the Local

Civil Auditors (Accountants) by the 15th Dec.
The Local Civil Auditors (Accountants) to close

The Local Civil Auditors (Accountants) to close their several Budget Estimates so as to reach the Local Govts. on the 10th Jan.

The Local Govts. to examine the Budget Estimates and send them in to the Financial Department of the Govt. of India on the 25th Jan.

The Financial Department to send them on to the Chiefs of the Civil and Military Finance Departments in proposite improports.

Chiefs of the Civil and Allitary Finance Departments, immediately on receipt.

The Local Deputy Auditors (Accountants) to forward, direct to the Financial Department of the Govt. of India, their Estimates of Cash Requirements on the 1st Feb., as at present.

6. In regard to the consolidation of the Estimates bettle Auditor Council Law In Council Consolidations.

6. In regard to the consolidation of the Estimates by the Auditor-General, H.E. in Council considers the measure unadvisable, because it will, in all probability, not be final. Alterations in the Local Estimates will almost certainly be made in the Financial Department, and a fresh consolidated Estimate will, in consequence, have to be prepared. There will not either be time for both the consolidation by the Auditor-General and a proper review of the Es-timates in the Financial Department. The one or the other must therefore be omitted, and as there is no doubt of the necessity of a full and careful exa-mination of all the entries in the Financial Department before the Budget is finally passed, H.E. in Council has decided that the revision shall be made in the Financial Department before the consolidated Estimate is prepared, and also that the consolidation shall be effected in the Financial Department, as it has been done heretofore.

Marine Accounts.

From the Budget and Audit Committee, to T. C. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of India, Financial Department, Fort William, the 11th June, 1861. Sir,—By your letter No. 5 of the 15th October last, in reporting on the marine accounts, we pro-posed, paragraph 3, that the secretary to the super-intendent of marine should fulfil the duties of departmental auditor of marine accounts, who, in subordination to the superintendent of marine, and on his responsibility, would check and examine all charges save those for fixed establishments. The accounts thus passed provisionally would be submitted in detail to the civil paymasters, and ultimately to the deputy auditor general, according to the rules now established for detailed examination and independent check.

2. Again, paragraph 4, we proposed that the charges for fixed establishments in the marine should continue to be passed by the civil paymaster, and to aid that officer in the additional duties which might be imposed on him on account of the marine de-partment, we recommended an establishment ag-

3. By your letter No. 10,693 of the 20th October, the general approval of Government to the above principles was conveyed, and we were directed to submit the detailed propositions necessary to give effect to the plan.

4. Shortly afterwards the entire marine department came under the review of the civil finance commission. And as it was understood that considerable changes in system might be proposed, we ventured to defer the submission of further propositions on our part until the report of the commission should have been submitted to Government and orders needed thereon. That propositions have been been admitted to the propositions of the commission should have been about the propositions and the propositions are submissions. orders passed thereon. That report has now been received, and the orders of Government have been passed in the home department, bearing date the 15th May last. As those orders are succinctly stated in the resolution of the home department, it were superfluous for us to recapitulate them here. But viewing them in connection with our former plan, we find that it is no longer applicable to the marine department as now constituted. The department itself is much reduced in size; the appointment and the office establishment of the superintendent of marine are abolished, and that part of his duties necessary to be retained is transferred to the newly created office of naval secretary and controller of marine affairs.

5. According to the new system now sanctioned by Government, a part of the charges heretofore audited by the superintendent of marine will be audited by the military finance department, and a part by the deputy auditor general and civil paymaster. The distribution of the work will be as

ent—
The dockyard charges.
The inland marine charges.
To be audited in the civil department—
The pilot service charges.

The port charges. Miscellaneous charges.

There remains one category of charges, namely, that which is known as the sea-going marine.

6. We have carefully considered whether these charges should be audited as at present in the civil or in the military department, and we have come to the conclusion that it will be more simple and convenient if the duties of audit and secont follow the venient if the duties of audit and account follow the distribution of work, generally prescribed in para-graph 8, of the resolution of Government above quoted, according to which the whole of the marine charges and accounts under the Government of India will be subjected to the examination and audit of the military finance department, while those which remain under the Government of Bengal continued to be passed in the civil department.

7. It will then only be necessary that the military 1. It will then only be necessary that the military finance department make provision for the separate exhibition of marine charges by means of abstract returns or a subsidiary set of books to be submitted periodically to the accountant general, by whom they will be entered in their proper place as civil charges, credit being taken for such sums as may have been disbursed for the purposes of the military department.

8. For the duties that will thus remain with the 8. For the ditties that will thus remain with the civil department, we believe that a special examiner of marine accounts, as at first proposed, will not be required. The more difficult portion of the audit work will be transferred to the military finance department. The civil charges will be such as the civil paymaster can deal with without further assistance and we trust they deliving acceptibile. civil paymaster can deal with without further assistance, and we trust that the additional establishment will not be needed. As regards fixed charges, the audit of these is settled by existing rules. As regards contingent charges they will in future be of a comparatively limited character, and we believe that the civil paymaster will be able to check them sufficiently.—We have, &c.,

"2. The construction by you have put upon the term 'Services in India,' used in the 1st clause of the Royal Warrant, in describing the qualification for promotion to the rank of surg. maj., is not strictly in accordance with the intention of H.M.'s Govt. The promotion to the rain of surg. man, is not streetly in accordance with the intention of H.M.'s Govt. The promotion to this rank of all surgeons who have been 20 years in the service from the date of first admission will not, however, be cancelled, but in future it must be laid down that no time passed out of India can be reckoned towards the qualification for the rank of surg. maj., beyond the proportion of furlough which is, or may be allowed to reckon as service for retiring pension.

"3. For the reasons stated in the 4th† and 5th paragraphs of your despatch, H.M.'s Govt. consent to relax the rule in Clause III., requiring two years' regtl. duty as asst. surgeons to qualify for prom. to the rank of surgeons, in favour of asst. surgeon now near their prom. who, having being employed on civil or other duties, have not completed the requisite service. They desire that this rule be carefully observed in future, and that the rule in Clause III. of the Royal Warrant be observed strictly in the case of all asst. surgeons whose term for prom. under the of all asst. surgeons whose term for prom. under the old rule may come after two years from the date of publication of this decision in Calcutta.

"We have promoted to the rank of surgeon major all surgeons who have been twenty years in the service from date of first admission."

Extract paragraphs 4 and 5 of letter No. 14, dated 17th July, 1861:—
"It is pointed out by the principal Inspector general, medical department, that there are many assistant surgeons whose promotion is close at hand, who have been serving in extra regimental posts which have heretofore been considered equivalent to regimental service, but who will not come under the provisions of clause 3 if it be literally acted on; and that there are others who, from the exigencies of the service, have been employed at civil stations without having performed the prescribed military duty, who are in like manner ineligible for promotion.

prescribed military duty, who are in like manner ineligible for promotion.

"In favour of these Mr. Forsyth advocates an exception, and we beg to recommend that the assistant surgeons so situated may, notwithstanding their disqualification, be allowed their promotion, but that the rule in the Royal Warrant be enforced strictly in the case of all assistant surgeons whose tenure for promotion may be arrived at in periods beyond two years from the date of publication of the decision of her Majesty's Government on this reference."

The prospective extension of these periods announced in pars. 86 of the G.O. by the Govt. of India, No. 332, of April 10, renders it peculiarly necessary to remind medical officers that it is their duty to limit the period named in the m.c. ssities of the applicant in respect to recovery of health alone.

COTTON SEED FOR INDIA.—In their efforts to meet on as large a scale as possible the requirements of the cotton cultivator of India for a better description of cotton seed than that indigenous to the country, the Cotton Supply Association are receiving most valuable co-operation from the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. The directors of the company having, with distinguished liberality, signified their willingness to convey free of freight, on account of the Associstion, one ton of cotton seed by each of their steamers to Bombay, Madras, and Calcutta, the offer was, of course, gratefully accepted. The result is that four tons of seed (Egyptian) per month are now being regularly shipped by the association to those parts from Suez. Experiments with various kinds of seed show that the Egyptian variety is admirably suited to the soil and climate of India. Samples of cotton grown from it in that country, and forwarded to the Association, have been valued at a high figure, and considered stronger, finer, and more marketable quarter. Inscription on the Havelock Statue. -Although the statue to the memory of General Havelock in Trafalgar-square has been up some time, the inscription has only just been placed upon the pedestal. On the front the inscription is as follows:—"To Major-General Sir Henry Havelock, R.C.B., and his brave companions during the campaign in India. 'Soldiers,-Your labours, your privations, your sufferings, and your valour will not be forgotten by a grateful country! —H. HAVELOCK.'" The inscription on the back of the pedestal is as follows:—"The force commanded by Havelock consisted of the Staff, cavalry, Volunteers, 12th and 13th Irregulars, 3rd Oude Irregulars; Royal Artillery-3rd Company, 8th Battalion; Bengal Artillery-2nd Company, 3rd Battalion; 1st Company, 5th Battalion; 6th Company, 9th Battalion; Bengal Engineers; Infantry-5th Fusiliers, 84th Regiment, 64th Regiment, 90th Light Infantry, 78th Highlanders, 1st Madras Fusiliers, Ferozepore Regiment of Sikhs. -Behnes sculpsit." It may be mentioned that the bronze of which the statue is composed is just in the state in which it came from being cast in the furnace, but that since its exposure to the atmospheric influence it is gradually assuming the appearance of a black, instead of a bright bronze, and which will soon cause it to harmonise in colour with its companion statues in Trafalgar-square.

COTTON. It has been said that whoever can make two blades of corn grow where only one was grown before, is a benefactor to the whole human race. Just now it is not corn so much as cotton that is wanted, at least in this country. Manchester will regard that man as a true patriot and philanthropist who shall produce a pod of cotton where no such thing was ever gathered before. It appears that not much is to be expected from Egypt, although that fertile land is emineutly fitted for that peculiar cultivation. The scanty population, the natural result of bad government, cannot furnish the necessary amount of labour for any but cereal crops, and even the small number of four or five thousand labourers abstracted from agricultural pursuits for the construction of the Suez Canal is felt as a serious inconvenience. The fellahs, too, resemble the ryots of India in poverty and improvidence, and like them are compelled, as it were, to discount the next harvest by accepting advances. But if even in India under British Government this system is attended with manifold disadvantages for lender as well as for borrower-especially where the former happens to be a European-it is still less likely to answer under a foreign Government and that an Egyptian one. It is true the Pasha promises to afford every facility for the enforcement of contracts, but we shall be greatly surprised if the capitalists of Manchester will be tempted to invest their money where they can exercise no control over it. In India, again, there is no doubt that cotton can be grown in any conceivable quantity. There is abundance of land suited for its production, and in the details of cultivation—to use the Governorgeneral's own words-"the native of India has little or nothing to learn from the agriculturists of other quarters of the globe." But in the important points of gathering, cleaning, and transport, there is admitted to be much room for improvement. It is not, however, the province of the Government to interfere in these matters, with the exception of facilitating means of transport and that cannot be done all at once. In the process of gathering, the natives are extremely careless and not a little dishonest, but they are sufficiently alive to their own interests to become more careful if they find it to be worth their while to exclude leaves and dirt. Much may be done in this respect by the agents employed to purchase the produce; and as for ginning and packing, it will probably be found expedient, if not actually necessary, to establish central depots or stations, where these operations can be conducted under European superintendence. As it was in the case of indigo, so will it be in that of cotton. To secure a really good article, and to be able to rely upon the bulk being equal to the sample, European honour and intelligence must be introduced. Factories will, therefore, gradually be established in the best cotton-growing districts, and much the same system adopted that prevails with regard to indigo. Indeed, this is the only possible method to pursue until Europeans are enabled to purchase the fee-simple of the land. At present small estates can frequently be obtained subject only to the Government land-tax, but there are many obvious objections to small lots of land interspersed with estates belonging to natives, and destitute of means of intercommunication. Still it is to India that the manufacturers of Manchester must now turn their attention, but not, as they have hitherto done. simply to grumble at, and find fault with, the Government.

WHICH IS WHICH?

In our last number we briefly alluded to Mr. Morris' Reports on the indigo districts in Jessore, from which it clearly appeared that a combination against payment of rent existed in that province. We have now before us a series of reports written in a very different spirit. They are drawn up by Mr. Montresor, who was deputed as Special Commissioner to investigate the actual state of affairs in Nuddea. The unmistakable bias in favour of the ryots and to the prejudice of the planters that pervades every paragraph of these tediously prolix papers-they occupy upwards of seventeen columns of the Englishman-greatly detracts from their worth, and destroys all confidence in the conclusions arrived at. According to Mr. Montresor, the ryots were not only eager to settle their rents, but even offered to pay in advance on account of the ensuing year. In fact, the only difficulty he encountered in his progress through the province arose from the reluctance of the village tehsildars, or factory collectors, to accept payment and give proper acknow-ledgment. It "transpired"—an ambiguous expression not unfrequently used by this gentleman-that the tehsildars were in the habit of receiving a gratuity for themselvessomewhat similar to our "luck money"—in addition to the rent they collected for their employers, but which they feared to lose if the matter were settled in court. In some cases, indeed, the ryots did refuse to liquidate in full the claims that were made upon them, but only because they disputed the justice of the planters' assessment. They were willing, they said, to refer the matter to judicial arbitration, and to abide by the result. It certainly does appear that the amount of outstanding balances was considerably less than had been previously represented, and there is some reason to be lieve that the factory collectors occasionally appropriated to their own temporary use the instalments paid to them by the ryots. The planters are unavoidably at the mercy of their servants, and are compelled in a great measure to submit to their lax, if not positively dishonest, mode of conducting business. The ryots in Nuddea, we are told, "invariably denied any repudiation of their obligations as rent payers, than which, it is well known, few exist more paramount in popular estimation, or more binding on the conscience of native cious bit of "tag," and we commend it to Mr-Tom Taylor for the finale of his next Indian comedy. "In some cases," continues Mr. Montresor, "it was the factory that was indebted to the ryots, and altogether there was a general confusion of accounts." On the part of the ryots it is alleged that they "object to enhanced assessment without a judicial ruling; they want receipts which will give them security against further demand; and they protest against the unauthorised and illegal exactions which the Tehsildars demand as their right." When these judicial decisions were adverse to them, they were "often followed by prompt payments, and sometimes the money was paid into Court as soon as the suit was lodged." There was no difficulty in the realisation of decrees, and "no case of distraint and sale was found necessary when suits were tried in my presence; but decrees may have been realised in this way since my departure." In other words, the fear of the great man and his escort of military police overweighed for a time the love of money, but as soon as the immediate cause of apprehension was removed the old propensity returned in full force. With delightful simplicity Mr. Montresor describes his surprise, that although he particularly explained to the ryots that his mission had nothing to do with the cultivation of indigo, "it is still no less a fact that villagers, previously unwilling to sow, went, on my arrival in the neighbourhood, of their own accord to one factory, and entered into engagements by which the ryottee cultivation has been largely increased." The fact is easily enough accounted for. In the presence of the Special Commissioner the ryots were no longer afraid of the budmashes who had previously overawed them, and so naturally resumed their ancient pursuits. As to the existence of any real combination to refuse payment of rents, Mr. Montresor laughs the idea to scorn. "I cannot," he says-

"I cannot avoid the conclusion that, though rents have been withheld by many villages in estates con-nected with factories, and only in those estates, no general agitation against the payment of lawful rents is to be traced anywhere in Nuddea. No refusal is to be found on any estate where the zemindar-European or native—is not also planter. No refusal is traceable of which like examples, though of a more is traceable of which like examples, though of a more limited extent, are not to be found in the history of many a controversy between zemindar and ryot in other districts. And no refusal is traceable which the ordinary action of the law, carefully administered by sufficient agency, is not perfectly competent to

There has been no refusal to pay-the rents have only been "withheld," a charming euphuism that must be very consolatory to the planter-zemindar. Notwithstanding the assertion that no sort of combination exists, we find in the following paragraph an admission that the ryots have exhibited "a power of union" which is "worthy of the deepest attention." We confess our inability to reconcile these opposite statements. How did the "power of union" display itself, if not by "combination"? and why is it "worthy of the deepest attention," if it be not of a dangerous and antisocial character?

"Lastly," observes the special Commissioner, "as to the alleged 'wish of the ryots to drive Europeans out of the country, and as to the means whereby such combination, if existing, is worked and kept alive, I can only say that I could discover no such motive on the part of the native community. The ryots were respectful, orderly, anxious for advice and explanation, and, considering the state of excitement in which the district has been for more than a cultivators, taken as a body." This is a deli- twelvemonth, their whole demeanour, though they were at times liable to excitement, was such as to | 45. J. A. Hopkins, Emmanuel Coll., Cambridge 1214 call forth my surprise rather than to demand my | 46. H. F. Tyrrell, Trinity College, Dublin ... 1208 condemnation. But it is not to be denied that they | 47. G. J. Richards, Brasenose College, Oxford... 1207 condemnation. But it is not to be defined that they have throughout exhibited a power of union in their several talooks and villages, an intelligence, knowledge of their own rights, and an apparent determination to enforce and uphold them, according to the measure of their ability, such as are worthy of the deepest attention; but I could not trace out or hear of any one agitator who made it his business to go about the country and minister to the excitement. At the same time, I may mention that, in several villages that I passed through, I heard some of the European planters spoken of in most respectful and favourable terms."

Very likely Mr. Montresor failed to discover "any one agitator who made it his business to go about the country." The professional demagogue has not yet been introduced into India. There is no Bengalee Mr. Bright to deliver set speeches against "the bloated aristocrat." nor are temperance meetings held to indulge in intemperate language. Individual agitation is superseded by "power of union," -or what common people call "combination." and when this "power of union" exhibits itself in "withholding" rent, then these common people speak of a "combination to refuse payment of rent." It is very satisfactory, however, to learn that some of the European planters are spoken of in a respectful and favourable manner, and we only hope that they will duly appreciate the compliment. It is certainly preferable to being thrown "upside down," or having a nose bitten off, as happened to the unfortunate gentlemen who figure in the truculent drama patronised by the Rev. James Long.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

"The success of the Company, even in its earliest years, eccived the marked attention, and elicited the surprised comments of writers best acquainted with the history of In-comments of writers best acquainted with the history of Insurance Companies.

"Fire Preniums for 1860 EQUAL the Total Fire Premiums for the SEVEN YEARS 1845 to 1851.

"Life Premiums for 1860 EXCEED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS ending 1852.

"Purchase of Annuities in 1860 LARGELY EXCEEDS the similar receipts for the first TEN YEARS—1845 to 1854.

"This progress, it is believed, is unsurpassed, considering that it applies to each of the three branches of the business."

FIRE BRANCH.

"The Fire Branch has certainly shown no exhaustion during the year 1860 of that impetus which had previously brought it to a position of the first magnitude among the Insurance Companies of the United Kingdom. The Fire Premiums in 1859 had advanced to the sum of £228,314. 78.

3d. In 1860 the amount of Fire Premiums has arrived at a sum of £262,977. 198. 11d., showing an increase of £34,663. 128. 8d., exceeding the large advance of the preceding year; so that in two years the Fire Revenue of the Company has been enhanced by the enormous sum of £66,829. 17s. 5d.

"The Parliamentary Report of Returns of Duty paid to Government for the year 1860 exhibits the augmentation of the business in a more prominent way, as it affords the means of comparison with other Companies. The Proprietors will be gratified to learn that the Increase of Duty paid by the Royal in the last year is more than double that of any other Companies eren approaches to 50 per cent. of the advance of this Company. Our increase actually equals 30 per cent. of the entire increase of the whole of the Metropolitan Offices combined, whilst of the Provincial Offices it forms upwards of 30 per cent. of the total advance of the other 28 offices established out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

stablished out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

"The Reports of the Company for several years have had invariably to announce a constant periodical expansion of Life Business, the new Policies of each succeeding year showing an advance over the one that had immediately preceded it. A similar result is shown in the year 1860, the Premiums on New Policies, after deducting Guarantees, being £15,079.17s. 10d., which is an increase in that item of £1,993.17s. 5d. above the amount received for the year 1859.

"But swen this advance is small when compared with the sudden and remarkable momentum which has been given to this branch of the business in the present year (1861).

"It was not until the commencement of the year that the public seemed to have become fully acquainted with the fact that the Royal Insurance Company had published late in the last year an account of the investigation into the sessets and habilities of its Life Department, under a novel form, and in as plain and intelligible a manner as the abstruseness of the subject admitted, together with the entire statements and valuations necessary for that purpose.

"It is conjectured, from the extensive notices of this Pamphlet and its accompanying Diagrams which have appeared in the Periodicals of the day, that it has largely attracted the attention of vast numbers of persons in all parts of the United Kingdom, as well as in other parts of the world. Indeed, a most satisfactory and conclusive evidence that such is the case is afforded by the lact that the Sum Assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the present year, is actually fifty per cent. is excess of the sum assured in the corresponding mouths of the year 1860, although the later amount in itself exceeded the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

"If this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company would, with respect to the amount of its new business, be at once placed (at least with one or two exceptions) at the head of all the Insurance Companies doing business in t

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British MAT OI INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets. Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £3. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The spicet kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all statious, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets.—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £3. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

Established under Special Act of Parliament in 1834.

At the Twenty-seventh ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of this Society, held on the 8th of May, 1861—

The Profits of the last Five years were declared to be £208,537, 2s. 7d.; one-fifth of which is divisible between the Assurers and the Shareholders, in the proportion of three-fourths to the former and one-fourth to the latter. Restricting the actual division to the sum of £39,828, 18s. 8d., the Directors announced a reduction of 45 per cent. from the premiums of all policies entitled to participate, being 5 per cent. above the reduction of last year. Thus, the premium upon a policy effected in 1856 on a life aged 40 is reduced this year from £31, 10s. to £17, 6s. 6d., and all others in proportion.

be attributed one of the most remarkable and useful discoverres of the day, that of a substance for the construction of artificial teeth, gums, and palates, so thoroughly adhesive us to fix securely, without the use of those troublesome adjuncts, spirial springs. It is, in fact, the most perfect substitute for the natural teeth that can possibly be desired, and may be said truly to attain the see plus ultim of art. The substance, for which a patent has been obtained, is purified Indiarubber, which can be moulded to every irregularity of the gums and teeth in the most perfect manner, forming, as it were, an artificial periosteum to the teeth, keeping them from

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The SAPE REGULATORS.—To keep the human frame in health, or even to maintain its life, three great systems must work well—the breathing, circulatory, and the nervous. These are all non-rished by our food through the wonderful process of digestion; any weakness in it soon acts unwholesomely on one of the three essentials. Holloway's Pills pand against this mintoward result by assisting nature and socuring the complete digestion of all mutritive substances in her secret and living laboratory—the stomach, whence nothing escapes ull thoroughly acted upon. Holloway's Pills likewise regulate the perisaltic action of the bowels, and excite the necessary absorption of all nutritious matter from the dissolved food in its passage through the intestines.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news brought by the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd of July has, in a great measure, been anticipated by the Bombay Mail of the 27th of that month. The principal topics of discussion appear to be the proceedings of the Legislative Council, and the trial of the Rev. James Long for libel. The reverend libellist has been found guilty of calumniating the editor of the Englishman newspaper, and also the whole body of indigo planters, by superintending the publication of an English version of a Bengalee drama entitled the "Nil Darpan." Five hundred copies of this pestilent libel were priented by Mr. Long's orders, and paid for by him previously to being sent to the office of the Bengal Secretariat, whence they were despatched under the official frank to various persons both in India and in England. As to the facts of the case there was no dispute, the only question being as to the reverend gentleman's motives. According to his own account he was only anxious to impart to the European community some idea of the light in which they were regarded by the natives, but, strange to say, he omitted to forward a single copy to any one of the gentlemen affected by these slanderous imputations. A Special Jury, consisting of ten Europeans and Eurasians, an Armenian and a Parsee, have therefore, after a careful trial before Sir Mordaunt Wells, which lasted two days, returned a verdict of guilty on both counts, but sentence was deferred until the day of the departure of the

In the Legislative Council an interesting debate arose out of a new financial statement made by Sir Bartle Frere, the purport of which was given in our last Summary. Sir Barnes Peacock took advantage of the opportunity to recur to the Mysore Grant, and moved the following resolution, in order to prevent for the future any similar application of the public money:-

"That except so far as relates to arrears of duties on taxes due, or to offences committed, or to acts previously done, the provisions of this Act and of Act XXXII. of 1860, and of Act XXXII. of 1860, shall cease to have any force or effect, if at any time the revenue of India shall become chargeable with any new or extraordinary pension or gratuity, or with any increase of any extraordinary pensions or any new or extraordinary pension or gratuity, or with any increase of any extraordinary pensions or annuities granted in any one year, or any one period of twelve calendar months, amounting in the whole to more than Rs. 200,000 or £20,000 sterling, or with the payment of principal or interest of any Government promissory note, or other Government security issued after the passing of this Act, and made payable to any person or persons by way of pension or gratuity, or without adequate consideration given."

Sir Charles Jackson supported his colleague, and Messrs. Erskine and Seton-Karr agreed in principle with the learned Judge, but voted against his motion as likely to embarrass the Government. The motion was therefore rejected by a majority of six to four.

Sir Bartle Frere also moved the third reading of the Paper Currency Bill, into which he introduced a very important amendment, reducing the lowest denomination of notes to five rupees; but we regret to say that this wise innovation was prevented by the timidity, or o bstinacy, of a majority of the Council. On this subject we shall probably have something to say in our next issue.

In answer to numerous inquiries, we take this occasion to explain that lieutenant-colonels of the Engineers and Artillery Corps are not included in Sir Charles Wood's Retirement Scheme. There can be no doubt, we imagine, as to their being entitled to the £50 bonus promised to all officers who at once notify their intention to retire from the army, but as there exists no desire to lose their services, no further inducement to retire will be held out to them.

It is stated that the Secretary of State for India has ample funds in hand to meet all possible wants up to the end of the year, even if the railway companies should find it necessary to apply for aid. At the same time an increasing expectation prevails that these companies will be able to raise enough for their requirement without appealing to the Government.

Casualties by Death in the Armies of India reported since last Publication.

BENGAL.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS ON FORGERY. Probably the functions of the Court over which I now preside have in name ceased to exist, and other duties will devolve upon the Judges of the Supreme Court. Those duties will be cheerfully and willingly performed. No reference to private feelings or personal convenience will have any weight with myself, the Lord Chief Justice, or Mr. Justice Jackson; no obstacle will be thrown in the way of carrying out the intentions of her Majesty's advisers at home; no complaint will be made that we have fresh duties imposed upon us, which we did not contemplate; but I speak the feelings of the Lord Chief Justice, myself, and Mr. Justice Jackson, when I say that we shall cheerfully perform the additional duty imposed upon us. The sooner the Judges of this Court go forth on circuit to administer the law throughout the length and breadth of this land the better for the present and future welfare of the country. The great improvement which has taken place within the last two years in its Criminal history is, without doubt, mainly attributable to the unwearied exertions and great assiduity of the Chief Justice. To him, and to him alone, is due the gratitude of the people of this country, for the immense exertions which he has made, and still continues to make, in the cause of justice, and the eradication of crime. The good which he has been the means of doing is incalculable; it is daily and hourly manifest in the Insolvent Courts, in the Civil and Criminal Courts, and its influence is felt throughout the country. The attention and care which he invariably exercises in unravelling the most complicated and difficult cases have, coupled with the assistance of his brother judges, tended most materially to this result. I am not making these remarks without good cause. I am about to relate a circumstance which has been lately brought under my notice, and the truth of which I have taken means to ascertain. It shows a complicated and complete system of forging and counterfeiting within a few miles of Calcutta, such as has never before been heard of After hearing the particulars, a question must naturally arise: what has the Government of India been doing for the last fifty years in the way of checking crime? What protection or security is afforded to life or property state of things is permitwhen such a state of things is permitted to exist? The sooner the judges go forth on circuit to administer the provisions of the penal code the better, for the ends of justice. At Midnapore, a few days ago, two men were convicted of forgery, and sentenced to a long term of transportation. I first noticed the report of the case in the newspapers, and made my own inquiries from a reliable source. These men, I am proud to say, were brought to justice mainly through the perseverance and energy of a native magistrate Their arrest has led to the discovery of an immense number of forged seals and documents in fact, a complete system of forgery and counterfeiting. In a large iron box was discovered, among others, a counterfeit of "the seal of the Calcutta High Court of Appeal," "the seal of Shah Allum Padsha, for forging grants of rent free lands, dies for forging nearly every description of Government stamps, the seals of nearly all the zemindars of the immediate neighbourhood, forged rent cheques of Heeralol Seal, the seals of Messrs. Dent and Young, dating as far back as 1780, and there is every reason for believing that this system exists every fifty miles throughout the country. The spot at which this discovery has been made is a small district. What security is offered to life or property in this country so long as such a system is allowed? The two men, the two poor ignorant wretches, the tools or instruments of other influential and designing men, have been convicted and transported, but who are the really guilty parties? Who are the men that have probably for years been pursuing this stom of dounterseiting, and who have escaped treaty, from the Chinese, an Imperial firman or the native character? None but those who have carefully studied the matter can conceive the amount of undetected crime in this country. Forging in India is as common as iron-forging in England. Workshops can be found within a few miles of each other. Europeans or natives embark their capital in this country, when such a system as this is known to If I refrain from speaking out, and letting the world know the real state of crime in this country, who will do so? If the Queen's Judges who are free and independent of any power in the land, shrink from doing so, how will the public know the real condition of the country? If the present state of things is allowed to continue, such a system of forgery will prevail that both Europeans and Natives will be plundered of their just rights, and will find themselves unable to grapple with the evil. But, gentlemen, I trust a better state of things will in a few short years prevail. The judges of this Court will, with the aid of the Criminal Code, the increased facilities which the Circuit Courts will provide throughout the country, coupled with the able assistance of the interpreters of this Court, effectually grapple with the difficulty, and I rejoice that the enlarged functions of this Court will so greatly facilitate the eradication of crime; and, in saying this, I speak the feelings of the Lord Chief Justice, who is firmly convinced that the sooner decisive action is taken, the sooner will safety be secured. The extent of this forging system is unknown; nearly every seal of the wealthy Zemindars, for a circuit of some miles, was discovered in the possession of those two men, to be used by the ryot against his landlord as occasion required; these are obtainable for a few annas each. And then we are told that the natives are oppressed. I grant that every reasonable protection must be afforded to the native, but their crimes must be traced out and punished. I am sorry to have occupied your valuable time to such a length, but I think my observations have been entitled to your consideration. It is impossible to have a worse system than the prevailing one, and the sooner a change is made the better. I believe that in the course of ten years more real good could be effected in the character of the natives of this country than has heretofore been made. What special ordinance or declaration has been made denouncing this frightful evil?-an evil which makes a man feel that he has the power of robbing his neighbour at will, for a few annas. The important part which the Lord Chief Justice has taken in administering, not only the criminal law of this country, but in making laws, and assisting in its councils is well-known. It would be impossible to express the amount of gratitude due to him; he has been the presiding genius, if I may use the expression, and when his services-eight years of unequalled mental labour, are ended—I do say that although the people of England have not recognised his services in the way they unquestionably merit, still, the people of this country will, one and all, be ready to acknowledge his worth, and accord him the gratitude which his long-continued devotion to the welfare of this country entitle him to .- Englishman.

THE EXPEDITION INTO CENTRAL ASIA.

The Central Asian expedition, projected by Lord Canning, is an undertaking that will meet with favour and support from every class of the European and Indian communities. It is a bright closing effort of his administration, for the benefit of science and commerce, in that immense tract of fertile country where Russia It is honed enjoys almost entire monopoly. that the proceedings of the expedition will be armed with every compatible degree of dignity and authority, and a sufficient guard to act on the defensive, as well as to command respect. do this it will be necessary to obtain, under the Mas wet hitogether, whilst the instruments of their Red Chop Passport. The Governor-general has guilt have along been punished? Can you credit selected to command the expedition the best and that such a complicated system of crime could most fitting officer for his purpose in the Bengal and which have been touched by our frontier exist? And yet I have been called a slanderer of | army, Captain Smyth, who is known to be as good a commander as he is a sociable and agreeable companion. His travels through a large portion of Central Asia will ensure the community that nothing worth observing will be overlooked. We are informed that officers are selected from each of the three Presidencies; an arrangement exhibiting a just and impartial desire on the part of the Governor-general to have none but the most highly qualified officers for the expedition. believe the following have been already selected by his Excellency the Vicercy and Governorgeneral (the remainder are under consideration), viz.:--Captain Smyth, Bengal army, to command; Mr. Meddlicot, geological department; Dr. Boustead, Bombay army, for the botanical and natural history department, and medical charge; Lieutenant Jackson, Engineers, draughtsman. All these gentlemen have been selected for their high qualifications in their separate departments.

These are the days of exploring expeditions, undertaken, or to be immediately organised, by Englishmen in Eastern Asia; and it begins to appear that the Treaty of Pekin, so slightingly spoken of by some people, both here and in England, will yet bring forth fruit of incalculable value, in the shape of countries, provinces, cities, and marts, opened to British commerce, with a certain prospect of immensely prosperous results. Some months ago we gave at considerable length the details of the British expedition from the Yang tse-Kiang river in Northern China, to traverse the Western provinces of that Empire, pierce Thibet, and finally descend into the plains of India through the gorges of the Himalayas, Above is a notice, and list of the personnel, of the new Central Asian expedition, and the Government has now under consideration the project of forming an exploring party to assemble in Assam, ascend that portion of the Himalayan range which bounds that province on the north and east, and, if possible, find a passage through the passes into the province of Yunan, in the south-west of the Chinese Empire. In effecting this object, the expeditionary party would have to penetrate a region which, it is no exaggeration to say, is totally unknown to European or to civilised man, and whose geographical features have, for the most part, been dubiously or imaginarily marked on even the most pretentious charts by guesswork. Rivers which find their way to the north of, and into, these regions, are there lost, or thrown, by geographical assumption, into other streams to find their way to the ocean; but certainty or correctness in the maps of those wild countries there is none. Moreover, the expeditionary party would have to pass in its route through perhaps the most savage, wild, and hostile tribes in all Continental Asia; and it is for this reason that the Government will not allow any but a strongly armed expedition to undertake the enterprise. We are already well acquainted with the savage ferocity of the tribes in question; those on the borders of Assam having formerly invariably murdered Europeans visiting their country as missionaries; and there can be little doubt that the British expeditionary party would be strongly opposed in attempting to penetrate it. Hence this Assam expedition would certainly be an expensive one, as the party, counting the armed escort, must be large, and extensive carriage would be required. It may be assumed that the followers of the expedition, when once in the hostile country, would neither straggle nor desert; but the question still remains to be considered-How far the Bengalees would be able to endure the cold of the elevated mountain ranges that have to be surmounted before reaching the warmer regions on the other side? Unfortunately, we have no data whatever to go upon as regards this and several other difficulties which beset the Assam and China expedition; but if Government will only decide that it is to be undertaken, officers will spring up by the score willing to undertake it, and competent to carry it to a successful termination, if such a result be within the range of human possibility. The total ignorance of the entire civilised world as regards the countries to be traversed by the expedition, for thirty-five years, is a reproach to us, and one which the Government would act wisely, and perhaps profitably, in removing. If these expeditions should be energetically and per severingly carried out by us now, the great Russian trade of Central Asia receives its deathblow; and channels will be opened by which British manufactures will be poured into now unknown countries, in such quantities as will return boundless profits to those engaged in the trade. This is the way in which we must meet Russia in Central and Eastern Asia, and we have now, from our relations with the court of Pekin, such advantages as will not leave the Russians a chance with us in the race. Our representative at Pekin can obtain "red chops" to any amount required, and our aid and friendship are now actually indispensable to the reigning dynasty in China. If we work these advantages properly, and call forth the energy of our officers liberally and judiciously, we can now inaugurate in China and Central Asia an era of British commercial prosperity and political influence which will occupy some of the brightest pages of the history of England in the East, and leave all European competitors hopelessly behind us. It will then be a matter of indifference to us what may occur on the frozen banks of the Amoor, or in the torrid swamps of Saigon. We can flood the enormous Chinese empire with peaceful commerce, and sheath the sword, with the flat or edge of which we have been, for the last twenty years, smiting its Government .- Englishman.

MILITARY COLONIZATION IN INDIA.

In April 1857 the total European Force in India mustered, all arms included, 42,179. According to the lowest and most recent estimate, its future strength must be maintained at somewhere about 73,500. Thus the annual drain on our home population will be henceforth nearly doubled. Meanwhile, the conditions of military service have, by virtue of amalgamation, undergone a material change. Whereas formerly a turn of service in India was regarded by a soldier of the Royal Army as only a possible contingency, which it might or might not be his unenviable fate to undergo for a limited period, it must in future be considered by a large majority as an unavoidable certainty, for which every recruit would do well to be fully prepared on first enlisting.

The case, however, was very different as regards the European soldiers of the old local army These all came to India of their just extinct. own free will, as to the land of their adoption, and with scarcely a thought of ever returning to their native soil. Various were the motives which lured these restless adventurers to a life of voluntary expatriation in a tropical region, and as varied their characters and capabilities. The ruder and most ignorant class may possibly have been enticed, under the influence of strong potations, by vague visions of the distant pagoda tree, or other oriental pleasantries equally attractive and equally fabulous, pressed into the service by wily recruiting sergeants, and promptly followed up by a liberal bounty. But many, and perhaps the majority, were prompted by sounder views of life and by loftier aspirations. To these the military service of the East India Company stood significative of a respectable competency within easy reach of the steady and deserving soldier, and opened out to the humblest aspirant a fair field of honourable ambition. What wonder, then, that these men, as a body, viewed the disruption of the local service, which had possessed for them so many solid advantages, with alarm and disfavour? Amalgamation has as yet offered them no compensation for the damage done to their future prospects. If they have listened to the voice of the Royal charmer, and have accepted the proffered conditions of general service, it was because there seemed for them no other hopeful alternative. Many of them are sterling old soldiers, stanch and true to the heart's core; attached to this country by early ties and associations; having no wish to leave it to encounter comparative poverty and discomfort in England. We cannot but feel for them a hearty sympathy.

their wishes and permanently ameliorate their condition? Why should we not have our military colonies as well as other European nations who possess not one tithe of our advantages? Why continue to deprive ourselves of so important an element of strength as a chain of such colonies would afford, if well regulated and governed on the most approved principles, if judiciously located along our noble line of hill frontier, stretching from Murree to Cherrapoonjee, and containing so many sites well suited in all essential respects for such a purpose? Why suffer our time-worn though still effective veteran soldiers to rot and perish from the face of the earth, uncared for, after spending the best part of a lifetime in their country's service, when it is in our power to render their later years comfortable, and to turn them to useful account, as settlers on waste lands in well organised communities, presided over by military magistrates selected from the list of retired officers for special qualifications, and encouraged by the fostering care of a paternal Government?

Must India continue to drain the life blood of England and expend the thews and sinews of her sons for the maintenance of our power in the East, and yet are we never to take root in the country we hold at such a costly sacrifice? The time has arrived when we must awake from the lethargy of a century, and avail ourselves to the utmost of the advantages which, for wise and beneficent purposes, have been placed within our reach. Now, or never, we must begin to plant the available offshoots of our European population in the positions best suited for their healthy and vigorous growth. If we are to pour continuously the living mass of our standing line army into India, as a necessary portion of its service, we must devise means to make the country more attractive to the soldiers of that army than it has heretofore been. We must open to them a career with a hopeful termination discernible in the distant perspective. Let, for instance, every British regiment serving in India have its colonisation fund. Let every soldier be made to feel the pleasant assurance that, by husbanding a portion of his pay in that fund, and by establishing for himself s character for sobriety and good conduct, he will stand a fair chance, at the expiration of his service in India, of settling with his wife and children in a permanent home, on land provided for him by the State on certain conditions, and subject to military regulations, in a community of his own countrymen, selected, like himself, for good character; and with the means, if he choose to avail himself of them, of earning by the sweat of his brow, or by whatever useful acquirements he may have mastered, a decent competency for himself and family.

To ensure success for such an experiment, strict selection, with respect to individual merit and personal fitness for the work, must be the invariable rule whereby to regulate the admittance of a candidate to a colony. Each regiment should furnish periodically a list of candidates so qualified, for the information of Government. In addition to the above tests, the knowledge of some useful trade or handicraft, the possession of sufficient pecuniary means to supply the primary requirements of a settler's life, and general aptitude for the peculiar condition of a colonist, should be taken into account. But the first experimental colony formed on any such plan should be limited to time-expired soldiers of the old local army, of whom hundreds of worthy specimens would, we believe, be forthcoming without difficulty, at the call of Government, to act as pioneers of civilisation, should any really sound and practical scheme for military colonisation be set on foot by competent authority. We use the term "mili advisedly, convinced that the principle it involves is essential to the success of any colony founded in this country; for it implies that allimportant something, without which the best soldiers may soon degenerate into a disorderly rabble. Soldiers who have been accustomed for many years of their lives to go like carriage-horses in harness, would often feel absolutely helpless without a driver; and there are few gregarious situations in life where human beings, whether ment will hold together till November next,

The question is, can nothing be done to meet they be soldiers or civilians, are concerned, in which discipline would not be found a decided advantage. Therefore should the superintendent of each colony be a retired officer of the army, one who understands something of European soldiers. Let him be vested with plenary magisterial and special powers, and be competent, both by character and position, not only to command respect, but also to enforce obedience.

Doubtless there are many old Indians to whom all this will seem quixotic; but, to those who would prejudge and condemn such a project, we say, give it at least a fair trial. In other countries we English have proved ourselves eminently successful as colonists; and, so far from the antecedents of a soldier's life disqualifying him for such a career in the temperate and billy tracts which abound in India, we maintain that, under certain wholesome restrictions, he is more likely to succeed than an unlicked clodhopper or an unbridled artisan. The one great evil to be avoided is drink. Let only sober steady men be selected, and let the strictest rules be enforced against drunkenness, even to the extent of imprisonment and expulsion.

We earnestly solicit the serious attention of Sir Hugh Rose to these suggestions, in the hope that he may be induced, as one who has declared he has the best interests of the soldier at heart. to urge on Government the expediency of considering the subject, with a view to devising some definite and practical course of action.— Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FAMINE,-The first symptoms of any mitigation in the severity of the famine have appeared in Meerut. The Relief Committee, reporting on the operations during the past month, believe that the destitution in the district is greatly ameliorated. They are led to the conclusion by the personal appearance of the applicants for admission in the Meerut Poor House, who, although their numbers steadily increase, do not display that emaciated appearance which was so painfully evident before." There was a great decrease in the mortality. Almost all the agriculturists had found occupation in the fields after the first fall of rain, those still in the poor-house being chiefly Chumars and their families. An increase in the number of kitchens during the month, however, led to an extensive distribution of food. The accounts show a total expenditure of Rs. 23.347-15-3, in the issue of 3,86,466 rations, or an average of 12,882 rations a day at a cost of 11-3-5ths of a pie each. The people who deserted their villages had begun to return in great numbers.

CAPTAIN RENNIE, C.B., whose occupation as commandant of the Bengal Marine has gone since the recent financial reforms, appears in the Gazette as "Controller of Marine Affairs, and exofficio Secretary to the Government of India in the Marine Department." Captain Reddie will officiate for him during his absence in England.

PRIZE MONEY .- To prevent henceforth the grievous delay in the distribution of prize money, it is ordered that, whenever the general officer in command of a force may find it necessary to appoint a prize committee, prize rolls shall be pre-pared forthwith of all the forces engaged in the operations which may have led to the capture of the booty. This will, of course, give the men and officers no claim unless her Majesty grant the spoil as prize in the usual way.

MILITARY MISCELLANEA.—The infantry depot at Dum Dum will be formed very shortly, the officers and men of the Company's late 6th European regiment proceeding there from Fort William, and those of the Barrackpore infantry depot also joining at once. Colonel McPherson, who was nominated to the command of the Dum-Dum depot, has been otherwise provided for. Surgeonmajor Crozier, of the late 6th, gets the medical charge of the Infantry depot at Dum-Dum; and Surgeon O'Thring the medical charge of the provisional regiment of cavalry at Barrackpore.

when the men will be dispersed to their new In arrangdestinations in the British line. ing the new code of pay and allowances for the army it is the intention of the Government to make a most liberal improvement as regards the commands of the native regiments, which have hitherto been so capriciously and unequally arranged. In the first place, the command allowance for these regiments will be consolidated, and equal for all ranks; an ensign, if by chance commanding a corps, receiving the same pay as a lieutenant-colonel, which is a most just and rational ruling. As the amount of the consolidated pay for these appointments has not been as yet fixed, we cannot give precise information on this point; but perhaps as it has been proposed to raise it as high as Rs. 1,500, we are not creating too sanguine hopes in stating that we do not think it will be under Rs. 1,200, at the very lowest. This scale of remuneration will make the command of the native regiments of the new army an object of ambition to young officers of an ambitious and energetic character, and will be a guarantee that these corps will be kept in an efficient condition, as what is worth keeping is worth looking after, in military as well as in civil life. Major S. Becher, Assistant Adjutant-General of the Army, at the Presidency, is about to proceed to Europe on medical certificate leave, for fifteen months, and he will be succeeded in the Calcutta office by Captain G. S. Fraser, of the department, now at Simlah, and ordered down to fill the vacancy. The command of the Meerut Division, vacated by General Bradford going home on medical certificate, is to be given to a good, gallant, and able officer of the Company's army, namely, to Brigadier F. Wheler, now in command at Saugor—a selection which will puzzle some of the military critics who look so anxiously to catch the Commander in-Chief tripping. Brevet-Major Nicoll, Major of Brigade, Delhi, has applied to Government that he may not be called upon to refund the commission received as prize agent. The matter is still pending decision of Government.—Englishman.

Mussoorie, July 8.—We have been having steady rain for some days, with an occasional break, giving us a glimpse of the beautiful Dhoon and the country beyond the Sewallik range flooded with water. The cultivators of the soil cannot but be pleased with the plenteous rain, and I should not be surprised to find them soon complaining of too much. The comet, which appears to have so unexpectedly come upon us, is a very beautiful object in the heavens just now, though not nearly so distinctly visible as it was when first observed. The best time to see it is 3 A.M., but up here one's rest is too precious for many to take the opportunity, with the chance of a dense fog obscuring the object of one's search. There is a somewhat remarkable circumstance connected with the comet, which may be of use to your scientific readers. The rhododendron trees, which have already blossomed once (in April), are again in blossom, and of course this is attributed to the appearance of the comet. I believe the same phenomenon was noticed in England upon the first appearance of a former celestial visitor of the kind, when all the apple and cherry trees sent' forth blossoms while bearing fruit,-and shut up' the moment the comet disappeared. Be this as it may, there is no doubt about the rhododendrons at Mussoorie. My letters from Delhi mention sickness on the increase; several cases of cholera in both European and Native communities. I suppose some one will start up and contradict this; but it is, nevertheless, true; thirty cases per diem is no trilling increase to write about. Mr. Cooper was not to leave in July, but in August, for Simla.—Englishman.

GWALIOR.—A letter from Gwalior informs us (Englishman) that the Maharajah Scindiah has received from the Governor-general a communication conveying to him the thanks of her Majesty Queen Victoria for the services rendered to this Government, and the excellent conduct of the affairs of his own State which has enabled him to he shall be saluted with nineteen guns from the just reward.

British lines whenever he visits Jhansie. port is current there that the Rai Sahib Peishwa will advance at the commencement of the cold season to Ojean with 60,000 troops. Two detachments have already marched there. The officer in command at Gwalior had brought to the notice of the durbar the prevalence of secret stills in the vicinity of the cantonments, the effects of which were very mischievous among the troops, and orders had been issued for the immediate suppression of these distilleries. The rebel Nawab Adil Mahomed has offered to surrender, asking what amount of pension Government will grant him if he comes in. A body of rebels, at least one thousand strong, have made their appearance. There are also some scattered parties known to be interspersed through the Meywar territory, but they are few in number, and their condition miserable. Some little time since the chief of Rajghur received a letter in the name of Feroze Shah, asking for pecuniary assistance, and threatening him with attack in case of his refusal.

Jummoo.-A letter from Jummoo informs us that the Maharajah Runbeer Singh has spent a large sum on the birth of a son; heavy guns were fired from the ramparts on the occasion. The Maharajah has taken active measures to prevent any gatherings of suspected Rajpoots in his territory. The Wuzeerees have not made fresh attempts to disturb the peace of the country since the death of their leader. The hill chiefs of the Punjab, who rendered good services to Government during the mutiny, have been exempted from the operation of the Disarming Act.

LAWRENCE MEMORIAL .- At a meeting of the Committee appointed to make arrangements for the erection of the Lucknow Memorial, held at the Chutter Munzil on 1st July:—Present.—G. U. Yule, Esq., C.B., President. Colonel Abbott, Charles Currie, Esq., E. Bickers, Esq., J. F. MacGrennan, Esq., J. Johannes, Esq.; the subscription list was laid on the table. The subscriptions collected up to date amount to Rs. 6,601 9-6, and expenses to Rs. 826-1-6, leaving an available balance of Rs. 5,775-8-0. The secretary informed the committee that circulars had been issued in all parts of India, and had also been sent to England. Answers have been received from almost all the gentlemen who were requested to interest themselves in behalf of the memorial, but a few replies from gen-tlemen in India and England are still awaited. The committee regret that their call for subscriptions has not been met with that liberality and willingness which they had reason to expect. As, however, replies are still due from some parts of India, and also from England, it is resolved that renewed efforts be made to obtain subscriptions, and that measures be taken to make the object for which subscriptions are invited more extensively and generally known, and that the press be invited to aid in this laudable undertaking. 2nd. The following officers and gentlemen were elected members of the committee in the place of those who have left the station. G. U. Yule, Esq., C.B., George Campbell, Esq., George Cardew, Esq., M.D., Captain Champain, ex-engineer, and Lieut. Col. Barrow, C.B. 3rd. Mr. E. Bickers, secretary, being about to proceed on leave of absence, Mr. J. W. S. Wyllie, C.B., is appointed secretary. 4th. The meeting was dissolved after a vote of thanks to the chairman .- G. U. Yule, Chairman.

MR. G. DRUMMOND.—Government has rewarded the zealous services of Mr. G. Drummond, of Nonsongur factory, in Shahabad, with the grant in perpetuity of two villages, which, after payment of the revenue assessment, will yield him a very fair profit. The mutineers from Dinapore, assisted by several of Mr. Drummond's own ryots, then in his debt for advances to enable them to pay their rents, hunted Mr. Drummond from house and home, he barely escaping with his life; but he afterwards joined in turning the tide upon them; and, in retaliating his own injuries, and aiding the Government in the reestablishment of its authority, rendered the valurender such services. It has been ordered that able services for which he has now received the Exports (Calcutta, July 22).—The adverse accounts of the 18th have not been without their effect; but notwithstanding these the disposition for business has been more apparent, and had the state of this market at all improved we should have had larger transactions to report. As it is, supplies have certainly been gradually augmenting stocks, but not yet to a sufficient extent to cause dealers to lower their demands to prices which will enable buyers to operate freely. Freights have continued firm at their late advanced quotations, and this adds to the obstacles to business, which has again been principally in Sugar and Saltpetre at about previous currency.

Imports (Calcutta, July 23).—The market closes with a decidedly less encouraging appearance, owing to the continued depression caused by the recent monetary difficulties both in the Opium and Piece Goods circles. An active trade had begun to make its appearance, but this within the last two or three days has given place to a much quieter feeling, and sales are now made only at a decline in some cases on the prices lately ruling. Demand for Eastern Bengal is not so active as anticipated. The transactions have been again chiefly in Grey, heavy Shirtings; moderate in Jaconets and Madopollams. In Mule Twist and Yarn fair, and at steady prices.

HYDRABAD .- July 2. - The reconciliation of the Nizam with his minister, whether seeming or real, gives a promise of a better order of things than has existed. The one great impediment—the opposition of his highness, rather from taste than from reason, to the measures of his ministerwill no longer be a preventive to a better government being introduced; and in the past conduct of the minister we have a promise that his measures will be directed, and with judgment, to promote the good of the country. Though his highness's constant interposition, and the fears entertained of his opposition, have precluded that activity and energetic action in the administration which would otherwise have obtained, yet the good which has been effected brings no small credit upon Salar Jung Mookhtaroolmoolk. Preceding his accession to the ministry, whosoever was the minister of the day, there was a mutiny and mutinies in every month throughout the year, by the troops of the State to extort their arrears of pay, due for ten or twelve months, and for the settlements of accounts not adjusted for years. It is now eight years since Salar Jung has been placed at the head of the administration. The regularity of his payments to the troops and the different departments of the State has precluded the occurrence altogether of any mutiny amongst the troops for pay. The Rohillas, of whom large numbers had established themselves throughout the country and subsisted by marauding in large bands of hundreds, sufficiently powerful to hazard battles with the contingent troops, have ceased to exist as plunderers. A system pretty general in the telookdars and zemindars, of giving shelter to these plunderers, and in several instances of sharing in their booty, has been crushed by the punishment of some of the most powerful amongst them, and peace reigns throughout the country, though it cannot be said to be free from small dacoities. A Court established for the punishment of Robillas is even now actively engaged in this occupation, and has sent, perhaps,—I cannot give the exact number—more than a hundred of them to the Andamans. Forty Rohillas were brought prisoners from the country to the capital about ten days ago. That which was most difficult of accomplishment, the prevention of the Arabs from exercising oppression upon the subjects of the Nizam, even to the taking of the lives of those obnoxious to them, has been partially achieved. We do not now hear of the murders, of which we were told but too often before, much less of attacks by parties of Arabs upon others their debtors, or those who have given them offence, all perpetrated by the light of day in the very heart of the city. In regard to the suppression of the atrocities of the Arabs, I refer to the period of quotes from a statement submitted by Captain the last three or four years. I understand it not | Ochterlony to Government, in 1847, the statistics to have been effected by the controlling power of the Nizam's Government, but by the persuasions and judicious expositions to the Arab Chiefs, by the minister, of the danger they incur of coming into collision with the English Government if they continue in their course of licentious criminality. His expostulations have derived force from certain impressive lessons given by Lord Dalhousie to this Government. He has told it that the offensive conduct of the Arabs towards the English Government, which could crush the Nizam, not the State, into dust, could not be longer tolerated, and in another letter, that, as the Nizam's Government did not punish adequately these offenders, the English Government would, of its own authority, apprehend and punish them. I have said that the Government has not the strength to control the Arabs without calling to its aid the forces of the English Government, in which the extinction of the Nizam's power is seen to be inevitable; consequently, it must occasionally happen that the minister is compelled to sacrifice at times his own views to the peremptory and persistent demands of the Arabs. If it be so, it is well done; for it is not understood generally that the minister's dignity suffers in his relations towards the Arabs. Nizam's apparent good feelings towards his minister have relieved that functionary of much of his embarrassment, but it is not to be supposed that even now he sleeps on a bed of roses. Everybody in a prominent position possesses power to defy the Government. What is called law and order does not exist competently at this place, no more than in any other native State in India. What had never been known among the Indians from the first cannot have been called suddenly into life. Disorder exists in the very system of government which has no power of right over the members of the Royal family, and scarcely any over the principal Ameers and great chief-tains. And if these have been kept under any kind of subjection whilst the minister was yet labouring under the displeasure of his Highness, it is due to his good management, and not the direction of the reins he held. The police and judicial establishments are difficult subjects to handle. The power of the many uncontrolled by the Government, and of sufficient force to act in defiance of it, necessarily precludes the even-handed justice so much to be desired. The minister is preparing a plan for the administration of the restored districts, assimilating to that which obtained during their management by the English Government. It was impossible to expect that the natives of the country could understand or approve a foreign system, and recourse is to be had, I understand, to the employment of three respectable Parsee gentlemen as supervisors or commissioners. I take this class of persons to be a sort of middlemen between the English and the natives. One of the gentlemen served as assistant commissioner under the English Government, and bears flattering testimonials, from several of his superiors, of good conduct and ability both in fiscal and judicial matters. Englishmen, and those who served in those districts and have been reduced, could not be appointed by the minister. It would have been objectionable to the Nizam, and a great clamour against the measure would have been raised by the people. In this effort of the minister we see his disposition to act, as far as it is possible, in conformity with the views of the English Government. The bazaar and the bridge have been completed by the Native Government at a cost of Rs. 1,30,000. Mr. Temple is expected hourly to arrive here on a financial mission. The Madras Central Committee for the Great Exhibition of 1862 have forwarded a list of articles desired from Hydrabad for shipment to England. Precautionary measures have been taken by the resident and the minister for the ensuing Mohurrum festival. The Government presents have arrived, and the resident has intimated his intention shortly to present them in durbar.

of waste land in the Neilgherry Hills at that time. The amount of land taken up by European settlers since then is not very considerable. geographical surface of the land on the Hills was 268,494 acres, of which 31,434 were under cultivation, 12,000 used for pasturage, 6,000 occupied by the station of Ootacamund, 2,060 by village sites, &c., and 17,000 consisting of rocky ground, morasses, &c., leaving 200,000 acres of forest and grass land entirely unoccupied and waste, or upwards of 300 square miles.

OPIUM REVENUE .- The revenue derived from opium in Bombay during the year ending 30th April, 1861, was no less than Rs. 2,44,00,600, being an increase of Rs. 90,37,900 on the previous year. The average realization for the previous five years was only Rs. 195,18,306. The number of chests paying duty was 45,072, against 32,5063 the preceding year. Of the whole number of chests 26,426 paid duty at the rate of Rs. 500 per chest, and 18,646 at the rate of Rs. 600. This enormous revenue was collected at the trifling cost of 1 per cent., or less than a penny in the pound sterling.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY. - The Ga zette Supplement publishes a return of the engine drivers and mechanics in the locomotive department of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway similar to a return published recently by the Madras Railway. There are 1,122 employés, of whom 56 were engaged in England and the rest in this country. Of those trained in India 82 are Europeans, 24 Eurasians, and 960 Natives. The locomotive superintendent thinks fresh men should occasionally be had from England to impart life to those here. As enginemen the natives will never be equal to Englishmen, owing to their want of nerve and presence of mind in emergencies. There is one Negro engine-driver on the line, and he gives satisfaction.

FORTUNE-TELLING. - Lalljee Bhutt, a native fortune-teller, who has for some time been imposing upon his credulous countrymen in Bombay and elsewhere, has been compelled to terminate his dishonest course by the magistrate of Surat. He had commenced business in that town in the fortune-telling line, and for some time deceived the fouzdar. At length he was brought into Court, was examined, and pleaded in defence that had he known the magistrate was opposed to his practices he would long ago have given them up. The magistrate replied that being a prophet he ought to have known that fact, and added-"Why, now, name the place where and the time I was born." The sage was taken aback and made some trifling excuses, asking for another day, a quiet place and a more favourable hour to answer these questions. The magistrate then ordered his book of certificates to be impounded and policemen to be stationed near his residence.

THE KURRACHEE RAILWAY was opened on the 13th of May. The traffic from that date to the 23rd of June, six weeks, was Rs. 20,154 1-11, Passengers, Rs. 15,559 7-6; goods, Rs. 13,594 10-5. This does not include the carriage of railway materials. This is equal to about £210 per mile per annum, taking the length of line at one hundred and twenty miles. In 1857 the East India Railway had one hundred and twenty-one miles open and received £1,190 per mile per annum. In 1854 the G. I. P. line had thirty five miles open, and received £407 per mile. The Scinde Railway has made a good beginning, but it must increase very rapidly in traffic before it can equal the other lines. The passenger traffic can never be very great, and it is on this that the other lines chiefly depended in the early part of their history.

THE DECCAN.-The Bombay Gazette quotes from the statements of missionaries and native papers facts which show the hopeless state of indebtedness to soucars in which the peasantry of the Deccan are. Those of the Southern Mahratta country are better. The usual rate of interest exacted is 25, 50, and 75 per cent. The people look on debt as a necessity for which there is no help, and only object to their houses being pulled down to meet it. In many cases the ryots are said to stave off this last evil only by sacrificing the honor of their wives. We trust Sir George Clerk will test, as he intended, the truth of these representations during his visit to the Deccan. Bombay needs a Commission of Inquiry as much as Bengal.

MURDER WILL OUT .- We (Poona Observer) are given to understand that two men from Hin-very close to each other for some time. But the other day one of them got drunk, fought with his companion, and threatened to make the secret which had hitherto remained buried in their hearts public. The other man, who was sober, remonstrated against the step, pointing out the danger and punishment with which a disclosure would be attended. As we are ignorant of the names of the individuals, we shall for the sake of convenience call the man who rode the Abkaree Contractor's horse A, and his buttonhole friend B. The repeated remonstrances were of no avail. A grew still more boisterous, particularly as he saw B giving into him, and tolerating abusive language. The words of A attracted the notice of the subadar living next door, who came and insisted that A should tell him the whole affair. He readily complied with the request of the subadar, and began a disclosure, to the utter astonishment and chagrin of B, who sat pale, speechless, and panic-struck. A began thus, in spite of the winks and signs of B, who could have killed them both, had a weapon been handy:-" Band myself were in Hindoostan at the time of the mutiny, in which we both took a part. One day myself and B went to a jemadar's house, who we had heard had given shelter and protection to a European lady. On our arrival at his house we related the whole of the circumstance to him, and inquired whether it was true he had a European lady under his protection. The man denied it, although it was the truth, and gave us free permission to enter his house and satisfy ourselves. This jemadar had offered protection to a lady by the name of Miss Thomas or Thompson, whom he had advised to change her costume to a saree, and eat pan sooparee to avoid detection, which she did. No sooner had the permission been granted us, than we flew into the house like hungry wolves in search of prey, and there we saw his old wife, together with another woman, whom the jemadar's wife declared was one of her own relatives. We should have be lieved the old woman at once, but the light hair, blue eyes, and fair complexion told the sad truth, and we were satisfied that she was a Feringee. In spite of the old woman's entreaties, we drew our swords and cut the lady in pieces, on seeing which the jemadar fled. We remained in Hindoostan till peace was restored and roads became passable. We have always been together since that occurrence, more especially since our arrival and entertainment here." The subadar listened to the narrative attentively, at the conclusion of which he ordered both A and B into custody, and reported the circumstance to his officer. A regretted the disclosure "very, very" much when he came to his senses, but it was too late. The next morning brought them both be fore the officer, who on examination found several letters about their persons from Tantia Topee, &c. A trial is going on, and any punishment short of death would be too lenient for the butchers.

CHINA.

Hono Kono, July 12.-The London mail of May 27th arrived here on the 5th instant.

In our last overland summary we reported everything quiet in Japan. It does not appear, however, that either on the native or foreign side exists a determination to keep the peace. those acquainted with past events in that country, it will not appear a trifling matter that a gentleman living in Yokuhama was recently attacked in his office by seven two sworded officials, accompanied by one hundred and fifty coolies. The correspondent who narrates the causes which led to this, says that it arose out of the foreign merchants attempting to circumvent a refractory Japanese debtor, by obtaining payment in kind through the medium of a third party who bought silk from the native debtor, referring him for payment to his foreign creditor, into whose godown the silk was conveyed. In a few hours the native's friends and ments of the Hyderabad Contingent, have kept | took back the silk. Another merchant's godown was entered in open day, and some copper, about which there was a dispute as to price, was forcibly taken away. It is believed that the Government sanctions these proceedings, as they could not be repeated so openly without something like the connivance of the authorities. It is also reported that the Governor of Kanagawa had informed Mr. Alcock that such was the ill-will of the people towards him, that he could not give him assurance of being unmolested in his contemplated overland journey from Nagasaki to Yedo. If this be true, the Japanese have resorted to their old policy of intimidation.

From Pekin we hear that San-ko-lin-sin has captured Teng-hsien, and that the Tao-tai of Chitung had been degraded for cowardice, having retreated from the rebels without striking a blow. The Chinese correspondent of the North China Herald says :- " There is a report current that thirteen successive victories have been achieved by Tseng-kwo-fan over the rebels, great numbers of whom were slain, it is said 20,000, which has caused much rejoicing amongst the people of Kiangnan." This merely shows the endless nature of the civil war in China; victory is continually fluctuating from side to side, and neither party, except as in the last case, which looks promising, if it were only from a reliable source, attempting to improve their victory; for instead of following it up with vigour, the general rule seems to be that the victorious general should hurry away with a report to the king or the emperor, and get himself lifted a grade or two in rank. The rebel movement is now the perplexed question in Anglo-Chinese politics, and all hopes of its solution are very far distant.

Hankow and the other ports on the Yang-tsze are still viewed with increasing interest by the merchant and the shipowner. Large freights are being brought from Hankow, and fresh vessels are being placed on the river. The siege of Chinkiang has been raised, and its eighteen thousand Imperial troops are free to operate in other directions. The investment of Nganking continues. The latest dates from Hankow are up to the 19th ultimo; they report the rebels as having made a nearer approach to the city.

At Shanghai much trouble had been felt owing to the plunder of valuable silk cargoes by people supposed to belong to the insurgent party. Gunboats had been sent to obtain restitution and to enforce respect to all merchandise for the future; they had succeeded in the first after a good deal of trouble, unattended, however, with violence, and good grounds exist for supposing that success will follow their efforts in seeking to secure safety for the trader in time to come. The evil was beginning to assume an offensive form, and this interference on our part was as timely as, it is to be hoped, it will prove effective. A sad accident happened at Woosung on or about the 29th of last month. Mr. H. J. Allan, of H.M.'s Dockyard, went into the water to bathe; he was missed soon after, and, although an expert swimmer, there is little doubt that he must have taken cramp and been drowned. The party who were with him used every effort to find his body, but without Chapoo was visited by H.B.M.'s Consul on the 7th of last month; he called there with the Encounter on his way from Shanghae. Reports state that the desolation and misery of the place defy all description or belief; the suburbs are a mass of ruins, not a soul to be seen. The city is like a city of the dead, with a few ruffianly scoundrels, calling themselves rebels, prowling about and ruling over the few wretches who were unable to flee at their approach. Altogether, the scene is described as one not easily forgotten when once seen. The party in the Encounter are said to have had a long interview with the rebel chief, to whom the Admiral's letter was delivered. In that letter the rebels were informed that they would not be allowed to take Ningpo, or even to aproach within two days' march of the city. The fact is, that Ningpo, like Shanghai, is so mixed up with our doostan, entertained as sepoys in one of the regi- coolies attacked the foreigner, pinioned him, and own interest, that we should suffer materially if we allowed the city to fall and to be the scene of anarchy, confusion and bloodshed. Unfortunately, as stated above, the rebel forces are in possession of the silk and tea districts. They have not yet done much towards nearing Hanchau, the capital city of its province, though their great aim is to take this city. They are deterred from attempting a coup de main by the well-known force of the Manchu garrison.

From Ningpo we hear that Kin-hwa, a departmental city two or three days' journey from that place has fallen into the hands of the rebels, and another city, La-kee, close to Kin-hwa, is reported also to have fallen. Shaou-hing, under the jurisdiction of the Taou-tai of Ningpo, is not lost, but as a canal leads directly from that city to Kinhwa, great fears are entertained by the inhabitants for its safety; and if Shaou-hing falls the Ningpo people will be in great alarm. Shang-yu and Yu-yao, cities within a tide or two of Ningpo, have been the scene of local troubles; in other respects, however, everything is quiet at Ningpo. Later accounts say that peace has been restored in the two cities above-mentioned, viz., Shang-yu and Yu-yao. At Ningpo little business was doing owing to the vexatious delay which is said to attend the collection of Customs. A correspondent writing from that port, says he passed up the river on the 16th ult., and saw on his way the steamers Confucius, H.M.S. Encounter, Feiloong, and a French gunboat steaming out. The Kestrel and a French gunboat had just returned from a visit the whole length of the river to a city called Yu-yao, as the people were getting alarmed on account of the rebels. They did not go with a hostile intention, but merely to show the rebels that they were quite within reach of them when wanted.

At Swatow the Consul had acted in the matter of the hong robbery with vigour and success; matters were being made smooth again.

At Canton news had come in that a serious clan fight between the Hakkas and Puntis was going on in the adjacent country. The Chinese are like the old Highlanders of Scotland in respect to clan fights, which are with them events of regular recurrence. The deserters from the 99th regiment who surrendered themselves some time ago, are about to be indicted criminally for various offences which they committed after desertion. The disaffection in the Canton garrison, which was begun by the infliction of three drills a day for no alleged fault, does not seem to have abated. various lectures and readings, given in behalf of the soldiers' institute there, are not attended by a single private soldier. A recent reading was given by one of the officers to an audience of seven.

From Macao we hear that Admiral Hope had been to visit that ancient and interesting settlement. His visit excited some curiosity, and the story runs that his not calling on the Governor was viewed by foreigners and his own countrymen as an omission exhibiting discourtesy.

In some respects the past fortnight has been an eventful one in Hong Kong. The sales of Government land during four days have realised by premiums the sum of 180,000 dollars, and they add to the revenue of the colony a permanent rental of 17,000 dollars. Many portions of the land just sold, however, would have been better left vacant, but an avidity for finances has got the better of our Governor's judgment, and it is only to be hoped he will not live to see how impolitic he has been in selling at any price such lots as were invaluable in the most crowded parts of the Chinese town, as breathing spaces, and points of advantage in cases of fire. One such spot was sold in face of a petition from the native inhabitants of the quarter; they implored that he would not give it away to be built upon, and offered to take the expense of railing it in and adorning it with a handsome fountain. A bettergrounded petition was never written, and everybody at home, in these times of sanitary regulations, will be startled to learn that the request was not complied with.

Mr. Callaghan, who came out here chief magistrate, goes to Labuan as governor, leaving this in the meantime upon half-pay. The 4th of July was marked in our harbour by the firing of guns. its being low water in the river the gun-

As those people have proved most disreputable impostors, we may give a description of them in case they should visit Manila, Singapore, or India, as is not unlikely. The man calling himself Mr. Grattan, and who is said to be properly named Edwards, is about thirty-eight years of age, with light hair and thin features without much expression. He is about five feet nine inches high, and has a bad voice. The woman, said to be Mrs. Courtain who eloped with Edwards from California, is, upon the stage at least, rather good-looking, not tall, with massive hair having a slight natural curl, blue eyes, nose of a Jewish tendency, a prominent chin, and a good mouth rather badly filled. Although well patronised here, these people have paid none of the many creditors who were kind enough to trust them. The sums they owe here vary from the most petty amounts to near 300 dollars. They left this for Macao, taking the key of their rooms with them, saying they would be back in a few days for a final performance; but, instead, started thence for Saigon in the Dutch ship Stadt Leyden, hoping to find a passage either to Manila or Moulmein. Our readers in the East may have cause to thank us for this hint; we have gone a little out of our way in appending it to the overland summary of news .- Overland China Mail,

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, July 30.—The weather during the fortnight has been, on the whole, favourable for the preparation and shipment of our staple, and there is a good deal of coffee on board the vessels in the roadstead; but only two ships have sailed, and with less than 7,000 cwts. of coffee. Our exports of plantation are as nearly as possible 10,000 cwts. in excess of last year, while native is just about 20,000 lower; our total exports are 10,000 cwts.—less than the corresponding period of last season,—say 567,000 cwts., against 577,000.

We have little doubt the total out-turn of the two seasons will closely correspond.

As regards the coming crop the prevailing view continues gloomy. The rain kept off when it was wanted, and it came in deluges when, in the estimation of coffee planters, it could do no good. Labour for crop purposes is regarded as superabundant, and yet the Public Works Department is short-handed and roads remain unmade for want of labour. There can be no doubt that to the mass of coolies estates have attractions, they do not see in the roads any more than they did on the railway.

The Reverend J. Wise, Chaplain of Kandy, Canon of St. Thomas' Cathedral and acting Archdeacon, is also, in effect, to act as Bishop. We think Mr. Wise with such a load of ecclesiastical dignity and responsibility on his shoulders deserves the sympathy of a generous community.

We are glad to state that there is now every probability of the success of the attempt to naturalise the quinine-yielding plants in Ceylon.

It becomes our painful duty to record the death of Mr. S. Lakeman, long a member of the planting community.—Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the Dutch mail steamer we have Java papers to the 14th July. The attempts made to capture Antasari, the chief of the Banjermassing rebels, had failed, and the prospect of the war in that part of the Netherlands India possessions being brought to an end seems as distant as ever. The Dutch officers, on the contrary, assert that the insurgents are making rapid advances in the art of war, and that they are acquiring greater beldness in facing their cponents. In the beginning of May the gun-boat No. 59, stationed at Satui (Tana Laut, south and east division of Borneo), was attacked by eight pirate prahus. After an engagement of three hours, the pirates retreated, and owing to Four men of the gun boat were wounded. Information was afterwards received that two large trading prahus had fallen into the hands of the pirates near Mandawé on the same coast. The gun-boat No. 67 was immediately sent out from Sampit to look after the pirates, which were reported to have been steering west, but nothing could be heard of them. Attempts are now being made to repair the submarine cable between Batavia and Singapore. The screw steamer Draak started with 63 miles of new deep sea cable on board, intended to repair that part of the cable in the Strait of Banka where it had been damaged by ships' anchors and other causes, and to carry it along the coast of Sumatra in the mud. The examination of the cable was commenced with that part between 1761 to 1791 miles from Batavia, lying to the south of Lucipara, and which was laid in a W.N.W. direction, it being proposed to splice on the new 64 mile cable, and to lay it further to the N.W. in a depth of two fathoms. On taking up this 31 miles of cable it was found that where it lay the bottom consisted of blue and soft mud, like that on the east coast of Sumatra, and that the cable in this mud was not encrusted with shells, but remained clean and undamaged and as good as new. After this examination the Draak returned to Batavia in order to repair the ruptures in the cable near that place. From the mouth of Muara baru, where the shore end of the cable is situated, to a distance of about forty miles from Batavia, W.S.W. of Pulo Katok, the number of breaks were not less than twenty, the repairs of which occupied a long time. It is noticeable that all these breaks were found in the deep sea cable, while the whole line from the south of the Agnita Islands to the south of Middleburg and Amsterdam, where the shore end cable lies, was not damaged in a single place. Of the deep sea cable, which was under-run for a length of forty miles, it was found in some places that the iron wire covering had wholly disappeared, while in others it had become very thin. An examination of the damaged wires showed that this was not attributable to any mechanical means, but that it arose from some chemical action. Some kinds of molluses are very injurious to the iron covering, fastening themselves upon it, and probably emitting a corroding liquid, which soon eats into and loosens the iron wires. In the roads of Batavia the cable was found to be surrounded by a crust, three or four strips thick, not very hard, but wholly distinct from the mud bed in which it lay. Under this crust the cable was quite undamaged, and the iron wires as bright as if they had been polished. In the damaged places the cable was strengthened with iron wire, and wrapped round with gumuti rope, to which shells do not attach themselves .- Singapore Free

THE BANK OF KURRACHEE (LIMITED) seems to be succeeding. In the three months from 15th March last, the increase in deposits was Rs. 75,542, and in assets Rs. 22,300. If the Madras and Bombay Presidency Banks adopt the same liberal views as the Bank of Bengal, they should be able at once to cover the country with Branch Banks, utilise the cash balances and push the paper currency.

THE SEYCHELLES, to which coolie emigration from India will begin this year, had a population of 7,000 in 1851. There is a large number of creoles and half-castes chiefly engaged in the preparation of cocoanut oil, in establishments belonging to French capitalists residing in the Mauritius. Malie is the chief island of both the Seychelle, Chagos, and Amirante groups, and is visited by the outward and inward bound Mauritius mail steamers every month. The two best harbours are Fort Victoria at Malie, and Curience Bay at Isle Curience. In Malie alone Commander Hardinge, R.N., says there are 72,000 acres of waste land well suited for cotton cultivation. In 1859 the exports of the whole archipelago amounted to about £12,000, chiefly in cocoanut oil and tortoise shell. Indian coolies will make the group a wealthy paradise, while

Finance.—Receipts and Disbursements.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Financial Department, dated 8th June, 1861.

June, 1861.

Read the following:—

From the Auditor General of India, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department.—No. 359, dated Fort William, 1st July, 1861.

Sir,—In paragraph 41 of report No. 10, of the Budget and Audit Committee, approved in resolution of Government, No. 876, dated 26th January, 1861, it has been provided that, in addition to the Budget estimate, and in substitution of the former sketch and regular estimate, an estimate of the receipts and disbursement of the current year, based upon the actual accounts of four months, shall be submitted by the several deputy auditors general on submitted by the several deputy auditors general on the 1st October of each year.

2. In former days, when the attention bestowed upon the financial situation of the country, and upon the periodical returns and accounts was very much less watchful than it is now, and when the terri-less watchful than it is now, and when the territories affected were more compact, and the number of officers rendering accounts was smaller, it is probable that the preparation of these intermediate estimates may have been indispensable.

3. Under existing circumstances, however, it seems to me that such a necessity no longer exists, the object in view having been sufficiently attained by other parts of the new system of audit and account, especially the monthly returns of estimated and actual receipts and disbursements, on which, in fact, the revised estimates must be founded; and the expense of the service of t the revised estimates must be founded; and the expenditure of the year having been definitely fixed by the Budget sanction, the only points on which any intermediate estimates can be needed are unexpected intermediate estimates can be needed are unexpected changes in any of the principal branches of income, or additional expenditure arising from unforeseen contingencies, such as wars, famines, and the like. For variations, however, of any magnitude of these descriptions, the rough monthly estimates prepared by the financial secretary seem to afford sufficient provision, and even without these, special reports of any probable change of circumstances, materially affecting the finance of the Empire, to be submitted when necessary by the local heads of departments, would appear to afford sufficient security, without the addition of detailed financial estimates, which add so much to the labour of the department of account, and must necessarily, without the aid of additional establishment, retard the preparation of more important returns.

4. At the present moment there is still stronger motive for relinquishing his intermediate estimate, in the relief which will be afforded to all the depart. in the relief which will be afforded to all the departments of account at a time when all their energies and attention are necessarily required for successful introduction and perfecting of the budget system, which, in many of its details, is still incomplete, and for enforcing a uniform and correct system of account, which, through a large portion of the Empire, is as yet new and imperfectly understood.

5. I beg respectfully to submit this question for the reconsideration of Government, as I feel convinced that it will be for the public advantage, and a very material relief to all officers having accounts, if the call for the October estimate is abandoned.

Financial Dep., Fort William, July 8, 1861.—Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council agrees with the auditor gen. in thinking that the estimate required to be submitted on Oct. 1 of every year may be dispensed with, and he accordingly approves of its discontinuance. continuance

In addition, however, to the register that is maintained in the Financial Department, of grants made in excess of the Budget, a memorandum of probable expenditure arising from unforeseen contingencies will be kept up in that department, and with this view H.E. in Council desires that the several local Governments and administrations. Governments and administrations, &c., be requested to give early warning to the Financial Department of any such expenditure being likely to arise in the course of the current year, 1861-62.

The Agency for Consignments.

July 12.—The following Rules, defining the duties of Agent for Government Consignments, having been approved by the Supreme Government, are published for general information:—

general information:—

1. The Agent for Govt. consignments will keep at his office a register of all indents for Govt. stores sent out from England, and such register shall be open to the inspection of commanders of vessels and open to the inspection of commanders of vessels and owners or their agents.

2. Commanders of vessels having on board stores or cargo belonging to the Govt. of India, are, on their arrival at the port of Calcutta, and after entry at the Custom-house, to report themselves without delay to the Agent for Govt. consignments, and to inform him of the nature of the stores or cargo on board of their tice, stating when the Govt. stores or cargo will be clear and ready for delivery from on board their respective vessels. The Agent for Govt. consignments will intimate to the respective departments concerning the arrival of the vessels, and will give instructions as to the time by which the departments should be prepared to land the stores.

4. Should delay occur, after notice as aforesaid, in sending boats alongside to receive the consignments, notice of such delay should be given by the commander to the Agent for Govt. consignments.

5. If any boat or boats sent by any Govt. department, to receive a consignment, be detained alongside the ship, the commander and owner of such vessel shall be responsible for whatever claim may be made for demurrage in respect of such boat or boats, and the officer at the head of such department shall with-hold delivery of certificates until all claims in respect of such denurrage are settled.

6. All disputes arising between the commanders of vessels and the department for which consignment have been brought in respect of such consignments, or the freight thereof, or the sending of boats for, or the landing of the same, shall be referred to the Agent of Govt. consignments for settlement, and the decision of such Agent shall be binding or order suiced. sion of such Agent shall be binding on and acquiesced in by all parties concerned.

7. Commanders of vessels shall be responsible for

1. Commanders of vessels shall be responsible for all damage sustained by boats or stores, or cargo, in consequence of carelessness or neglect on the part of the officers of their respective vessels when discharging the stores or cargo.

8. In case of such damage as referred to in the last preceding clause, and if required so to do by the officer of the department consigned, the Agent for Govt. consignments will hold a survey on such damage, of which he will give notice to the commander of the vessel concerned. The Agent for Govt. consignments will nominate some third party (who may be in the service of Govt.) to survey and report conjointly with him on the said damage. The commander of the vessel concerned shall be present at the survey, and he and his owners shall be bound by the report of the surveyors. Should the surveyors differ they shall appoint an umpire, whose decision shall be in like manner binding on the commander and owner of the vessel.

9. No certificate will be granted to commanders or agents of vessels bringing Govt. stores or cargo until the Agent for Govt. consignment shall have reported that all claims against the vessels have been settled.

Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Protection of Landed Property.

July 4, 1861.—No. 210a.—The notification issued from this department, No. 84, dated March 15, 1861, is hereby cancelled.

No. 211a.—The following amended Circular Orders of the Government, in the Revenue Department, laying down instructions in regard to the sale of landed property in satisfaction of decrees of the Civil Courts, are published for general information: formation :-

CIRCULAR.

CIRCULAR.

No. 708a.—His Honor the Lieut. governor is pleased to issue the following instructions for the guidance of collectors in carrying out the important provisions of Section 244, Act VIII. of 1859, the object of which is to prevent the sale of landed property in satisfaction of decrees of the Civil Courts in cases where the sale would be objectionable, and satisfaction can be otherwise secured:—2nd. With this view the collector will not be held competent to defer the issue of the usual sale proclamation, but on receipt of the requisition of the Civil Court he will ascertain by summary inquiry whether the sale of the land or share tion of the Civil Court he will ascertain by summary inquiry whether the sale of the land or share is objectionable.

3rd. The enforced sale of hereditary property in land in execution of a decree, which might be satisfied by money payment is generally objectionable, and most particularly so when the rights to be sold consist of a share in a joint property, inasmuch as the rule may cause a stranger to be obtruded against their will amongst the brotherhood. It is objectionable only in a less degree when an entire ancestral property is the subject of sale. Where, on the other hand, the property for sale consists of a share in a joint estate held by a stranger, the sale is not objectionable; for it may afford an opportunity to the former proprietors to recover possession, or to the brotherhood to rid themselves of the stranger. Again, the property may be the possession, or to the brotherhood to rid themselves of the stranger. Again, the property may be the estate of a spendthrift Zemindar, from whom the revenue is always realised with difficulty, and then the sale might not be objectionable, and generally there can be no strong objection to the sale where the property has been acquired by purchase by the judgment-debtor. Rules cannot, however, be laid down to meet every case and the collector must laid down to meet every case, and the collector must ** Neither the report nor any of the other rules have any reference to the landing of troops. But unless there are already existing complete rules for transports, it will be as well to request for Govt. consignment at least 48 hours no-in each instance determine as to the expediency of allowing the sale to proceed, or of attempting to arrest it.

4th. After making the above-mentioned summary inquiry, provided he has satisfied himself that the sale is objectionable, and no preferable means of obtaining the further information indicated below are available, the collector will issue to the Tehseeldar of the pergunnah in which the land to be sold may be situated, an order specifying the names of the parties, the sum required to be realised, and the land proposed for sale, and directing the Tehseeldar to ascertain by inquiries from the judgment-debtor, or his agent, or otherwise, whether satisfaction of the decree can be made within a reasonable period, by a temporary alienation of the land or shares, and also whether the required security will be forthcoming.

5th. The arrangements to be made in satisfaction 5th. The arrangements to be made in satisfaction of the decree should emanate from the person whose rights are to be sold. The collector may offer his advice and assistance, but is not competent, suo motu, to make the temporary alienation contemplated by the Act. It will be his duty to represent to the Court that the sale being for reasons to be stated, objectionable, he has satisfied himself that the debt due to the judgment-creditor can be liquidated within a period to be stated, by a temporary alienation of the land or share in the form of a lease or mortgage to such or such a person, who is prepared to enter into an agreement to satisfy the decree by immediate payment in full, or by instalments, security for the amount of the decree, or for the value of the land or share being given. The collector will then await the instructions of the Court.

rity for the amount of the decree, or for the value of the land or share being given. The collector will then await the instructions of the Court.

6th. If it appears from the Tehseeldar's report, or from other information, that the necessity of sale may be avoided, and that the sale is objectionable, the collector should in all cases, whether the decree emanate from the judge of the district, or from a subordinate court, make his representation, in English, direct to the judge, who, when the case is pending before a subordinate court, will forward it to such court, the judge being in every case the channel of communication. And in order to secure due consideration of the collector's representations, the subordinate courts, under instructions which their subordinate courts, under instructions which their sudder court have been requested to issue, will be required to report to the judge their adoption or rejection of his suggestions. Collectors should be cautious on the other hand not to interpose arbitrary or frivolous objections in cases in which the sale of land may be ordered in satisfaction of a decree of the Civil Court.

7th. The collectors should notice briefly the general result of their proceedings in carrying out the important functions devolved upon them by this Section (244, Act VIII. of 1859) in their Annual Administration Reports.

Departmental Budgets.

Revenue Dep., July 8.—No. 1,090.—Notification.—In directing the careful attention of heads of departments to the proceedings of the Government of India, in the financial dept., dated June 15, 1861, published in the Punjab Gazette of 6th inst., the Hon. the Lieut. Gov. desires to point out the importance of the accurate and punctual preparation of the departmental budgets. The unembarrassed working of the administrative machinery is now in a great degree department of the depa Gov. desires to point out the importance of the accurate and punctual preparation of the departmental budgets. The unembarrassed working of the administrative machinery is now, in a great degree, dependent on a correct prospective estimate of the annual cost of each dept. It is necessary that each responsible officer, in his own sphere, calculate the probable expenditure which will be indispensable during the ensuing year. If the entertainment of any additional establishment shall be foreseen to be unavoidable, no delay should occur in making a recommendation, as, without the sanction of the Supreme Government previously obtained, the cost cannot be included in the estimates. In calculating contingencies, the opportunity should be taken to scrutinise the current expenditure, and to reduce the prospective estimate to the lowest sum compatible with efficiency. Equal care should be exercised in estimating the annual revenues. Experience has shown that gross and serious errors will occur wherever the responsible officers withhold a searching examination of the normal statements prepared by their subordinates. The Lieut. Gov. trusts that this timely notice, aided by detailed instructions from the heads of departments, will ensure the prescient elaboration and punctual submission of the Budget for 1862-63.

Amalgamation of the Punjab Police.

Under the provisions of Act No. V. of 1861, for the regulation of police, the organised (military) and civil police of the Punjab have been amalgamated.

2. The organised police [1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, police batt.] batts. will accordingly cease to exist as distinct bodies, from July 1, 1861, from which date the new nomenclature and rates of pay proposed for the constabulary will take effect.

3. In like manner, and from the same date, the organised mounted police will merge in the constabulary under the new designations prescribed for the

4. From July 1, 1861, the submission of police returns to the military secretary's office will cease.
5. In breaking up the organised police, which has existed since the annexation of the province, the Lieut. Gov. desires to place on record his sense of the efficiency of the force as a military police, and of the excellent service which has always been rendered by them, and more particularly during the crisis of 1857.

6. Transfer to the constabulary will not affect the pay, or claim to permanent service pensions, &c., of the old durbar soldiers, who are still in the organised police.

7. Arms, accourrements, magazine stores, camp equipage, and all other Government property in use with the organised police, and which may be required for the constabulary, will be transferred with the men to the different officers, who under the authority of the Inspector-General of Police, may be appointed to receive them. Surplus arms, stores, &c., to be sent to the nearest magazine.
8. Reports of the transfers, with vouchers, to be sent to the military secretary's office by the officers who are at present responsible for the articles.
9. The police of the Peshawur and Derajat divs. are not included in the above order.

are not included in the above order.

Annuities.-Madras Civil Service.

July 16 .- To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord, — The civil servants of the Madras

My LORD,—The civil servants of the Madras establishment, having represented that a large number of their body have qualified for annuities from the Civil Service Annuity Fund, but that, under the existing rules, many years must elapse before they can succeed to annuities, I forward, for your information, a copy of a financial despatch [No. 45, dated June 7, 1861] which I have addressed to the Government of Madras on the subject, authorising the grant to subscribers, qualified by service and residence in India for annuities, the ontion of resigning the serto subscribers, qualified by service and residence in India, for annuities, the option of resigning the service and of drawing an allowance of £500 per annum, until they shall be entitled in turn to annuities to the full amount of their subscriptions, added to an annuity of £500; and I authorise the grant of the same indulgence to the members of the Bengal and Bombay Civil Service Annuity Funds in the event of their being similarly situated.—I have, &c., C. Wood.

India-office, London, June 7, 1861.

Para. 9.—At the same time I admit that the circumstances reported by the memorialists call for some remedy, and I consider that the most suitable mode of meeting the present excess in the number of claimants of annuities will be to allow to civil servants, who have completed the prescribed period of 25 years' service, and 22 years' residence, the option of retiring immediately on £500 per annum, that amount being the portion of the annuity granted by the Government, they subsequently receiving in turn the full amount of annuity to which their subscriptions may entitle them.

Copy of the foregoing despatch, and paragraph 9 of its enclosure, published in the Gazette, with an intimation that the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to extend the same indulgence to the members of the Bengal and Bombay Civil Service Annuity Funds. Para 9 - At the same time I admit that the cir.

BARRACK GARDEN IMPLEMENTS.

July 10.—With reference to G.O. by the then C. in C. dated Dec. 10, 1855, and the recent G.O. by H.E. dated Jan. 12, 1861, on the subject of barrack gardens for European soldiers, Sir Hugh Rose desires to notify for general information that the Govt. of India have sanctioned the undermentioned gardening implements, &c., in the proportion noted opposite each, viz. :—

Per Troop and Company:—Twenty-four spades, two pickaxes, five hoes, three rakes, four watering pots, three wheelbarrows.

Indents according to the accompanying form should be made by regiments, through the barrack master, on the department public works for wheel-barrows (No. 1), and for the remainder of the articles on the nearest magazine (No. 2).

The above is the maximum proportion allowed to a troop or company, but the C. in C. requests that commanding officers will draw for such quantities only as are necessary for the number of men wishing to employ themselves in the cultivation of barrack gardens; and he relies on officers commanding divisions and stations, whose counter-signatures are to be affixed to the indents, seeing that these imple-ments, allowed by the Government for the amuse-ment and healthy employment of the troops, are taken care of.

the remarks made by Sir Mordauut Wells on the benefits likely to be conferred upon the Indian community by the new Circuit Courts. Among other desirable results he evidently anticipates a diminution in the crime of forgery, though it is difficult to follow the train of reasoning that has led to that expectation. Sir Mordaunt alleges, indeed, that the provisions of the Penal Code will be better administered, and that consequently better protection will be afforded to life and property. He accuses the Government of India of apathy in the punishment of crime, because "a complicated and complete system of forging and counterfeiting" has been going on within a few miles of Calcutta, and also because a similar state of things exists in every part of the country. We sincerely hope that his anticipations may be well founded, but we suspect that it will require more than ordinary ability and good fortune to put down a system that is so deeply rooted in the very character of the natives. The case on which the learned Judge founds his charges against the Government is thus stated by himself:- "At Midnapore, a few days ago, two men were convicted of forgery, and sentenced to a long term of transportation. I first noticed the report of the case in the newspapers, and made my own inquiries from a reliable source. These men, I am proud to say, were brought to justice mainly through the perseverance and energy of a native magistrate. Their arrest has led to the discovery of an immeuse number of forged seals and documents-in fact, a complete system of forgery and counterfeiting. In a large iron box was discovered, among others, a counterfeit of 'the seal of the Calcutta High Court of Appeal;' 'the seal of Shah Allum Padsha, for forging grants of rent-free lands;' dies for forging nearly every description of Government stamps; the seals of nearly all the zemindars of the immediate neighbourhood; forged rent cheques of Hecralol Scal; the seals of Messrs. Dent and Young, dating as far back as 1780; and there is every reason for believing that this system exists every fifty miles throughout the country. The spot at which this discovery has been made is a small district." The existence of this system of fraud and counterfeit has long been known as a fact, though it has not been found easy to bring home the guilt to any particular person. For instance, in the Upper Provinces there is no moral doubt that many free grants of land, whether to individuals or temples, have and his predecessors, and even of Lord Lake of which he was a member, he had un- that in no way affects the point at issue. One and the French adventurer De Boigne. some cases the forgery has been detected, and the lands of course resumed, but the actual delinquents have escaped detection and punishment. It is said, and probably with some reason, that the resumption of lands fraudulently appropriated by the priests is one chief cause of the enmity displayed by those worthies towards the British rule. They could readily overlook our hatred and contempt for false gods, and even our just appreciation of their own sensuality and hypocrisy; but to deprive them of the fruits of their skill in counterfeiting was a sin not to be forgiven. Not that the priests took the trouble to make dies with their own hands. There was no necessity for even that amount of fatigue. The ex-WE invite the attention of our readers to pense of obtaining a forged impression was quite inconsiderable, and scarce worthy of a thought. In Bengal, according to Sir Mordaunt Wells, the seal of any zemindar is procurable for a few annas. For a few pence any ryot can obtain the signature of his landlord, that is to say, the impression of his seal, and hence we may form some idea of the difficulties encountered by European settlers in their relations with the natives. The disuse of the seal and the compulsory substitution of the actual signature in writing, might serve, in some degree, to diminish the extent of this crime, and, at the same time, facilitate detection. The only effectual method, however, of abating the offence is by raising the standard of honour and self-respect; but that is everywhere a slow process, and in Iudia so slow that progress is imperceptible. Forging is there, says Sir Mordaunt, as common as iron-forging in England; two workshops may be found within a few miles of each other. Will Europeans or natives, he continues, embark their capital in this country when such a system as this is known to prevail? Not very likely, certainly; and we wish we could believe the prophecy of the learned Judge will be duly fulfilled, and that in a few short years the Judges of the High Court of Judicature "will, with the aid of the Criminal Code, the increased facilities which the Circuit Courts will provide throughout the country, coupled with the able assistance of the interpreters of the Court, effectually grapple with the difficulty," and facilitate the eradication of crime.

THE MYSORE GRANT.

SIR BARNES PEACOCK has resuscitated this grievance. Though long since forgotten by the world at large, it has never for a moment ceased to weigh upon the mind of the Lord Chief Justice of Bengal. His personal feelings, indeed, were interested in this matter. There was something of the spretæ formæ iniuria that rankled in his bosom. He, perhaps intellectually the foremost man in India, had been accused of aping the functions of the leader of the Opposition in an assembly that feebly counterfeited the outward forms of a representative Parliament. Unappreciated, or misanderstood, he had drawn down upon himself the ridicule, instead of the approbation, of the British public, and the undoubted weight of his metal had produced no other effect than to make a greater splash than ordinary as it plunged into the otherwise untroubled waters. But though the course he pursued may been forged in the names of Shah Allum have been inconvenient to the Government

In questionably good grounds for protesting against a large grant of money at such an inopportune season. His mode of proceeding may have been inexpedient, but he was certainly right in withstanding what he considered an unnecessary waste of the public revenue, and in upholding the dignity of the Supreme Government. As a matter of profit and loss we have always maintained that Sir Charles Wood made a good bargain in capitalising the annual payments made to the Mysore family, but it cannot be denied that in setting aside the authority of the Governor-general in Council he acted in a manner as unwise as it was arbitrary and discourteous. In fact, he established a precedent of which some future Secretary of State for India may avail himself, if desirous to supersede by his own direct action the power of the Local Government. The natives, too, will be encouraged to pass over the governors of Presidencies and even the Viceroy himself, and apply in person to the autocrat at home. If this sort of thing be permitted, the Governor-General of India will dwindle into a pageaut ruler but little superior to a Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. There is also another phase of this question which Sir Barnes Peacock was quite justified in regarding with distrust and disapprobation. Admitting that as a pecuniary investment the capitalisation of the Mysore allowances may prove highly advantageous, it does not follow that the right time was chosen for effecting that operation. It is doubtful, indeed, if the operation be even yet actually effected. There is no proof that any Government Securities have been placed to the credit of the Mysore princes. No such sum as £500,000 has been entered in the financial statements submitted to Parliament. Instructions were sent out from the India Office to capitalise the annual amount of the grant in four per cent. paper, but there is nothing to show that those orders have been obeyed. The Government is not in the practice of keeping half a million of securities lying idle for the purpose of bestowal upon the families of old enemies. Or has it simply given, as it were, an I. O. U. to Gholam Mahomed and his fellows for the sum of £500,000, not to be claimed as long as the interest is paid? And yet it may be that the Government has taken another course, and made over a portion of the forfeited securities that was formerly the property of convicted rebels. It has been estimated that this could not have amounted to much less than two millions sterling, but not a word, or a whisper, has been heard on the subject. Like the Mysore grant, it does not appear in the financial statement, and no doubt a large portion of it may have been absorbed in gratuities to loyal natives. But all this is mere guess work. The only thing certain is that a very large sum of money fell into the hands of a needy Government, and that it has not been accounted for. On the other hand, that same Government has been enjoined by superior authority to set aside half a million sterling in order to produce a fixed annual income for the descendants of Tippoo Sultan, and that precise sum represents the deficit which Mr. Laing contemplated as alone interposing between a balance of expenditure and receipts. It is true the calculations of that gentleman were erroneous, and that the actual deficiency will be at least three times greater than he estimated, but of Mr. Laing's chief errors arose from his too sanguine valuation of the opium revenue. The ruling price was nearly treble the average price in ordinary times, and though he prudently abated one-third, he still based his estimate on double the fair and healthy value of the drug. For this he-or his informants-is much to be blamed, but in fact the whole business of Indian finance is a bewildering jungle of figures from which there seems to be no extrication. One of the first steps towards equalising outgoings with incomings must be the investment of the Legislative Council with full control over the expenditure. It is unreasonable to expect a balanced Budget so long as the Home Government assumes the prerogative of making away with large sums of money on its own responsibility. In any case it is unjust to call upon that council to incur unpopularity by the imposition of fresh taxes to meet demands with which it has nothing to do.

Religious Squabbles.—The Vicar Apostolic of Verapoly, who has hitherto exercised spiritual jurisdiction over the "Catholic churches" of Malabar, has complained to the Governor of Madras that a Syrian bishop, ordained by the Chaldean patriarch of Mosul, is trying to obtain possession of the churches of the Chaldean rite, although he possesses no rescript from the Pope. The Vicar Apostolic trusts "that without interfering with the consciences of individuals, it would not be thought incompatible with justice to grant effectual protection to the churches so long under his control against any invasion of the rights of property, or attempts to disturb the peace." The Madras Government say, while they refuse their sanction to any forcible intrusion by the Syro-Chaldean bishop, they will no less strictly refrain from putting any constraint on the people in their choice of their own spiritual guides; this must be left entirely to the people themselves, and on them must depend the reception which the new bishop meets with. Our sympathy is entirely with the Syro-Chaldean bishop. Historically the real intruder is the Romish Church which, through its hierarchs and Goa Inquisition, caused as much oppression and injustice on the Malabar Coast last century as did ever the Guises, de Montforts, or Dominics in Europe.

CENTRAL ASIA.—According to the Cabool newsletter in the Delhi Gazette, the Shah of Bokhara has succeeded in reducing the rebels who have so successfully resisted his authority since his father's death. After taking the town of Kootaub, near Shahur Subz, he is said, like a true Oriental, to have put two hundred prisoners to death.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 22; or, on cloth, in a case, 22. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 23. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided. has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while stood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do the substantial than the surface of the profit are provided by the surface of the surf pleasure or 109 profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhe rantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unlesstatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is caten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhausive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the iliustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

who cannot conveniently absent themselves from their occupation to enjoy that change of air and scene so necessary to good health. Such persons will find that, next to country air, the best purifiers of the blood are Holloway's Pills. They improve the action of every human organ by expelling impurities and all other noxious matters which have gained admission either into the solid or fluid materials of which the body is composed. These Pills usually act as mild aperients.
Holloway's Pills have long been regarded as the safest antidetes for disease, both in cold and warm climates, and the surest opponent to all complaints incidental to men, women, and children.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties-a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

- "The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.
- "Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.
- "The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.
- "Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

- "Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.
- "The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.
- "These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte; she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.
- "These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted-and, as it would seem, systematically tortured-Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 30, 1861.
- "The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."-Critic, June 22, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of intelligence from Calcutta to the 30th of July, and from Bombay to the 12th of August. The "Nil Durpan" scandal promises to become as famous in history as the loss of Miss Cripps's reticule, or the theft of the Little Pedlington pump-ladle. A very severe sentence has been passed upon Mr. Long. The reverend gentleman has been condemned not only to pay a fine of one thousand rupees, but also to undergo a month's imprisonment. The fine was instantly discharged by the Baboo Prosunnoo Sing, and we could have wished that the matter had there ended. There may be no great hardship in a month's confinement, but quite enough to elevate Mr. Long to the dignity of martyrdom. It is needless to trouble our readers of Promissory Notes of the Government of India payable to bearer on demand, for such sums, not less than ten rupees, as the Government, but quite enough to elevate Mr. Long to the dignity of martyrdom. It is needless to trouble our readers lished in British India. The whole amount is provided in British India. Expected at Southampount.

this lamentable case: let it suffice to say that they are divided into diametrically opposite parties, each mistaking violence of expression for force of argument, and each imputing to its opponents not only ignorance but envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness. Mr. Seton-Karr, Secretary to the Bengal Government, by whose authority this foolish drama was favoured with the official frank, has published a statement in which he makes an ample apology for his share in this untoward affair. He denies any intention of libelling the planters, towards whom he is personally well disposed, and with many of whom he is connected by the ties of a sincere friendship. The drama in question was, in his eyes, nothing more than a popular exponent of native feeling, and as such worthy of the notice of the authorities and of all who are desirous to become acquainted with the under currents of native society. But as the effect of the publication has been to create a strong feeling of irritation between Europeans and natives, he deeply regrets having contributed in any way to its circulation. Nothing can be more satisfactory than such an amende honorable.

From all parts of India we receive accounts of a heavy downfall of rain, and of consequent floods to a disastrous extent. All fear of famine, however, is removed, and the face of the country is covered with most promising verdure. Unhappily another terrible scourge has made its appearance. Cholera is raging in the Upper Provinces, and both at Delhi and Meerut many Europeans have fallen victims to its ravages.

The License Act for imposing a duty on Arts, Trades, and Dealings, received the assent of the Viceroy on the 16th of July. By this Act every person who shall exercise any art. trade, or dealing for gain or profit for any period between the 1st of August in one year and the 1st of August of the succeeding year shall pay for such period, if belonging to Class I., Rs. 3; if belonging to Class II., Rs. 2; if belonging to Class III., Rs. 1.

The Paper Currency Act, to provide for Government Paper Currency, received the assent of the Viceroy on the 16th of July. This Act provides for the establishment by the Governor-General in Council of a Department of the Public Service, to be called the Department of Issue, for the issue of Promissory Notes of the Government of In-

> The Electric Telegraph Department is to be entirely reorganised, and certainly not before it was necessary to do so.

> The Commission appointed to regulate the details of the amalgamation scheme has at length terminated its labours, and received the thanks of the Governor-general in Council, with the further promise of recommending their services to the favourable consideration of the Secretary of State for India. Elsewhere we give a list of the officers of the Bombay army, who having applied for admission to the staff corps, constituted by the Royal Warrant of the 16th January, 1861, are appointed to the Bombay Royal corps, subject to the approval of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India. The number of officers who have been admitted to the staff corps, is fifty-two.

> It has been finally decided by the Bombay Government that Warree Bunder should be the terminus of the G. I. P. Railway, and Colaba of the Bombay and Baroda Railway. A memorial is receiving the signatures of both Europeans and natives, with a view to urge upon Government the propriety of demolishing the useless ramparts of the fort. The site of those encumbrances is valued at upwards of £600,000, which might be advantageously applied to the harbour defences and to the permanent improvement of the town and island; while the ground thus gained would be in-valuable for building purposes.

OUR PUNJAB FRONTIER.

The policy which has been consistently pursued by the Punjab Government during the last twelve years in its dealings with the wild tribes of the Soolimaun range has just achieved a crowning success. The Muhsood Wuzeerees, the great tribe against which Brigadier General Chamberlain's expedition last year was directed, and which has ever since been "under blocksde," has made its submission, and been re-admitted to all the advantages of free intercourse with the British territory. This event is worthy of note, not only because the Wuzeerees are perhaps the most formidable, the most numerous and united of the frontier tribes, but because they have held out longest against British supremacy, and have been the last of all the frontier clans to admit their inability to contend successfully with British power.

It is gratifying to find a firm yet humane policy, consistently carried out for a number of years, at last crowned with success. The Punjab frontier policy was originated by Sir Henry Lawrence, and has been rigidly carried out by his successors through such agents as John Nicholson and Chamberlain. It has been a purely defensive policy, though to those who have not un derstood its real working, and have read from time to time of punitory expeditions visiting the hills, it may have seemed otherwise. A line of small military posts, established at various distances from each other in immediate contiguity with the low outer range of the Soolimann Mountams, which marks our boundary from Sind unwards, with supports and reserves in their rear, has enabled the authorities to watch and control the border, and to check anything but petty cattle lifting and thefts. the case of tribes which have dared to commit more serious raids, or which have taxed our patience too severely by a long series of robberies, a system of what may be called punitory visits has been adopted. So successfully have these punitory visits been conducted, thanks to the ability of General Chamberlain and to the martial qualities of the troops he has trained and led, that no tribe has ever required a second visit. In most cases submission and reparation have been offered to the victorious General on the spot; in no case have they been so long delayed as in that of the Muhsood Wuzeerees, a tribe which until the other day boasted that it had never been conquered. It, too, has now succumbed, and instead of watching the British posts, matchlock in hand, from the neighbouring heights, the proud Wuzeerees are at this moment thronging our frontier marts, and exchanging the simple commodities of their hills, such as iron, wood, and matting, for the produce of European civilization .- Friend of India.

THE FUTURE NATIVE ARMY OF INDIA.

Twelve millions and a quarter sterling, or less, will eventually suffice to cover the total annual expenses of the Indian army, European and native, exclusive of Home charges. Should the subsequent recommendations of the Indian Government be thoroughly carried out, the strength of the native army will have undergone a total reduction of 100,000, and that of the European army a total increase of 31,000, compared with the existing state of things in April, 1857. In other words, one European soldier will have been added in the room of every three native soldiers displaced. When it is also considered that we have now almost got rid of native artillery throughout India, it must be admitted that, bitter as the lesson of 1857 undoubtedly was, it has not been altogether without its salutary uses, and that out of the enormous evil wherewith Air was fraught, and which must continue more or s to exercise pernicious influence over the prekent generation, some wholesome and lasting good has been extracted. A political storm of simost unexampled fury, presaged by many, but ing more substantial power, is respected and feared which found us utterly unprepared, suddenly proportionately. The other European officers are burst over pur great state ship, sweeping many of few and select, and, as a rule, well qualified for bers.

the good crew to destruction, rooting up masts, their posts. The position of the native officer is scattering rigging, and threatening to swamp the very hold itself and hurry all on board to their doom. But, by the unparalleled exertions of officers and men, and by deeds of individual skill and heroism seldom, if ever, surpassed, the ship was saved and enabled to battle successfully against the mutinous elements rioting around her. A tranquil calm has succeeded that memorable storm, all damages have been repaired, the bulwark strengthened, the crew doubled in numbers, and a good look-out maintained. But the ship floats at anchor amid the same treacherous elements, and is beset by the same hidden dangers as before. These are inseparable from her position, and render perpetual watchfulness and the skilful appliance of all the most approved safeguards as indispensable as ever. It is time, however, that we should drop our metaphor, and reiterate in plain and unmistakeable language that, of all the elements alluded to, the native army is at once the most dangerous and the most indispensable. Men there are, whose high position and general ability forbid the suspicion of insanity, who yet advocate the possibility of holding our place in India solely by means of an European force. Happily for us all, there seems no chance of their theory being carried into practice; indeed, until very recently, the persistence of Govern ment in an opposite policy furnished some grounds for rational alarm. At length, however, a happy medium course appears likely to be attained. The extensive reductions so long called for in vain have been actually initiated in earnest, and already we breathe more freely than at any period since the mutiny of 1857. We have not yet reached the minimum consistent at once with safety, economy, and the requirements of the Empire. But we confidently look forward to the time, we trust not far distant, when the completion of our chief lines of railway will, by facilitating the transmission of troops and stores between remote points, render the maintenance of so vast an army no longer indispensable.

The great principle which we would advocate in regard to our native army is, that in proportion as we diminish its numbers we should elevate its standard, and at the same time do all in our power to secure its fidelity in time of trial by rendering it contented in time of peace. How best to effect these objects is a problem which has never been satisfactorily solved. We flattered ourselves that we had practically solved it long ago, till the sepoy host flung off the mask that had so effectually concealed from outward ken the smouldering discontent of many years. A great opportunity now presents itself for rectifying whatever past experience may have proved to be faulty in the old system. We have commenced pulling down, right and left, in order to build up again with the same old materials as before; and these may answer the purpose well enough, provided the foundations be sound. To these latter therefore, our attention should be chiefly directed. The regular system, having so signally failed in Bengal, is to be gradually abandoned, both there and in the other two presidencies, in favour of that called irregular. There is reason for believing this latter system to be the more acceptable of the two to native soldiers generally, and especially in the cavalry branch. Highly respectable native gentlemen are often attracted to our irregular regiments of horse, and are found filling the commissioned grades. The troopers, however, have been, at all events till lately, greatly underpaid, and as a natural consequence, involved in debt. This may have turned the scale with many against our cause when their fidelity was put to the test. It will be found the soundest policy to fix their pay by a liberal standard, sufficient for their comfortable subsistence, and thus lift them a step or two higher above the influence of temptation. But the chief recommendations of the irregular system, both for cavalry and infantry, are its comparative simplicity and better adaptation to the native character and peculiar idiosyncracies. The commanding officer, havproportionately. The other European officers are better defined and more satisfactory to himself than under the regular system, which galls his pride by subjecting him to be snubbed and cast into the shade by every fledgeling ensign of the regiment. Much, nevertheless, remains to be done for the benefit of native officers, and the attention of Government has been especially directed to the subject by the amalgamation commission. We attribute a very high degree of importance, in the practical solution of the native army problem, to the future course adopted in regard to this long neglected though influential class of men, whom it should henceforth be our object to raise higher in the order of intelligence by the introduction of some systematic qualifications for the post; and, having so raised them in character and acquirements, to remunerate and respect them accordingly.

Finally, we have long inclined to the belief that much of the disaffection that so widely pervaded the old sepoy army may be traced to our erroneous course of procedure, and miserably illjudged policy in regard to the native commissioned officers. While great changes are impending over our military system in India, we invite thereto the attention of those in whose hands will lie the remedy .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXHIBITION OF 1862.—We understand that the chiefs and leading men of India who came forward and furnished articles of value and curious productions for the Great London Exhibition of 1851, and who have been invited to assist the Exhibition of 1862 in a similar manner, have evinced extreme backwardness on this occasion. scarcely any one having supplied, or announced his intention to forward, anything for next year's show. The Indian Government has placed one lakh of rupees at the disposal of the gentlemen going home with the Indian productions, for the purpose of purchasing representative specimens of its resources, arts, manufactures, &c.; but we fear that the absence of the handsome and costly objects which went home to the former Exhibition will cause the coming one to show this empire with diminished lustre. We are sorry to hear the unsatisfactory return and doubtful fate of things furnished for the former Exhibition stated as the cause of the contributors not again coming forward to assist in that of next year.

LAHORE, July 30.—The rain still continues to pour down as much as ever, the consequence of which is that some two hundred houses have fallen in the city, causing also the loss of some Our little station was nearly inundated the other day; in fact, it would have been but for the timely measures taken by the canal overseer, Mr. Marshall. It appears that owing to the severe rain which we have lately had the water in the canal which runs by the gaol rose to such a height that it broke the bund, and thus gave itself egress across the open plain between the canal and the residency. Fortunately, Mr. Marshall arrived at this critical moment, and getting together all the natives he could find at the Residency succeeded after some trouble in turning off the rush.

PESHAWUR, July 18 .- It has been ascertained with tolerable accuracy that the number of buildings destroyed in the city during the terrible storm of the 1st instant rises to nearly one thousand four hundred. But although there are several individuals still missing, the loss of life is not so great as was first reported. It is difficult, in a town having such a mixed and floating population as Peshawur, to account for every one in it at any given moment, and, as I said before, we may never know how many human beings have been buried under the ruins of their habitations, or otherwise killed. In cantonments, although no bungalows were carried away, almost every one bears traces of hard treatment. Gardens are virtually destroyed; compound walls badly cut up, where they are not entirely levelled to the ground; and out-offices destroyed in great num-

Mussoorie, July 25.—Some excitement has been caused in the Landour bazaar during the Mohurrum, which has just ended by an attempt made by some young men who lately came up here from the plains to interfere with the celebration of that Mahomedan festival. It seems that during one of the processions common on these occasions, some four or five of that fortanate class of young officers who are allowed to leave their regiments in the plains in order that they may pass the hot season in these hills for the benefit of their health, rode at a harum scarum pace through the crowd that was following the Taboots, knocking down a few of the fellows who were carrying them, and breaking the tops of the images. The Mussulmans, as a matter of course, took offence at what they were pleased to term an interference with one of their religious ceremonials. A considerable disturbance, in which, however, no one received any serious injury, The police, who appear to have acted with great temper and moderation, forced to withdraw; but a complaint has been made to Major Troup, the officer commanding the Depot at Landour, and the matter is under investigation. I hear that the expedition which has been planned by Government for the exploration of such portions of Chinese Tartary as are accessible to European travellers, will start from Simha about the close of the ensuing cold season. course chalked out is up the valley of the Sntlej, thence turning off at the junction of the Spite river, following its course, crossing by the Parang Pass into the valley of the river of that name, thence by the Lanak Pass to Haule in the valley of the Indus. Some are of opinion that beyond the snowy range north of the Spite valley the expedition will have to contend with many and formidable difficulties. It is well known that the Chinese Tartars do not like the idea of Europeans visiting their districts. Mr. Wilson, the famous Himalayah sportsman, has frequently told me that it is very unsafe to venture beyond the boundary of Spite or Ladak. In 1853 I visited the Spite valley, and was encamped at Damku, the highest village north of the river. During the few days I stopped here I was negotiating with the Lafa (the head man in the village) for permission to pursue the route by the Taree Pass to Wangpo in Tartary; and with the view of inducing him to a compliance, which notwithstanding all he had said I still thought he might be empowered to grant, I sent a present, first of some coarse shawls. In return I received a couple of sheep: afterwards, at different times, grapes, sugar, and tobacco were sent, and were politely acknowledged by a present of ghee and But he assured me that his order against the intrusion of foreigners could not be infringed, and that no lucrative inducement, however great, would have any effect upon his resolution. early enterprising travellers-Gerard, Stratchey, and Moorcroft-were never able to penetrate into Chinese Tartary, although the attempt was often made .- Times of India.

Armies of Exercise.-It is stated, says the Mofussilite, that two Armies of Exercise are to be formed in the Punjab on an extensive scale; one to be encamped at Loodiana or Umballa, which will comprise troops from Delhi, Ferozepore, and other distant places, even Meean Meer; the other army, it is said, will be within the territorial limits of Sir Sydney Cotton's command.

SUPERNUMERARY ELEPHANTS. - Among the items of expenditure where a saving would be effected the attention of the military Finance Commission has been drawn to the large sum paid for the keep of supernumerary elephants. A suggestion has been made which would effect a saving of Rs. 27,000 on every 100 spare elephants. The Government possess about 1,300 elephants, which are located at the large stations, such as Barrackpore, Dinapore, Benares, Raneegunge and Peshawur. Of these about 500 are always looked upon as supernumerary, and the military reductions would make perhaps 400 more supernumerany. An allowance of 4 annas a day is made to each mahout for grass for each animal. This in we believe since acted upon to some extent, was to send all the spare elephants into a jungly country, such as Chota Nagpore, and stop the allowance of 4 annas a day. In addition to this saving the cost of grain is much less in the jungle than in stations. The difference would generally be about 8 annas a day. This, together with the other reduction, would effect a total saving of Rs. 27,000 a-year for every 100 elephants. Whether the elephants might be turned to any useful account in such a country as Chota Nagpore, such as the transport of cotton for private growers, is a question which Government does not yet appear to have considered.

FORGERIES.—Telegraphic advice was received in town on the 25th July of forgeries committed in Calcutta, in the shape of credits upon Glynn and Co., of London, to the amount of £10,000 and upon which that amount was realised here by a mercantile man, who, after a few months' residence here, left in one of the P. and O. Company's May steamers for England, and died on his way down the river. One of the Calcutta banks and two mercantile houses are losers by these forgeries—the former to the amount of Rs. 70,000, and the latter about Rs. 15,000 each. We (Englishman) are glad to be informed that the holders of the forged bills upon Glynn and Company will probably be covered by the margins or balances likely to accrue from sundry shipments of goods made by the defaulting party to London, amounting to about £50,000, upon which only £40,000 has been advanced; and as the produce is stated to have been well selected, there is every reason to believe that the full invoice value will be realised.

NEPAUL, July 15.—We had a partial eclipse of the sun on the 8th at 9 a.m., when all pious Hindoos bathe thrice in the river before breaking fast. It is customary here at a total eclipse of the sun or moon to give alms to the poor, and the Maharajah on these occasions has a number of cows made of wood, covered with cloth, and stuffed with salt, which he presents to the Brahmins; also living cows shod with silver, and hav ing their horns encased in gold, besides donations of money and corn. The Natives look upon the comet as portentous of ill to the country and mothers adjure their children not to look at it. This, I believe, is the case with all ignorant Natives. Owing to the nights being cloudy, we have not been able to have proper view of this erratic stranger. 11th instant the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor attained his 44th year, and there was a general holiday through the country. He fed a thousand Brahmins, and invoked the protection of the gods. In former times, on the anniversary of the King's birthday, he presented his weight in gold, silver, copper, and wheat to the Gooroo, but the Maharajah has curtailed the first as superfluous. Jung is obliged to keep a tight hand on the vagaries of his Malick, as he calls him, otherwise the country would be ruined by a fool who would gladly pay a lakh of rupees for a large monkey, and 50,000 for a pair of India rubber goloshes, and who, on one occasion, had all the crown diamonds-to the value of three lakhs of rupees-broken to pieces, declaring they were false. All the members of this family display an eccentricity that would be amusing were they not tainted with inhumanity so brutal as to make us shudder at the bare thought of it. Before Jung got the power which he uses to such a good end as the welfare of his country, the Ranees. for their own private amusement, frequently caused their delinquent maid servants to mount a tree, beneath which faggots were piled, and the poor victims were roasted to death, while these modern Jezebels rejoiced in witnessing their ago nies. And the King, not to be excelled, has I am told, often committed such brutalities as it is impossible to write of. But, happily for the people, those days are past, and the King lives in honourable surveillance, being permitted to take an airing twice a week in an open tions of course it is necessary. The suggestion me to him. I made him a salaam, but was made to the Military Finance Commission, and greeted with a grin; I repeated the operation with the same success, when Jung, turning round, asked me why I did not salaam the King. I told him I had done so, and it seemed to amuse him. I shall never forget what followed. Jung asked his Malick why he did not return my salaam, and ordered him to do so immediately; and the poor imbecile, making a virtue of necessity, complied with as good a grace as he could. The Maharajah has been a firm and faithful ally to us in the time of our utmost need, and every friend of order should wish him a long and prosperous direction of the Government over which he now presides. — Englishman.

The Nawab of Bhawulpore, whom I reported to you as having murdered his minister and his brothers, appears to like the mode of proceeding, and threatens to extirpate the family, male and female, kith and kin. The chiefs of Bhawulpore have made representations to Sir R. Montgomery, which have induced him to request that the family be sent for protection into British territory. Of course, being an independent prince, who can do what he likes with his own, this murderous ruler will escape unpunished for his open crime.

JODHPORE .- From Jodhpore we hear that a number of rebels, estimated at about four or five hundred, three hundred of whom are sowars and the rest camel men, have got together. Measures have been taken to prevent their entering other States, and the chiefs have been warned to render them no assistance.

THE FAMINE DISTRICT .- The aspect of the country is now wonderfully changed. From Allyghur to Delhi, from Delhi to Meerut, and from Meerut to Moradabad, the country is one glorious mass of green, variegated here and there where the land is low and flat by patches of water. Population seems called into existence as by a wizard's wand, and every acre of ground, however distant from a station, or remote from a village, is brought under the influence of the plough. From early dawn to dewy eve, as the carriage conveys you from one station to another, look where you will, there are husbandmen with their oxen studded all over the plain busy with their plough. A stranger travelling through this part of the country would scarcely credit that famine had so recently visited the land. His entrance into a station, however, would tell him a sad tale. The sufferers by the famine, though not numerous, are yet sufficient to draw attention to excite his pity and to call for sympathy. poor-houses bear their testimony to this. times, however, are at hand,-and when one reflects on the barren state of the Doab but a month back, and sees the country as it now is, he may without exaggeration say it is a land flowing with milk and honey .- Delhi Gazette.

INDORE.—Since the return of Holkar from the Jubbulnore durbar his Highness's attention has been drawn towards the improvement of the city of Indore. The Maharajah has constructed, at a considerable cost, a pukka embankment and aqueduct, for supplying the city of Indore with water. His Highness sent to England for the iron pipes required for this purpose. The railways are passing through his territories, and his Highness has consented to pay the expenses of a branch railway to Dwarka.

BURDWAN, July 20 .- Out of the hundred and twenty lives endangered by the overflow of the Damoodar, at a village near Rajahrampore, ninety-nine have been saved by the humane exertions of the Rajahrampore Mittras. Three female and two male corpses were found lying among the bamboo bushes close by, and the remaining seventeen are still missing, though every exertion has been used to discover them. Government officers are actively inquiring into the matter, and the Commissioner is shortly about to visit the spot, attended by some engineers of the district.

RENTS.—We (Englishman) have been favoured by Mr. James Hills, of Neeschindpore, with "a set of tables showing the grounds on which an a country where jungle abounds is simply 4 carriage guarded by one of the generals. I met increase of rent is claimed by him." As these sames in the mahout's pocket. In some sta-him one evening with Jung, who introduced tables will be useful to many who, by the acts of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, now find | that is making havoc amongst us. Our silence | keep body and soul together, consequently they themselves cut off from the pursuit which first induced them to become landholders, we with pleasure bring them to their notice. In these tables are shown the average yield of crops for ten years, viz., 1849 to 1859; the prices which in each year ruled in the bazaars; the rent per beegah paid to the landholder; and the prowhich that rent bore to the portion ceeds. Mr. Hills has made a careful distinction between each description of crop and its value. He shows that the hitherto assessed on land held in jummah has been annas 6-10 per beegah, and on ootbundy lands Rs. 2-8 for sugar cane, Rs. 1-4 for turmeric and chilli, and annas 13-3 for all other crops. The custom in all parts of the civilised world is to take as rent for the land one third of the crop it produces. If this rule be applied at Neeschindpore Mr. Hills shows that, taking the average of the ten years comprised in his tables, the rent he would be entitled to would have ranged from Rs. 2.9-6 on the less valuable crops, to Rs. 13 per beegah on sugar cane; and to this he fairly claims to be entitled. Of the justice of these conclusions there can be no doubt, assuming, of course, the value of the crops in each year as given by Mr. Hills to be correct; or that he is fully entitled to demand of his ryots the enhanced rent calculated at onethird of the value of the produce. Mr. Hills, however, is not desirous of oppressing his ryots, and is willing, as an indulgence, to permit them to continue to cultivate on lands held in jummah at a uniform rate of one rupee per begah, and in fussulee lands at rates varying firm Rs. 1-4 to Rs. 3, according to the value of the crop raised. We would bring these tables and the arguments of Mr. Hills, in support of his conclusions, prominently to the notice of the Lieutonant-governor of Bengal. They indicate plainly, though silently, how erroneous has been his policy in respect of the matters in dispute between planter and ryot, and how, in seeking to benefit the latter at the expense of the former, he has injured both.

THE STAFF CORPS.—We (Englishman) glad to learn that amongst the regulations of the new Staff Corps, not hitherto made public, is one to the effect that every officer in that corps, of the rank of lieutenant-colonel including, will, on the expiration of ten years' service in that grade, be permitted to retire on the pay and emoluments of a full colonel, including, as we understand the rule, the compensation in lieu of off-reckonings, or the reversion of the same in his turn. We believe that the compact in this case, as between the Government and the officer, is to be a fair one, and such as the Government has the right to institute with reference to individual efficiency and the good of the service. The lieutenantcolonel has the right to go after the ten years service in that rank, as above stated; and, on the other hand, the Government holds to itself the right to make him go, with the advantages stated, if it no longer desires his services. This would, as a general rule, enable officers to retire with a competence, if desirous of so doing, at about fiftyfour years of age; and it would ensure to Government the power of shelving them respectably and liberally at the same period of life, should it think right to do so.

PROVISIONAL REGIMENTS. - The Provisional Cavalry Regiment, Barrackpore, is commanded by Captain Saunders. The adjutant is Lieutenant Cuppage, who was severely wounded at Delhi. Captain Evans (late 6th) is paymaster and quartermaster. The Provisional Infantry Regiment at Dum Dum is commanded by Major Kemp, an officer highly distinguished at Delhi. Major Anderson, distinguished at Cawnpore, is first acting field officer. Captain Metcalfe, who lately commanded the depot at Barrackpore, is third acting field officer. Lieutenant Currie (of the late 6th) is acting paymaster. Ensign Marley, who received his commission for long and meri torious service, is quartermaster of the Provisional Infantry Regiment.

CHOLERA IN MEERUT .- Hitherto we (Mofussilite) have refrained from making any observa-may be attributed to various reasons unnecessary at present to enter into. Whilst we feel it incumbent on us to prevent the spread of alarm at such a time as this, we have seen sufficient already to convince us that we should be doing wrong in disguising the truth, and it becomes our duty to chronicle things as they really are. Old and well remembered faces are momentarily passing from us. Those whom a few hours ago we met in familiar conversation are now no more. Truth in this case is more strange than fiction. To convince anyone that the cholera is prevalent, it is only necessary for them to attend at the burial ground before daybreak and at sunset daily. Within the last few days several of the Europeans in this and the surrounding stations have succumbed to it. It is our sad duty to record as victims to the disease the names of Captain De Winton and Lieut. Thomas Richards, of H.M.'s 8th (Royal Irish) Hussars, Lieut. O. M. Glubb, Superintendent Meerut District Police (late 37th Lieut. Edward Hardy Hugh Elliot, Bengal Horse Artillery. Most strenuous exertions are being made by the authorities to check the advance of the disease, and great credit is due to the medical officers and subordinates for their promptitude and devotion at this trying time. The wind has chopped round during the past thirty six hours, and it is hoped that it will operate favourably on the health of the station.

A HINT TO MANCHESTER .- The following extract from a letter from Shahabad is valuable as showing how English manufactures may meet the wants of the people, and also affords a commentary upon the wealth of Mr. Grant's capitalists in money, which in other countries is usually supposed to constitute capital:-"I have been at much pains to make the inquiries you ask for, i.e., as to the relative proportion of natives clothed in home-made and European manufactures, and believe I am near the mark (excluding towns) when I say that in Southern Shahabad 75 per cent. of males and 90 per cent. of females are clothed in the coarse native manufactures. The cause of this is not to be found in the relative price, because in that case, for most purposes, the European manufactures would be preferredas it would also as regards quality-but two or three other reasons intervene. One is that the European manufacturer does not make lengths and patterns one by one to order, neither does he know the different lengths and breadths of goods worn by different classes of natives, as dhootees, chudders &c. Still less does he know the lengths required by their wives. Chintzes are making way fast amongst the Mussulmans, but the Hindoo's pat terns are only apparently known in Madras and The Hindoos in chintz like a dark Pondicherry. pattern; the Mussulmans generally a gay one. Again, the Hindoo women are fond of coloured goods, called ek rangha (one colour), but the Manchester people do not meet their wants except in the higher priced calicoes. Grey shirtings would go off much better in the Mofussil if coloured yellow, crimson, pink or light blue. Green, too, is a favourite colour. The native dyer now does this. The principal reason, however, of the preference in this part of India for native manufacture appears to be, that the salesmen of European calicoes and chintzes take only cash for their goods, while the native Jullaha or Tantia takes grain or any other produce. He will take out his price from one man in tobacco, from another in ghee, from another in wheat, from another in earthern pots, from the barber for shaving him, and so on. The only money the native weavers hold is for the goods they sell in open bazaar, which suffices to pay for what they require and can obtain on no other terms than ready The carpenter repairs their loom, and takes his payment in cloth, not in money. Hundreds of villages have not a bunniah, who only congregate where there is a bazaar, consequently the trade is mostly in barter, and so long as this is the case will native supersede European manufactures in the interior. Labour is hard to be had, and yet is almost valueless; the people will have no ambition and never try to rise. is at the root of all this, and fear of losing caste keeps each man in his father's village, and in his father's and grandfather's routine. Manchester goods are penetrating the interior: and all have them for weddings and grand holidays, but yet the vast majority of the people dress as in the days of Manu and Bickramadub."-Hurkaru.

MYMENSINGH .- From Mymensingh a correpondent reports all quiet; the Garrows along the frontier having made no descents of late, and the chowkeedars and shikareewallahs having been armed with muskets by the Government, for their own defence, has had a good effect in teaching the hill men to keep to their own ground. We are glad to hear, from the same quarter, that orders have been given to commence the construction of a pucka road along the whole frontier from Goalparah to Sylhet, in October, thus joining all the hats upon that line; and also that the local authorities are bestirring themselves in the endeavour to increase the supply of cotton from the Garrow hills.

Lucknow, July 17 .- The district officers reported to our chief that they have every reason to suppose that arms are still secreted, and they are of opinion that it will be difficult to get at them, unless native officers be authorised to search houses on the warrant of an European officer. The chief commissioner in reply has informed them that a general search by native officers is not permissible, and that the district officers should exercise the power vested in them of personally, or by means of their European assistants, searching any house only where they have reason to suspect, by reliable information, that arms are to be found; avoiding the exercise of this power, however, in the case of large landed proprietors, without first consulting the deputy-commissioner and the inspector-general of police. He further added that, in any case, search was not to be made on the mere chance of finding arms, but on the most reliable grounds, or upon information received.— Mr. C. Currie applied to Government to have his appointment as secretary to chief commissioner of Oude dated from the period when the Punjab office, held in an officiating capacity by his predecessor, Mr. Forsyth, became vacant. The Government has declined to accede to the same.

THE NATIVE ARMY .- We stated, some days ago, says the Englishman, that the pay and allowances of the officers commanding the regiments of the new Bengal native army would be on a very liberal scale; and we mentioned Rs. 1,200 a month as probably the lowest amount that would be attached to those commands. It is now settled that officers commanding the new corps are to receive Rs. 1,500 a month, consolidated, and without any reference whatever to rank, the lieutenant colonel and the ensign drawing the same allowance for the command-a condition which we are very glad to see attached to the new rate of command pay. In case of commanding officers going away on sick leave, however, there will, of course, be a division of a portion of the above stated consolidated allowance between the departing officer and his successor, for a given time: but, at any rate, the new rule will benefit both, and is liberal in the extreme. Government has a right to expect first rate officers, and regiments in a high state of discipline and efficiency, for the scale of remuneration to commandants.

THE COMMISSION, of which Major-General Sir Richard Birch, K.C.B., is president, and Colonel W. M. Coglan, Colonel G. Balfour, C.B., Colonel V. Eyre, C.B., Major G. Chesney, are members, Captain Malleson, secretary, and which was constituted by Government General Order of the 26th February last, to consider and report on the arrangements necessary for carrying out the amalgamation of the Indian army with her Majesty's Forces, in accordance with the Royal Warrant, and with the Orders of her Majesty's Government, having concluded its task, is dissolved. In an order dated July 13, and published in the official Gazette, "His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, in recording his cordial approval of their services, desires to assure them tions of a local nature on the subject of the disease | not work more than sufficient to enable them to that he will bring to the notice of the Secretary of State the general good judgment and ability with which they have performed the duty en-trusted to them, and the valuable assistance they have afforded to the Government by their suggestions and opinions on various points connected

CAPTAIN E. THOMPSON .- The Bengal Hurkaru of the 19th July learns that Captain E. Thompson, of the late 67th Native Infantry, a Deputy Commissioner in Oude, whose leave of absence on private affairs to England for six months appeared in the Calcutta Gazette, has been permitted to go home, retaining his appointment, for the purpose of submitting to the Board of Ordnance a new rifle shell of his own perfecting. We say perfecting, because the missile is merely an improvement on an old invention. Norton, Jacob, Mitford, and others have produced rifle shells with more or less success and pretty equal merits, but they have been all liable to one great objection to their being introduced into the army-namely, that they explode with very slight concussion, and, therefore, cannot be carried without considerable danger. It is this difficulty that Captain Thompson has, we believe, after much experiment, succeeded in overcoming, and, if so, he will have provided our army with a projectile which will render the rifle as terrible a weapon as the Armstrong gun.

SEETAPORE.-A murderous assault was committed on a lady by a native at Seetapore on Sunday, July 14. Some time ago Captain MacGregor, the cantonment magistrate at that station, had occasion to punish the man by imprisonment. Shortly after this he removed from the house he then occupied, and Colonel Taylor went into it. It seems, however, that the man, actuated by revenge, proceeded in broad daylight to the house on the day in question, and, finding an opportunity, walked right in. Mrs. Taylor was by herself, and, taking her for Mrs. MacGregor, he savagely rushed at her, and, seizing her by the throat, threw her on the floor, placed his knee on her chest, and in a minute more would perhaps have crushed her to death, but for a little dog which barked, and whose unusual barking brought a servant into the room, who had the presence of mind to pull down a door-purda and throw it at the ruffian, which caused him to loosen his hold and rise. Another minute brought more help, and the intending murderer was secured, we are happy to say. Meanwhile, we regret to hear Mrs. Taylor lies dangerously ill from the effects of the barbarous treatment she received. Colonel Taylor was away at the time from home on court martial duty at

THE RAINS.—A gentleman travelling from Cawnpore to Futtyghur writes that the whole country is under water. Such rain has never been known in the memory of man. The whole pucks road has in places been carried away in Futtyghur, and people have to make a detour to get to their houses. An entire village under Walker's house in Futtyghur was carried away, and the poor villagers narrowly escaped with their lives. Those who have not seen the flood could scarcely credit its extent. The writer was nearly drowned in the road; the fury of the wind and rain was such that the horses could not travel, and even men could not face it. From the 16th July the rain had abated.

MAJOR W. C. ERSKINE, C.B., 73rd N.I., heir to the Earldom of Kellie, is about to retire from the service, and will be succeeded as agent to the Governor-general in the Saugor and Nerbudda territory by Mr. A. H. Cocks, C.B.

MR. E. LAUTOUR.-Some time since a petition was presented to the Bengal Government by certain zemindars of the 24 pergunnahs, praying for the removal of Mr. E. Lautour, the civil and Sessions Judge of that Zillah. The petitioners complained that they had "no confidence in his judgment, integrity, or honesty of purpose." Mr. Lautour being well versed in the arts of native chicanery is more than a match for the zemindars. in their efforts to destroy the rights of their ryot tenantry. Hinc illæ lachrymæ. The Government declares that Mr. Lautour's character for integrity stands unsullied by the reckless and unfounded accusations brought against him.

THE GARROWS .- The Bengal Sudder has sentenced to death three of the savage Garrows on the north-eastern frontier, who headed the party that, in May, 1860, murdered sixteen of our native subjects in the north of the Mymensingh district, and afterwards mutilated the bodies. They confessed the crime, and will be executed in their own villages before their own people. Their accomplices, in number some twenty men have been condemned to transportation for various periods. The capture of the murderers was the result of our last raid into the Hills, under Lieut. Morton. Their object was not so much plunder as human heads to offer to their spirit of the mountains. Their country is in many points well suited for the cultivation of cotton, so that Manchester may ultimately tame them as well as their neighbours, the Kookees.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF A MISSIONARY -We (Lahore Chronicle) have had an opportunity of perusing the official account of the arrest of the miscreant who, a few days ago, attempted the life of a Missionary, the Rev. W. Tuting, while preaching close to the Mission Chapel at Peshawur. Happily the rev. gentleman received no injury, and it is satisfactory to know that the act was that of an individual fanatic unabetted by Mr. Tuting was standing on the lower others. step of the Mission-house, and was about to take up the preaching from the Rev. W. Clark, when a man came up to the step behind him and raised a large Affghan knife to cut him down; before he could make his blow good he was seized by the chowkeedar of the Mission-house and a je madar of police, who grappled with the man, and with the assistance of others threw him down disarmed and secured him until the arrival of the kotwal, who came up immediately—the spot being near the kotwalee. The assassin was then carried off to the kotwalee and put in irons. The culprit is a sepoy of the Guide Corps on leave, named Noor Shah, of the Kummer Kheyl tribe, and formerly a priest, resident of Peerah. He pretended to be under the influence of intoxicating drugs, but everything about him showed premeditation. His knife was newly sharpened, his loose trousers tucked up above the knee and carefully secured round the waist, so as not to impede immediate flight, and the small leather bag carried by hillmen was strapped round his shoulders. Both the chowkeedar and the jemadar of police, who at much risk to themselves secured the prisoner, are Maho medans. They have each received a reward of a hundred rupees. There were numerous Mahomedans amongst the bystanders. It was the season of the Mohurrum, when the fanaticism of the sect is peculiarly virulent. Yet there was no attempt at rescue, no movement of sympathy. It is probable that a few years ago the crowd would have sided with the assassin. The providential escape of the Missionary, the apparent isolation of the fanatic, and the good conduct of his co-religionists in a place like Peshawur, are redeeming incidents of this untoward affair.

MILITARY COURTS OF REQUESTS. isions of the Stamp Act, from which Military Courts of Requests in the Indian armies have been hitherto exempt, are now decreed by the law authorities to be strictly applicable to the proceedings of these tribunals; all petitions or "requests" to which will, in future, be required to be stamped. This may, to a certain extent, operate to deter dishonest natives, and those having no just claims, from bringing officers, on insufficient grounds, before these courts—a practice which is much indulged in throughout our military stations -and if it should have a marked influence in this way, it may be welcomed as a benefit. The Advocate-General is of opinion that the late ruling of the Government applies equally to European courts of requests established under the Mutiny Act for the Indian force, as it does to the courts of a cantonment joint magistrate exercising civil jurisdiction and the military courts of requests constituted under Act XI. of 1841. He thinks all these classes of courts come within the meaning of schedule B. of the Stamp Act (No. XXXVI of 1860); and he quite concurs in the reasons stated in the resolution of the Government above way, it may be welcomed as a benefit. The Advocate-cited, for holding that these courts are in reality civil courts administering exclusively civil justice in regard to certain classes of persons and substituted by the legislature for the ordinary Civil Courts in respect of such persons, in cases falling within their jurisdiction in point of amount. This ruling will not, of course, render it necessary that any petition or proceeding which, according to the present practice of such Courts, does not require to be in writing, shall be reduced to writing for the purpose of being stamped; but it does, he thinks, make it necessary that when petitions, or other proceedings in writing, which, under schedule B of the Stamp Act, require a stamp on being presented or filed in the ordinary Civil Courts, are presented or filed, such documents shall bear the stamp appropriated to them by that schedule. With reference to the above, the Government has issued orders that European as well as Native Military Courts of Requests are Civil Courts, within the meaning of Act XXXVI. of 1860 .- Englishman.

Moorshedabad, July 22.—The Mohurrum festival came off here as usual, with great éclat. There was every reason to fear that the Mahomedan population, who hate the Dewan Nizamut as they do a certain unclean beast, would commit acts of violence against him, but his highness the Nawab Nazim, anticipating this, took such precautionary measures that everything went on quietly, and only a Soonee sowar belonging to his Highness's staff was turned out for deriding the festival and its celebrators. On the abolition of the office of Dewan, Coomar Rajendro Narain Deb was appointed to the post of Madaral Maham, or manager of Nizamut affairs, and his duties are nearly the same as the late Dewan's. Raigh Prosunnoo has appealed to Government against the Nazim's proceedings, which he and his supporter, the agent to the Governor-general, expect to upset. In the official correspondence of the Nawab and the agent, since the commencement of the dispute, the latter, it is said, sometimes forgets the courtesy due to his highness.

SECUNDERABAD.-We hear from Madras, on the best authority, that the Finance Commissioner now on his way here, has instructions in his pocket to disband the Hydrabad Contingent, for the payment of which the Nizam reluctantly yielded thirty four lakhs per annum in Berar. It is intended to substitute a Madras Brigade, it is said, and thus obviate the necessity of disbanding any part of that force. In fact, having obtained thirty-four lakhs per annum from the Nizam on pretence of paying his contingent, it is intended to apply the coin to our own purposes. This looks very like a swindle. The measure probably originated with Colonel Balfour, himself a Madras officer; and if accomplished, will be viewed as a great financial success. It may, however, prove a canard, as it is understood the resident has received no intimation of such a change in view the arrangement as an unworthy attempt to take his country, and feel relieved by the ex-tinction of his contingent, and demand the restoration of Berar, the purpose for which it was assigned having expired. The assignment of Berar being expressly for the pay of the existing contingent, it will be difficult to make his Highness or anybody else undertand that the substitution of Madras troops is not, in fact, paying a part of the Madras army. The measure is, moreover, impolitic. The Nizam's contingent is not recruited in the same districts as the Madras army; and has no sympathy with it. The value of this separation of interests was prominently displayed in one of the chronic mutinies to which the Madras force is so susceptible. I allude to the batta mutiny of the Madras Army in 1842, when the Nizam's contingent marched a brigade into Secunderabad to overcome the mutineers; whilst other Madras regiments were sent into the stations of the contingent to be controlled. The services of the Nizam's contingent were loyally displayed in Central India in the suppression of the mutinies, and were recognised by the Government in the day of their difficulty. If disbandment after the efficient performance of their duties is now contemplated, in breach of treaties, it must reflect a slur on the character of our Government .-Englishman.

THE NAT-MEE .- At the last meting of the Asiatic Society a paper was read on the Nat-mee or Spirit Fire, a burning hillock in Pegu, about thirty miles from Phayetmye. Lieutenant Duff, who describes the phenomenon, was at first doubt ful of its existence, but on reaching the top of the hill to which he was directed he saw flames issuing from small fissures in the ground. Round the flames an open cairn had been piled up; it was evidently the result of the visits of pilgrims, who each throw one or two stones on the heap. The fact that this loose heap of stones is known to have been nearly in its present state for many years shows that there can be no explosive power in the fire. The combustion used to be much greater in former times, and now takes place only for two or three months at the change of the Burman year. The phenomenon is owing to an exudation of petroleum or of some inflammable gas ignited periodically by the burning of the jungle. inhabitants of the neighbouring village believe that if all their fires are not put out once a-year and relit from this the village will be burnt.

GERMAN MISSIONARIES .- The Government of India recently refused to exempt the Missionaries of the Basel Evangelical Society in Coorg and the Southern Mahratta country from paying Income tax. In their report they reduce the Government to a dilemma. "That this decision is evidently illiberal if not unjust we beg to show by the simple fact, that not one of us can lay by for himself a single rupee without violating the regulations of our society, and all the yearly surplus which any missionary may have, must return to the general Mission Fund, so that in reality we have no income whatever. What, then, is in our case the object of taxation? We can only find two answers: either our very expenditure must be taxed, which is rather a curious fact, or the funds of the society, which, as religious funds, have been exempted by the same Government.' It is the object of the impost to tax expenditure, which is simply income in another form. German Missionaries show a noble self-denial. Sixty male and female missionaries spent only Rs. 35,548, or less than Rs. 60 a month each. We may look on this at the lowest sum on which an educated European can exist in the interior of India. Half a century ago the personal expenses of each of the Serampore missionaries were 40s. a month at a time when they were contributing thousands of pounds to the Mission .- Friend of India.

THE "HENZA."-The Rangoon Times contains a short paper on the "Henza," which is a bird, the national emblem of the Burmese. It is found on their flags, on their Royal Seal, and on state occasions a model of it is exhibited among the insignia of Royalty. Travellers have differed as to what bird was intended—some maintaining it the force under his orders. The Nizam will to be a peacock, some a goose, and others a years hence.

duck. The last supposition is probably the correct one. The word "Henza," or "Hanza," duck. corresponds with the Burmese for a duck. This bears considerable resemblance to the Hindustani word. Pronounced with a rough aspirate it bears a close affinity to the word for goose in several European languages, such as German and Dutch. The term may at one time have been used indiscriminately by the Buddhists.

BERAR COTTON .- A correspondent of the Englishman, in a history of the Berar cotton trade, describes Narainraopettah, a large and populous town ninety miles south of Hyderabad, as the great mart, the Dacca, of the province. There muslins for the Moslem harems are turned out of exceeding fineness and beauty. The cotton of which these fabrics are made is longer in staple and finer than the best sea island. It is indigenous, but cultivated and picked with great care in a rich soil at the confluence of the Bheema and Kistna rivers. This bears out the assertion of Mr. Mackay, who was sent by Manchester to inspect the cotton districts of India, that with careful attention, such as is given in America, the indigenous cotton of India will equal the best New Orleans.

THE BANGALORE BANK, which has been established scarcely a year, has declared a dividend on the first nine months' operations at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. It has also a reserve fund of over 8 per cent on the nett profits. The capital, which was at first one lac, has been increased to five lacs.

THE INDUS FLOTILLA .- The doom of this old service has been sealed, Government having ordered its breaking up and determined on selling the steamers and discharging the crews as soon as possible. This is a great blow to Sind. Kotree will fall tremendously in importance, and, indeed, were it not for the railway, the place would soon become again what it was at the conquest, a native village. We do not, however, say a word against the impolicy of breaking up the Indus Flotilla before the organisation of a mercantile service to take its place—because we think the Government are doing right in equalising their receipts and disbursements. Moreover ,the community have no right to expect the Crown to engage in purely mercantile pursuits, and the Flotilla steamers were anything but a war service; it will not be long we hope ere mercantile corporations will fill their places with boats, perhaps, of a superior class; until then we must only put up with the inconvenience and delay attendant on the use of jumpties.—Our Paper.

RAILWAY TERMINI.—The Bombay Government has finally resolved that the terminus of the G. I. P. Railway shall be at Warree Bunder, and that of the Bombay and Baroda Railway at Colaba. Sir George Clerk, we believe, has shown a wise discretion in taking this matter out of debateable ground. At the rate we have been going on for the last ten years we should not have had an acre of land reclaimed from the harbour ten BHOOJ, KUTCH, July 13 .- DEADLY ENCOUNTER WITH A TIGER.-In a recent letter from this station you were informed of the successful exploit of a young officer who is attached to the 1st Grenadiers Native Infantry, who, single-handed, had killed two panthers. These successes, however, led the youthful shikaree to be more daring than prudent, and in his last engagement with a fine panther the struggle was the most severe I have ever heard of, nor was it decided till the sportsman with five of his men were driven from the field wounded and bleeding, and in actual ignorance of the fact that they were victors. There are many opinions and stories as to the arrangement of the forces before the panther's den, but from all I can learn the entire party, about eight or ten persons, drew up before the cave, instead of selecting careful positions at the sides, and after pelting in stones and endeavouring to add to the comfort of their friend inside by "smoking him out," he did condescend to show himself, and some very ugly teeth With a hop, step, and a jump, and a " Hoo, hoo, he was in the centre of the heaters at almost one bound, and, vaulting from back to back biting each in succession, giving side wipes with his wide sprawling paws, he avenged the death of his comrades by the infliction of awful wounds. The youthful Nimrod fired once or twice, but though he distinctly heard the "thud" and felt sure that daylight had been let in through the spotted hide of the now infuriated brute, the panther did not yield, but fastening on one of the beaters, rolled with him, fixing his teeth firmly in the man's shoulders. It was an exciting moment. The beater had drawn his sword and was freeing his right arm to deal the "drawing cut." The sportsman had levelled his rifle and was over anxious and excited in his aim: he fired, missed the panther, and hit the beater on the point of the elbow. The sword fell from the man's hand, and the man from the panther's The animal turned round on his foe, who held up his unloaded rifle in his hand, but was arrested in his charge by a dooly-wallah, whom he wounded. Overmatched by the agility of the fierce quadruped, a general and precipitate bolt alone remained for safety, and in the rush of flight the vanquished shikaree fell over a precipice and severely hurt himself, so much so as to have passed from the jaws of the panther to the care of the Medico. In my evening walk I met one or two of the men who were returning, much cut and bleeding. A dooly was sent out to bring in the severely wounded beaters, who were sent to hospital. It is strange how close to.camp these panthers come; this affair occurred only three or four miles off, if so much. As might be expected, the excitement in camp was at the highest pitch. The panther had fought a royal tiger's battle, and had taught a lesson to those who say "it is only a panther." These miniature tigers are even more dangerons than their giant species. Accordingly, a most distinguished party having secured the services of one to whom might be entrusted the delicate mission of just pulling the panther's whiskers, they proceeded to the spot. But such "diplomatic overtures" were not necessary. They found the panther "stretched on the yellow clay," and all returned to camp most fairly sold. The skin was sent into camp to the slayer, who had a good laugh in his sleeve at the expense of those who so kindly acted as "retrievers" and brought in his lost game .--Times of India.

THE MISSING PILOT BOATS,-We (Bombay Gazette) are given to understand that two of the missing Lascars belonging to one of the two pilot boats which have been lost, were, on Thursday, July 25, picked up alive on the coast near Alibaugh. The dead bodies of Captain Timmins (of the ship Atilla), Mr. Pilot Anderson, and the Parsee Dubash, were also picked up yesterday, and those of the Tindal and one of the Kullasses he day before. Much credit is due to Mr. Corke. who, happening to be at the village of Mandwa, rendered every assistance in his power to the wrecked officers and men of the boats. It appears that on the evening of Wednesday he met Mr.

informed by him that he was driven on shore the previous evening, but that no lives were lost. Mr. Ingle then said that a Lascar belonging to another pilot boat had reported to him that the boat No. 2. with Captain Timmins, Mr. Anderson, a Parsee Dubash, the Tindal, and eight Lascars, had been swamped. Mr. Corke then immediately proceeded in search of the boats reported to have been lost. He found boat No. 4 full of water; he ordered her stores to be taken out, and going further he found boat No. 3 at the village of Kyiam, near the Kenery Islands. A Lascar belonging to the last-named boat informed him that Mr. Anderson (senior) and Mr. Sculthorpe were in the village quite exhausted. A number of fishermen were then engaged to take the boats to the village, but the boats went to pieces before the work was accomplished. On Thursday Mr. Corke brought Messrs. Anderson and Sculthorpe and some of the crew to Bombay.

LIEUTENANT GARDINER, of H.M.'s steamer Ajdaha, has been appointed inspector of the Bombay Steam Navigation Company's mail steamers at that port, vice Lieutenant Brooman, relieved.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. F. MARRIOTT has been confirmed in the office of secretary to Government in the military, marine, and ecclesiastical departments, in which he has been acting for some time past. Consequent on this, Lieutenant-colonel W. R. Dickinson has been appointed to be auditor of public works accounts, and Captain C. J. Merriman to be executive engineer, Belgaum and Kolapoor.

BARODA.-From Baroda a correspondent writes us that the Rajah of Gwaikwar lately ordered his Dewan to pay his troops, who were three months in arrear; but the Dewan having asserted a difficulty in raising the money for the purpose, which the Rajah found did not really exist, he was forthwith sent to prison. On the way the troops attacked and broke in pieces his palanquin, and wounded himself, creating for the time a great commotion, but without any serious results.

Bassein, July 30 .- I am happy to inform your eaders that great progress has been made at the north and south channels of Bassein Creek with the railway. At the north channel over seven hundred feet of staging are created and twelve screw piles in position, and this at a depth of twenty-three feet at low water. The ordinary rise of tide at high water is from sixteen to eighteen feet, which makes over sixty feet from the foundation to the level of the roadway of the bridge. The late trains and spring tides have to a considerable extent retarded the progress of the works at both viaducts. The average depth of water at low tide is twenty-three feet, with a current at ebb and flood tides running at a rate of five to seven knots per hour. There are of materials on the works over ten thousand tons of piles, bridge material, &c. At the "karkhanas" are erected carpenters' shops, smithies, sawing pits, fitting and other sheds, together with bungalows for European and native tradesmen. A commencement has also been made on Panjoo Island, and from the rapid progress already made under the local assistant engineer, Mr. C. Rodham, it is fully expected that the north channel bridge will be open by January next, the first girder of which was placed in position on Tuesday last. This bridge will consist of thirty-four spans, and will be 2,040 feet in length; that on the south channel between Panjoo Island and Bhinder will be of still more gigantic dimensions, viz., sixty-four spans, or 4,000 feet across.

THE BHATS AND THE INCOME-TAX .- A sad ccurrence took place on the 22nd July at Nuriad of the Kaira Collectorate. It appears by what we read in the Rast Goftar, a Bombay Goozratee paper, that there is a class of persons called "Bhats" in Guzerat, who are village bards, and earn their livelihood by begging and singing; and they profess, moreover, to act as astrologers and family priests. These Bhats have enjoyed from the remotest antiquity exemption from tax, imperial and local; and when they are called upon to contribute Income-tax with the rest of the subjects of British India, they fancy their rights and privileges are encroached upon, and think them-Ingle, pilot, at the village of Mandwa, and was selves grievously wronged. In pursuance of the provisions of the Income tax, notices were served upon those whom the assessor of the district considered liable to the tax. The Bhats submitted several petitions to the officers employed to carry out the Income-tax Act, urging that they and their forefathers from time immemorial have never paid any tax of the sort, and praying that they might be exempted from the operation of the Act. But, apparently, their request was never attended to. The assessor made out an assessment list against those who were liable to the tax, and excused others that were not liable. The list was submitted to the special officer, who, it is alleged, without making any inquiry, assessed most of the Bhats in sums varying from four to six rupees each per annum, making the total assessments about four hundred and fifty rupees. Accordingly, payment of the tax was demanded in the usual manner, but the Bhats declined to pay. On this it was deemed proper to enforce payment by the assistance of the superintendent of police and his mounted corps. The Bhats became exasperated, and imagined it would be better to sacrifice their lives than to submit to what they thought to be a violation of their privileges and their rights. But before they finally betook themselves to extreme measures, they again begged of the superintendent of police to preserve inviolate their privilege of exemption from taxation, which they averred was their birthright; but seeing that they thus appeared to be yielding, Captain Nuttal threatened them more, and succeeded in disarming a few of the Bhats, who went to oppose the levy with knives in their hands. The rest of them, about two thousand in number, then commenced stabbing themselves, some in their faces, some in their chests, others in their legs, &c. cast imprecations on the officers employed in the collection of the Income-tax, and bespattered them with their "innocent blood." Some of these misguided men were apprehended on the spot, when their wives and other female members of their families came out and cut their persons in several places, so as to inspire pity into the minds of the authorities; but in these desperate attempts a few men and women lost their lives, and several were grievously injured. After a short while the tumult was put down; but up to the latest advices from the village it appeared that great consternation and confusion prevailed. Bombay Gazette.

RAMPARTS OF BOMBAY.-A memorial to the Governor in Council for the abolition of the ramparts of the Fort of Bombay, and the dedication of the space thus obtained to the use of the public, is now in course of circulation. It has already been signed by one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, and is equally approved of, we understand, by the other, though the Chief Justice, for very good reasons, declines to mix himself up with discussions of this sort, also by most of the leading members of the non-official class.

KIRKEE .- The Government of India have sanctioned an estimated expenditure of Rs. 115,490 on the construction of five ranges of married meu's quarters, without houses for the artillery at Kirkee.

EXPORTS (Bombay, August 12).—Cotton is very firm, the late favourable advices from Europe having increased the demand and raised the prices. Wool continues out of stock; a small lot of one sort lately arrived from the North West is available at the market. Oilseeds.—More inquiries are making for both Linseed and Rapeseed at higher rates, in consequence of better advices from Europe; stocks, however, are very scauty, and much of the business is therefore done for future delivery. Sesame quite scarce, and prices nominal. Other seeds continue out of stock. Hemp dull, and lower in value.

Pepper.—Dull. and little doing. Saltpetre in slight inquiry, and held at cheaper rates. Madder Root.—Not to be had at market, and prices nominal. Ivory is the same as in our last, and still being shipped by natives. Guns are as previously quoted. Opium.—A fair business has been done in this article during the last fortnight with gradually advancing prices.

IMFORTS (Bombay, August 12). Cotton Piece Goods.—The demand for Piece Goods has very much slackened, and holders are unable to operate except at a concession of value. Grey Shirtings have changed hands to a moderate extent at a reduction of one to two annas per piece. Grey Louveloths are neglected. Grey Domestics in dull inquiry at lower rates. Drills are unal ered. Grey T Cloths in moderate request at our quotations. Grey Mad-pollams gunet and unaltered. Grey Mulls continue neglected. Grey Jaconets and Printers dull. Blesched Goods still continue in an unsatisfactory position; some unimportant sales are reported. Coloured Goods remain difficult of sale, even at a concession of value. Turkey Red Goods without any change of importance; few inquiries are making at very reduced rates. Farus.—The market for Cotton Yaus is dul and quiet, and we have not heard of any sales, the dealers offering much lower rates. Coloured and Turkey Red Yarns, however, are steady in inquiry at our quotations. Matals.—Copper is less inquirec for, and the prices have receded a little Iron is steady; English Bars have changed hands at slightly lower rates; Swedish Bars are in better demand and slightly firmer in price; in other kinds of Iron there is little or nothing doing. Steel without change and nothing doing. Lead in linuited request. Spelter, Quick-silver, and Tin Plates quiet and unaltered.

THE STRAITS.

SARAWAK .- By the arrival of the Sarawak steamer Rainbow we have received information of Sir James Brooke's proceedings at Muka, and we are glad to be able to inform our readers that the mischief perpetrated last year at that place by the Hon. Mr. Edwardes has been thoroughly rectified, and that the sinister predictions of the Labuan authorities have proved fallacious. The Sarawak flotilla arrived off the Muka river on the 20th June, and Pangeran Dipah and Seriff Masa-hore immediately surrendered. The latter had held a final council the evening before, with his chief adherents, Talip and Sawing (the murderers of Messrs. Fox and Steele), who forthwith made their escape up country, and have not since been heard of. The people were starved and worn out, and the majority were looking to the arrival of the Sarawak forces as the means of delivering them from the very wretched life they had been leading for a long time past. Some of the more desperate men, headed by Pangeran Kahar, talked loudly of resistance, but pride yielded to necessity, and they accepted the terms offered—life and property at a distance. A few days afterwards the Sarawak forces took possession of the fort, which will be held until matters are finally adjusted between the Sultan of Brunei, and the Rajah of Sarawak, respecting the future government of that part of the country. Sir James Brooke will remain for the present at Muka, to introduce order and good government, a task that will be by no means an easy one, if we may judge from the description given in a letter from the scene : "This place is an Augean stable of slavery and corruption, and some river or other of sweet waters must be turned through As soon as order was re-established the people began collecting sago, and there was every prospect of a brisk and increasing trade. At Sarawak, on receipt of the news of the bloodless victory, a salute was fired; within forty-eight hours one prahu had cleared for Muka, and numbers were preparing to follow. The greatest activity prevailed, so that in a short time it is to be hoped the past may be, in a manner, retrieved, and the prosperity of the coasting trade ensured. Pangeran Dipah has returned to Brunei, and Seriff Masahore, whose life was spared, though he little deserved it, deserted by his followers, who turned upon him, was glad to leave Muka with his women and property, and he is now on his way here on board the Albatross, free to do as he pleases, except returning to the coast of Borneo, from which he is henceforth banished .- Singapore Free Fress.

CHINA PRIZE-MONEY .- The Gazette contains notice that preparations are being made for the distribution of the amount awarded for the destruction of pirates in the China Seas on Feb. 25, 1858, by H.M.S. Algerine and two boats of H.M.S. Calcutta. Persons having claims are requested to transmit them to the proper authorities without delay.
